ROYAL THEATRE

"THE WILD ASS SKIN"

This picture is taken from Balzac's famous story and is a masterpiece in photography and artistic acting. It is the story of the discouraged artist who intends suicide, but who finds he can be rich and happy, but only for a time, by purchasing the "Wild Ass Skin." The skin shrinks day by day as his pleasures increase, until the end, when the skin disappears, as well as the artist. It is one of Pathe's latest and best pictures.

THE LITTLE ORPHAN, OR ALL ROADS LEAD TO ROME

A most beautifully told story of the love of a man who has lost both wife and only child, for a poor waif of an orphan who thinks "all roads lead to Rome," and is met by him on the road to Rome. It is a lovely picture for children as well as parents.

MID-WINTER SPORTS

A very interesting scenic picture taken in the extreme north of Michigan showing the exciting winter sports enjoyed there, which compare favourably with our good Canadian Winter Sports.

Mr. Loftus will sing one of the most popular up-to-date songs, "Carrie Marry Harry." Don't miss it; it's a good one.

SPECIAL NOTICE — The improvements at The Royal are now well advanced and our patrons need not fear overcrowding, as we will have lots of room for everyone.

FELL FROM THE TRAIN

Calumet, Mich., Man on Way to North Bay Is Jolted From Car Platform While Carrying Baby, and Narrowly Escapes Death — Says Occupants of House Would Not Let Him In—Baby Hurt.

North Bay, Ont., Sept. 15.—A peculiar accident happened near Beaucage station on the Indian reserve, nine miles west of North Bay, on the C.P.R.

A man named Mitchell, with his wife and family, from Calumet, Mich., were passengers on the 800 express, en route to England, and while the train was in motion, Mitchell endeavored to pass from one car to another with his three-year-old son in his arms.

He states that he lost his balance and fell from the swiftly-moving train, striking heavily on the ground, but fortunately rolling clear of the train. When he came to his senses he saw lights in a house nearby, and picking up his child asked for admission, which was refused.

This has not been corroborated, as the houses are few in this vicinity and the sectionmen disclaim any knowledge of the occurrence.

However, Mitchell states he wandered around trying vainly to secure a place of refuge, finally crawling into a box car, where he spent the night with his child as best he could, walking to North Bay in the morning, where he was given medical attention with his child, which was found to be suffering from fractured thigh-bone, and was placed in the hospital. Mitchell's injuries were confined to bruises and are not serious. Mrs. Mitchell continued her journey to Montreal, and was in a terrible state of anxiety, not knowing what had happened. She was brought back to North Bay, and the journey to England has been postponed.

New Hydro Secretary.

Toronto, Sept. 15.—To provide for the increasing amount of work entailed by the construction of the hydro-electric transmission line, it has been necessary to appoint a secretary with enlarged powers to relieve the chairman, Hon. Adam Beck.

Sir James Whitney claims to have found the right man in W. W. Pope of the Grand Trunk legal department at Montreal. As secretary, Mr. Pope will bring to the service of the commission a wealth of experience in matters pertaining to such an undertaking. He first became connected with the Grand Trunk Railway at Bellwith, some 20 years ago, and was later transferred to Montreal to assist W. H. Biggar, K.C., general counsel.

C. E. Settell, who has been acting secretary of the commission since its inception, will still be retained as assistant secretary.

Strike May End Soon.

Montreal, Sept. 15.—Information has leaked out in a wire from the United States to the effect that the U.M.W. of America, in charge of affairs at Glace Bay, have advised their grand officers at Indianapolis that the strikers there are poor fighters, that they appear to think that the U.M.W. has untold wealth to spend on them and that they advise them if any kind of settlement could be obtained, it would be the best thing to do at the present time, in their opinion.

In a special report to one of the grand officers, that officials advised that the strikers are clamoring for clothes and provisions, and that the American supporters keep putting them off.

Lawyer Was In the House.

Montreal, Sept. 15.—The crown sprang a surprise on the defence yesterday in the trial of John Dillon for the murder of Constable Shea.

For the first time, it came out that Dillon's lawyer at the time was in the house the evening of the shooting.

In fact, Hugh Semple swore yesterday that he was with Dillon when the police arrived, and that he was in the other room when the accused fired and said he had shot a man.

"My God, what have you done," said the witness, and Dillon asked him to go into another room, but he ran from the house by the back way instead.

Tigress Amuck In City.

Marseilles, Sept. 15.—A big Royal Bengal tigress escaped from her cage yesterday on board a vessel that was to convey the animal to Oran, Algeria, and ran abroad in the city with policemen and soldiers armed with guns and revolvers in pursuit. It was recaptured.

THEY WANT BEST TRAINS

Head of Manufacturers Delivers His Annual Address at Hamilton Convention—Freighting of Produce Is Now the Greatest Problem Confronting the People of Canada—Trade Guide Needed.

Hamilton, Sept. 15.—The point most elaborated yesterday in President Hobson's address at the opening of the annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, was the necessity of the fullest and fastest transportation for Canada in her competition with the United States.

He considered it the biggest problem before the Canadian public.

The farmers' money kept the wheels of commerce and industry in motion. But they wanted to keep him in profit by his geographical advantages so that he could reach the great consuming markets by the shortest and cheapest route.

The superiority of the Hudson Bay and the St. Lawrence to the Mississippi route were pointed out. The St. Lawrence route, placed Canada in a position of supreme advantage. American interests were steadily at work in an almost superhuman effort to negative this advantages by the construction of artificial water ways, for which $119,000,000 has been voted by New York State. The point of peculiar significance to Canadians was the overwhelming advantage which would be Canada's if the Welland and St. Lawrence Canals were deepened uniformly to 24 feet, or if 400 miles were cut off the route by the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal, providing a straight line waterway, stretching half-way across the continent, far removed from the attack of foreign foes, and opening up a territory of untold wealth in minerals and timber.

Noting the revival in business, fault was found with the anti-dumping regulations. It was recognized that manufacturers would resort to "ways, subtle and devious, whereby these regulations can be evaded," when their interests required, and it was urged that "strong representations to the Government," and the incoming tariff committee.

A lengthy reference to the labor situation included a consideration of the present coal strike. Owing to favorable business conditions, there had been a conspicuous absence of labor troubles. Employers, he believed, would not take advantage of such a situation to reduce wages.

"I believe I voice the attitude of every manufacturer here present when I say that in times of business adversity, we exhaust every other means of economy before attempting to economize on productive labor. But depressions such as we have just passed through might well be regarded as blessings in disguise, if only they would cause the artisan to realize that the manufacturer is, after all, his friend and his ally, rather than his natural prey, as the agitator would have him believed," he said.

During 1908, disputes with 36,232 employes involved a computed loss of time of 766,194 working days, which at $1.35 a day, meant a loss to the working population of $1,000,000. Canada was too young and too badly in need of money and labor to bear such burden.

The 13th and 91st regiment last evening tendered a reception at the Armories to the delegates to the convention of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and Mayor McLaren gave them an address of welcome.

At yesterday afternoon's session, the secretary, G. M. Murray, spoke of the future needs of the organization. He said the guide published by the association should contain the names of every reliable manufacturing firm. A special committee was named to devise a scheme to increase the membership of the association. The executive council was given permission to hold one of its sessions in Ottawa. The treasurer, George Booth, reported that the surplus assets had been reduced from $21,945 to $16,080. Receipts amounted to $52,250, an increase over last year of $3,423. The membership amounted to 2,368.

Jews to Oppose Bourassa.

Montreal, Sept. 15.—The campaign over the board of control for the city has got into the political stage. At a meeting in the Jewish quarter the speakers attacked Bourassa who was intending to run for alderman in St. Lawrence Ward. He was told that if he ran he would be defeated by the Jews who would not give him a vote after his utterances in the House at Quebec last session.

There are 25,000 Jews in this ward.

Accident at Interment.

Brockville, Sept. 15.—During the burial of the late Milton A. Marshard, as the casket was being lowered into the grave a tombstone gave way under the pressure of spectators leaning against it. A large urn on the top of it struck John McKim a glancing blow on the head, rendering him unconscious. The monument and several spectators were almost precipitated into the grave with the corpse.

Windsor Wants Building.

Windsor, Sept. 15.—The City Council has committed itself to the support of a movement designed to encourage building by giving the assessment commissioner greater latitude in assessing land values and lessening taxation on improvements. The council will send a petition to the Ontario Government asking for the required change.

MAKES A STATEMENT

Associated Press Reporters Reach Battle Harbor—Correspondents Try to Commandeer a French Warship to Take Them North—Commander Peary Will Not Reach Sydney For Some Days Yet.

Sydney, C.B., Sept. 15.—Commander Peary will not be in Sydney on Wednesday, as he planned. For a day or two it has been thought that the Roosevelt would be unable to sail from Battle Harbor as soon as expected. No definite word had been received from the explorer for several days, but late last night Mrs. Peary received a wireless from her husband stating that he had been detained and would be unable to get to Sydney for several days yet.

While Sydney had planned to turn out in force to-day to greet the explorer, the delay in his arrival will only serve to give the citizens a little more time to prepare for his reception.

No word has been received from some forty odd newspaper correspondents who are now ploughing the Gulf of St. Lawrence on board the cable steamer Tyrian searching for Peary. As the Tyrian cannot steam very much faster than the Roosevelt, even if they do meet with him it is unlikely that they will get back to Sydney at all ahead of him, and the heavy seas running on the coast today are not conducive to comfort on a cable steamer.

Possibly fearing that some of the enterprising correspondents might take his ship away from him and put up in Battle Harbor in her, Commander Durand of the French cruiser Isly put to sea last night. When the Associated Press got away to Battle Harbor in the tug D. H. Thomas, some correspondents of other newsgathering associations went aboard the Isly and asked the commander to take them to Labrador.

He protested that this was impossible, whereupon they wired the French Ambassador at Washington that representatives of two hundred and sixty American newspapers asked him to get the Isly for them, and would he please cable to the French Ministry of Marine for her.

M. Jusserand complied with this request, but the Ministry of Marine did not, and the correspondents had to direct their energies elsewhere.

Peary Makes Statement.

Battle Harbor, Labrador, Sept. 15. (via wireless telegraphy to Cape Ray, Nfld.)—"I am the only white man who has ever reached the North Pole, and I am prepared to prove it." This statement was made to the representative of the Associated Press by Commander Robert E. Peary, in reply to a question on the Peary-Cook controversy.

The Associated Press tug Douglas Thomas, after a stormy passage up the west coast of Newfoundland and through the Straits of Belle Isle, from Sydney, C.B., arrived at this lonely whaling and mission settlement at noon on Monday. A squall of rain was blowing over the harbor as the Thomas steamed in, but with glasses it was able to make out the mast and hull of the Arctic steamer Roosevelt moored in the inner bay.

The Arctic steamer looked little the worse for her second trip to the polar regions. Along the rail, as the Thomas approached, were gathered the members of her famous crew, among them the redoubtable Captain Robt. Bartlett, who was at once recognized.

Capt. Bartlett invited the Thomas to lay alongside and the correspondent to come on board without delay. The correspondent clambered over the weather-beaten bulwarks, and proceeded direct to the cabin to meet Commander Peary, the man who has stood upon the apex of the surface of the world.

The commander's greeting was most cordial. "This is a new record in newspaper enterprise," he said, "and I appreciate the compliment."

Irishman Who Prevented Tragedy.

Bremerton, Wash., Sept. 15.—Capt. Thomas Phelan of Kansas City, soldier of fortune, is dead, aged 76.

While visiting Ireland years ago, Phelan learned of a plot to blow up the British ship Queen and prevented the execution of the plan.

Phelan was later requested to call at the office of O'Donovan Rossa, editor of The Irishman of New York, and was stabbed thirteen times and his arm was broken.

Miners Die From Thirst.

Rhyolite, Nevada, Sept. 15.—The bodies of Emery Bodge and Tom Flanz, miners, who perished of thirst while attempting to cross Death Valley, were found four miles west of Skiddoo, Cal., by members of the searching party scouring the desert for a brother of President Eldridge of the National Sewing Machine Co., who has been lost for three weeks.

Murdered by Burglars.

Nanaimo, B.C., Sept. 15.—Burglars broke into the residence of William Rudd early yesterday morning, bound and gagged Mrs. Rudd and so seriously wounded her husband that he died in a short time.

The murderers secured $90 and escaped.

Overwhelmed by Tidal Wave.

Mexico City, Mex., Sept. 15.—The port of Mulege, on the east coast of Lower California, was overwhelmed by a tidal wave Sept. 4. Mulege has a population of 1,200 persons. There were a number of fatalities.

Defence Problem Crazed Him.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 15.—J. Muir Wilson, former Conservative member in the British Parliament for the Attercliff division of Sheffield, who became suddenly insane Monday morning, will be conveyed east by special car in care of Major Harris, his agent, and two guards, en route to England.

Wilson is a very wealthy man. He differed with his party on the tariff question and though defeated in the general election, polled a heavy vote. When a bye-election came along, his party nominated another. Wilson used his influence for the election of the Socialist candidate.

His health broke down and he was taking a trip around the world. The excitement over imperial defence seemed to affect him greatly.

He had but recently returned from the Yukon, and on the way had lost all his trunks, save one, containing the court dress in which he so startled hotel guests. He is now in a hospital here.

The Allans Reorganization.

London, Sept. 15.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Inquiries in the best-informed shipping circles in Liverpool leave no doubt that the Allan Line reorganization foreshadows an important regrouping in the Canadian trade. Formal union with the G.T.P. will not take place immediately. But within two years, when the Allan agreement with the Canadian Pacific for joint mail service will have expired and the G.T.P. has been completed to the Pacific, there will, it is stated, be closer relations, possibly amounting to complete fusion, between the Allan Line and the G.T.P.

NON-POISONOUS

Recommended by
Ontario Agricultural College
Guelph, Ontario

They report Bug Death has made an excellent record in each of the past two years. The potatoes on which the Bug Death was applied were more vigorous in growth and greener in appearance throughout each of the seasons than those on which other applications were made.

DO YOU WANT BETTER CROPS?

Of course you do. Well, the way is clear. Use Bug Death and you'll not only have a heavier crop, but larger potatoes of better quality.

Write or call and we'll tell you some more good things of this celebrated Bug Killer and Fertilizer, both in one.

THE Princess Virginia

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON,
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor," "Rosemary In Search of a Father," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

"Well, you see, the empress of Rhaetia must be a Protestant, and there aren't many eligible Protestant girls who would be acceptable to the Rhaetians—girls who would be popular with the people. Oh, I have finished about that! You need not look so desperate. Besides, Dal explains that Leopold is a young man who dominates all around him. He wishes to take for his bride a girl who could not by any possibility herself be heiress to a throne. Dal fancies that his desire is to mold his wife and therefore to take a girl without too many important and importunate relatives, for he is not one who would dream of adding to his greatness by using the wealth or position of a woman. He has all he needs or wants of that sort. And then, Dal reminds me, Leopold is very partial to England, which helped Rhaetia passively in the time of her trouble eight years ago. The fact that you have lived in England and had an English education would be favorably regarded both by Leopold and his chancellor. And, though I've never allowed you to have a photograph taken since you were a child (I hate seeing young girls' faces in the newspapers and magazines; even though they are royal their features need not be public property) and you have lived here in such seclusion that you've been little seen, still the rumor has reached Rhaetia that you are—good to look at. Leopold has been heard to say that, whatever else the future empress of Rhaetia may be, he won't give his people an ugly woman to reign over them. And so altogether"—

"And so altogether, my references being satisfactory, at a pinch I might do for the place," cut in Virginia, with the hot, impatient rebellion of her youth. "Oh, mother, you think me mad or a fool, I know, and perhaps I am mad, yet not mad enough not to see that it would be a great thing, a wonderful thing, to be asked in marriage by the one man in my world if—ah, that great 'if'—he had only seen and fallen in love with me. It might have happened, you know. As you say, I'm not ugly, and I can be rather pleasant if I choose—so I believe. If he had only come to this land to see what I was like, as royal men did in the dear old fairy stories, and then had asked me to be his wife, why, I should have been conceited enough to think it was because he loved me even more than because of other things. Then I should have been happy—yes, dear, I'll confess it to you now—almost happy enough to die of the great joy and triumph of it. But now I'm not happy. I will marry Leopold or I'll marry no man, but I swear to you I won't be married to Leopold in Count von Breitstein's hateful old, cold, cut and dried way."

"Then for once in his big, grand, obstinate life he'll have to learn that there's one insignificant girl who won't play Griselda even for the sake of being his empress."

The girl proclaimed this resolve, rising to her feet, with her head high and a look in her gray eyes which told the grand duchess that it would be hopeless for her to argue down the resolution. At first it was a proud look and a sad look, but suddenly a beam of light flashed into it and began to sparkle and twinkle. Virginia smiled and showed her dimples. Her color came and went. In a moment she was a different girl, and her mother, bewildered, fearful still, dared to hope something from the change.

"How odd you look!" she exclaimed. "You've thought of something. You are happy. You have the air of—of having found some plan."

"It found me, I think," the girl answered, laughing, "all suddenly, just in a flash. That's the way it must be with inspirations. This is one—I know it. It's all in the air, floating round me. But I shall grasp it soon."

She came close to her mother, still smiling, and knelt down in the grass at her feet, looking up with radiance in her eyes.

Luckily there was no one save the Dresden china lady and the birds and flowers to see how a young princess threw her mantle of dignity away, for the two did not keep royal state and a royal retinue in the quaint old house at Hampton Court, and the big elm which Virginia loved kindly hid the mother and daughter from intrusive eyes.

"You do love me, don't you, dearest?" cooed the princess softly as a dove.

"You know I do, my child, though I don't pretend to understand you," sighed the grand duchess, well aware that she was about to be coaxed into some scheme, feeling that she would yield and praying Providence that the yielding might not lead her into tribulation.

"People grow dull if we understand them too well," said Virginia. "It's like solving a puzzle—there's no more fun in it when it's finished. But you wish me to be happy, darling?"

"More than I wish for anything else, excepting, of course, dear Dal's"—

"Dal is a man and can take care of himself. I must do the best I can—poor me! And there's something I want so much, so much it would be heaven on earth, all my own, if I could win it—Leopold's love, quite for myself, as a girl, not as a 'suitable Protestant princess.' For a few horrid minutes I thought it was too late to hope for that and I must give him up, because I never could be sure if I accepted him without his love and he said it had come afterward; that it was really, really true. Anyway, it could never be the same, and I was miserable over what might have been. Then suddenly I saw how it still might be. I almost think I may be able to win his love if you'll promise to help me, dear."

"Of course I will," said the grand duchess, carried out of her pretty little conventional self into unwonted impulsiveness by the warmth of kisses soft and sweet as the roses on Virginia's bosom.

"That is, I will if I can. But I don't at all see what I can do."

"I see. And what I want you to do is to please, please see with my eyes."

"They're very bright ones," smiled her mother.

Princess Virginia clasped the grand duchess round the waist so tightly that it hurt. Then she laughed, a loud, half frightened, excited laugh. "Dearest, something perfectly wonderful is going to happen to you and me," she said—"the most wonderful thing that ever has happened. We are going to have a—great—adventure. And what the end of it will be—I don't know."

CHAPTER TWO

TWILIGHT fell late in the tiny Rhaetian village of Allehelligen. So high on the mountain side were perched the simple inn and the group of brown chalets clustering round the big church, with its bulbous oriental spire, that they caught the last red rays of sunset and held them flashing on burnished copper roof plates and jeweling small, bright window panes long after the green valley below was curtained with shadow.

One September evening two dusty traveling carriages toiled up the steep, winding road that led to the highest hamlet of the Rhaetian Alps, and a girl walking beside the foremost driver (minded, as he was, to save the jaded horses) looked up to see Allehelligen glittering like a necklet of gems on the brown throat of the mountain. Each window was a great, separate ruby set in gold; the copper bulb that crowned the church steeple was a burning carbuncle, while above the flashing band of gorgeous color the mountain reared its head, facing westward, its steadfast features carved in stone, the brow snow capped and rosy where the sun touched it, blue where the shadows lay.

The driver assured the young English lady, whom he much admired for her pluck as well as beauty, that she had far better return to the carriage; that indeed she need not have left it. Her extra weight would be but as that of a feather to the horses, which were used to carrying far heavier loads than that of today up the steep mountain road to Allehelligen in the "high" season of July and August, when many tourists from all countries came to rest for a night and see the wonderful view. He even grew voluble in his persuasions, but the girl still smilingly insisted that she liked walking, and the brown faced fellow with the soft green hat and curly cock feather admired her the more for her firmness and endurance.

She was plainly dressed in gray, which did not show the dust, and, though her skirt and short jacket were well made and her neat little hat jaunty and becoming—almost dangerously becoming—she was not half as grand in appearance as some of the ladies who drove up with him in July and August. Still, the man said to himself, there was an air about her—no; he could not describe it even to himself—but it meant distinction. And then, as she was English, it was as pleasing as it was remarkable that she could speak Rhaetian so prettily. She had learned it, she said, when he respectfully ventured a question, because since she was a child she had taken an interest in Rhaetian history and literature. And this seemed strange to him—that so dainty a lady should have learned such a language for pleasure, because the people of most countries found it excessively difficult—as difficult as Hungarian and just enough like German to make it even more difficult perhaps. But this English girl said she had picked it up easily, and the young man's heart warmed to her when she praised Rhaetian music and Rhaetian poetry.

This was the last touch. This won him wholly, and without stopping further to analyse or account for his admiration the driver of the first carriage found himself bestowing confidences upon his gracious companion as they slowly tramped up the winding road, the reins looped over his arm.

He told her of his life—how he had not always lived down there in the valley and driven tourists for a living.

A girl walking beside the foremost driver.

Before he fell in love and married a valley girl and had a young family to rear his house had been aloft in Allehelligen. He was born on the mountain side. His mother still lived in the village. It was she who kept the inn—ach, but a good woman and a cook to the king's taste, or, rather, the emperor's taste, if it was her own son who said it!

He was glad that the English ladies would be staying with her for a few days at this season. She would make them comfortable, more comfortable than would be possible at a crowded time, and then, besides, after the season was over and the strangers had been frightened away by the first flurry of snow, the poor mother grew lonely and tired of idleness. Oh, yes, she stayed the winter through. It was home to her. There were not many neighbors then, it was true, yet she would not be happy to go away. Mountain folk never really learned to love the valleys.

What! The ladies had not written to the inn in advance? Ah, well, that would not matter at this season. There would be rooms and to spare. The ladies could take their choice, and the mother would have a pleasant surprise. Glad he was that he chanced to be the one to bring it.

Those who knew Frau Yorvan know that her larder was never empty of good things and that her linen was aired and scented with the dried lavender blossoms gathered down below. Indeed, she had need to be ever in readiness for distinguished guests, because sometimes— But the eloquent tongue of Alois Yorvan was suddenly silent, like the clapper of a church bell which the ringers have ceased to pull, and his sunburnt face grew sheepish.

"Because sometimes?" echoed the girl in her pretty Rhaetian. "What happens sometimes that your mother must ever be expecting?"

"Oh," the man stammered, a little foolishly, "I was but going to say that she has sometimes to entertain people of the high nobility of different nations. Allehelligen, though small, is rather celebrated, you know."

"Has your emperor been here?" asked the young lady.

"It may be," answered Alois jauntily; "it may be. Our emperor has been to most places."

Slowly they climbed on, the two carriages, containing the English girl's mother, a middle aged companion, a French maid and a reasonable supply of luggage, toiling up behind, the harness jingling with a faint sound, as of fairy bells.

Then at last they came to the inn, a quaint house, half of stone, half of rich brown shingles, a huge picture crowded with saints of special importance to Alleheiligen painted in once crude, now faded, colors on a swinging sign. A characteristic yodeling cry from Alois sent forth before the highest turn of the road was reached brought an apple cheeked and white capped old woman to the door. Then it was the youngest of the travelers who asked, with a pleasant greeting in Rhaetian, for the best suit of rooms which Frau Yorvan could give.

But, to the girl's astonishment, the landlady showed none of the delight her son had predicted. Surprised she certainly was, even startled and certainly embarrassed. For an instant she seemed to hesitate before replying; then her emotion was partly explained by her words. Unfortunately her best rooms were engaged—four of the bedrooms with the choicest view and the one private sitting room the inn possessed. But if the ladies would put up with the second best she would gladly accommodate them. Was it but for the night? Oh, for several nights! (Again the apple face looked dubious.) Well, if the ladies would graciously enter and choose from what she had to offer she would be honored.

They did enter and presently wrote their names as Lady Mowbray, Miss Mowbray, Miss Manchester and maid. An hour later when the newcomers—mother, daughter and dame de compagnie—sat down to a hot supper in a bedchamber hastily but skillfully transformed into a private dining room the youngest of the three remarked to Frau Yorvan upon the peaceful stillness of her house.

"One would think there wasn't a soul about the place except ourselves," said she, "yet you've told us you have other guests."

"The gentlemen who are stopping here are away all day long in the mountains," explained Frau Yorvan. "It is now the time for chamois hunting, and it is for that and also the climbing of a strange group of rocks called the Bunch of Needles, only to be done by great experts, that they come to me."

"They are out late this evening. Aren't you beginning to be a little anxious about them if they go to such dangerous places?"

"Oh, tonight, gracious fraulein, they will not return at all," said the landlady, warming impulsively to the subject. "They often stop at a kind of hut they have near the top of the mountain to begin some climb they may wish to undertake very early

It is a great strength builder and is digested easily.

They are much closer to it there, you see, and it saves their wasting several hours on the way. They are constantly in the habit of stopping at the hut in fine weather. But they are very considerate. They always let me know their plans beforehand."

"If they're away so much I think it a little selfish in them to keep your one private sitting room when you might need it for others," remarked the girl.

"Oh, but gracious fraulein, you must not say that!" cried the old woman, looking as much shocked as if her young guest had broken one of the commandments.

The girl laughed. "Why not?" she inquired. "Are the gentlemen of such importance that they mustn't be criticised by strangers?"

Frau Yorvan was embarrassed. "They are excellent patrons of mine, gracious fraulein; that is all I meant," said she. "I cannot bear that unjust things should be thought of such—good gentlemen."

"I was only joking," the girl reassured her. "We are perfectly satisfied with this room, which you have made most comfortable. All I care for is that the famous walks in the neighborhood shall not be private. I may at least walk as much as I like and even climb a little, I and my friend, Miss Manchester, who is a daring mountaineer"—with this she threw a glance at the middle aged lady in black, who visibly started and grew wild eyed in response—"for I suppose that your guests have not engaged the whole Scheehorn for their own."

The landlady's hospitable smile returned. "No, gracious fraulein. You are free to wander as you will, but do not, I beg you, go too far or attempt any climbs of real difficulty, for they are not to be done without guides, and take care you do not stray into wild places where by making some movement or sound before you were seen by the hunters you might be mistaken for a chamois."

"Even our prowess is hardly likely to lead us into such peril as that," laughed the girl, who seemed much more friendly and inclined toward conversation than the two elders of the party. "But please wake us early tomorrow morning. My friend Miss Manchester and I would like to have breakfasted and be ready for a start by 8 o'clock at latest."

Again the placid features of the lady in black quivered, and, though she said nothing, Frau Yorvan pitied her. "Would you not wish in any case to have a guide?" she asked. "I could engage you an intelligent young man who"—

"Thank you, no," broke in the girl decidedly. "A guidebook is preferable to a guide for what we mean to do. We shan't attempt any places which the book says are unsafe for amateurs. But what an excellent engraving that is over the fireplace, with the chamois horns above it! Isn't that a portrait of your emperor when he was a boy?"

The landlady's eyes darted to the picture. "Ach, I had meant to carry it away," she muttered.

The girl's quick ears caught the words. "Why should you carry it away? Don't you love the emperor that you would put his face out of sight?"

"Not love Unser Leo?" cried the old woman, horrified. "Why, we worship him, gracious fraulein. We would die for him any day, all of us mountain people—and, yes, all Rhaetians, I believe. I could not let you go back to your own land with the idea that we do not love the noblest emperor country ever had. As for what I said about the portrait, I didn't know that I spoke aloud, I am so used to mumbling to myself since I began to grow deaf and old. But of course I wished it put away only because it is such a poor thing. It does Unser Leo no sort of justice. You—you would not recognize him from that picture if you were to see him now."

With this excuse Frau Yorvan hurried out to fetch another dish, which she said must be ready; to cool her hot face and to scold herself for her stupidity all the way downstairs.

She was gone some time, and the girl, who had no doubt unwittingly occasioned the old woman's uneasiness, took advantage of her absence to laugh—excited, happy laughter.

"Poor, transparent old dear! So pleased and proud of her great secret, which she thinks she's keeping so well!" she exclaimed. "I'm sure she doesn't dream that she's as easy to read as a book with big, big print. She's in a sad fright now lest we inconvenient foreigners should chance upon her grand gentlemen tomorrow, recognize one of them from the portrait and spoil his precious incognito."

"Then—you think that he is really here—in this out of the way aerie?" half whispered the grand duchess.

For a moment there was silence. Then said the grand duchess, with an air of resignation, "Well, I suppose we should be glad, since we have come to Rhaetia for the purpose of— Dear me! I can scarcely bring myself to say it."

"You may say it since our dear old Hamo of a Letitia knows all about it and is in with us," returned Virginia. "But—but I truly didn't expect to find him here. One knows he comes sometimes—it's been in the papers—but this time they had it that he'd gone to make a week's visit to poor old General von Borstok at the baths of Melina, and I thought before we went to Kronburg with all our pretty letters of introduction, as he was away from the palace there, it would be idyllic to use up the time with a visit to Alleheiligen. I don't want you and Letitia to think that I was just making catspaws of you both and forcing you without knowing to help me unearth him in his lair. Still, as he is here"—

"Perhaps he isn't," suggested the grand duchess. "I don't see that you have much ground for fancying so."

"Oh, general!" echoed Virginia scornfully. "It's instinct that I go upon, not ground—that woman's face when she saw foreign tourists at her door out of season when she had a right to think she was safe from invasion; her stammering about the best rooms being taken; her wish to get rid of us; her distress that she couldn't possibly do so without making matters worse; the way she talks of her 'four gentlemen;' her horror at my leze majesty; her confusion about the portraits; her wish to impress it upon us that Unser Leo is quite changed. Instinct ought to be ashamed if it couldn't play detective as far as that. But—of course we may not see him. If she can help it, we won't. He won't like being run to earth by tourists when he is amusing himself, and perhaps the trusty landlady will send the intelligent young guide whom I refused to warn him, so that if he chooses he can keep out of the way."

"I almost hope she may send," said the grand duchess. "I don't think Providence wills a meeting here. You have brought no pretty dresses. I should like him to see you first when you look your best, since to your mind so much depends upon his feelings in this matter."

And then Frau Yorvan came into the room with a souffle.

CHAPTER THREE

"Perfectly glorious!" amended her companion.

The elder lady pressed Baedeker to her bosom and sat down with some abruptness. "I shall have to stop here," she panted, "all the rest of my life and have my meals and my night things sent up. I'm very sorry, but I'm certain I shall never be able to go back."

"Don't be absurd, my poor dear. We're absolutely safe," said Virginia. "I may be a selfish wretch, but I wouldn't for the world have brought you into danger. You needn't go down yet. Let's explore a little farther. It's easier than turning back. Surely you can go on. Baedeker says you can. In ten minutes you'll be at the top of the col."

"You may as well tell me that I'll be in my grave. It amounts to the same thing," wailed Miss Manchester, who was, in the sphere of happier duties, Miss Letitia Portman and had been the princess' governess. "I can't look down, I can't look up, because I keep thinking of the unspeakable things behind. After I get my breath and have become resigned to my fate I may be comparatively comfortable here for some years; but, as to stirring either way, there's no use dreaming of it."

"Well, you'll make an ideal hermitess," said Virginia. "You've exactly the right features for that profession—austere, yet benevolent. But you're not really afraid now?"

"Do you think, then, dear, that you'd relapse and lose your head or anything if I just strolled on alone to the top of the col for the view which the guidebook says is so fine and then come back to organize a relief expedition, say in about half an hour or so?"

"No-o," said Miss Portman; "I suppose I can bear it. I may as well accustom myself to loneliness, as I am obliged to spend my remaining years on this spot. But I am not at all sure the duchess would approve"—

"You mean Lady Mowbray. She wouldn't mind. She knows I've a good head and—physically—a good heart. Besides, I shall have only myself to look after, and one really doesn't need a chaperon in going to make an early call on a mountain view."

"Dearest princess, I'm not so sure of that in regard to this mountain view."

"Miss Mowbray, please, you're very subtle. But I really haven't come out to look for the mountain view you refer to. You needn't think it. I don't know where his lair is, but it's probably miles from here, and if I knew I wouldn't hunt him there. That would be un peu trop fort, and, anyway, I'm inclined to believe that mother is right about those dresses. I shall have such nice ones at Kronburg. So you see you can conscientiously give me your blessing and let me go."

"My dear, as if I could have suspected you would search for him! You are in Rhaetia not to pursue, but to give an emperor who wishes to have a certain princess for his consort a chance to fall in love with herself."

"If he will—if it can be so. What do Helen Mowbray and Lady Manchester know about the love affairs of emperors and princesses? Au revoir, dear friend; I'm going. By and by, if you have courage to lift your eyes, you'll see me waving a handkerchief flag at the rock corner up there."

Virginia took the alpenstock which she had laid down and began picking her way daintily, yet pluckily, toward the col which she had named as her goal. There was another route to it, leading on to the highest peak of the Schneehorn, only to be dared by experienced climbers, but the way by which the girl and her companion had set out from Alleheiligen nearly four hours ago was merely fatiguing, never dangerous, and Virginia knew that Miss Portman was safe and not half as much frightened as she pretended.

They had started at 8, just as the September sun had begun to draw the night chill out of the keen mountain air, and now it was close upon 12. The princess was hungry.

In Nordeck, the frontier town of Rhaetia as you come in from Germany, she had bought rucksacks for herself and Miss Portman, to be used upon just such mountain excursions as this, and today the brown canvas bags were being tested for the first time. Each rucksack stored an adequate luncheon for its bearer, while on top, secured by straps passed across the shoulders, lay a folded wrap to be used in case of rain.

After contracts are awarded the successful tenderers must submit designs of all superstructures with stress sheets all to be in accordance with the Specifications of the Department of Railways and Canals of the Dominion Government, 1908. The class of load to be used is that designated "Heavy" in the said specifications.

Tenders will be received for one or more of the structures required.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada payable to the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, for a sum equal to five per cent. (5 p.c.) of the amount of the tender.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,
P. E. RYAN,
Secretary.

They Help Your Stomach Out

And Save You a World of Wretchedness

A stomach that cannot digest a good meal is certainly a sore trial. It has been responsible for almost everything in the way of human misery, up to suicide.

The trouble in most cases is that the stomach and other digestive organs lack vigor. Not enough of the juices necessary to digestion are secreted, nor does the stomach work up the food properly.

The worst of it is that there is not sufficient nourishment taken out of the food to restore the system's vigor, and the trouble goes from bad to worse. The stomach needs help.

"Little Digesters" meet the need exactly. One "Little Digester" after each meal will ensure perfect digestion, provided, of course, that the food is good and wholesome.

"Little Digesters" are guaranteed to cure Indigestion, and Dyspepsia, or your money will be refunded.

SUITABLE COSTUMES for the GIRL AT BOARDING SCHOOL

FOR the modern girl at least one year of boarding school is deemed an essential part of her training. For the country girl a winter in a large city is now looked upon as obligatory, that she may acquire that finish and poise of manner which only life in a great metropolis and close contact with city girls can give.

To the girl, on the other hand, whose whole existence or rather winter existence has been passed in the confines of a city at least one year of life in the country, where she may acquire a new fund of health and vigor, should be given.

And for both of these girls there is much in a term of boarding school training to be derived beyond the mere learning of study hours.

In the main essentials a boarding school outfit is much the same whether the school is in a city or out of town. There must be the afternoon coat and skirt costume, the school dresses and the simple frocks for evening wear, but here the similarity in the two outfits is at an end. Although simplicity must be the keynote of an outfit for a girl not yet out, still life in a large city calls for slightly more elaboration of dress than is appropriate for a country boarding school. The recreation hours are given over to different forms of exercise and outdoor fun in the country, while in town there are matinees, concerts and visits to the museums planned for Saturday afternoons and half holidays, and for this purpose there must be a pretty suit, waist and hat instead of the country girl's sailor dress, sweater and tam o' shanter.

IN the schoolroom, too, a simple but pretty and becoming dress must always be worn in a city boarding school, where there is a large contingent of day pupils, but the girl at a country boarding school is apt to have all too little time between "bells," and her first consideration in her morning dress is that it may be donned as quickly as possible. A sailor dress has for years been a popular gown with all boarding school misses, and for the girl to whom this is not becoming there are to be had simple shirtwaists of washable French flannels made with collars attached, and these, with the high waisted skirts which require no added belt, can be put on almost as rapidly as the sailor dress.

From a standpoint of economy it is a good plan to provide a three quarter length jacket of the same material as the sailor dress. The waist being separate from the skirt, different blouses can be worn and the coat and skirt, together with a pretty bodice of silk or lingerie, serve often for afternoon wear and for the daily walks before the days are sufficiently cold to demand an ulster. Dark blue is always the favorite color for a sailor dress, although brown is occasionally seen and black if the girl is in mourning. This suit in serge or else in cheviot which is heavy is excellent for everyday wear.

APART from this dress life in a country boarding school demands at least one separate skirt of homespun, cheviot, coarse serge or some such stout texture which will withstand the hardest possible usage. Even if her other skirts have been lengthened to her ankles this skirt should be above the shoe tops, as it is to be worn for tennis, skating, coasting and all other outdoor games that relieve the irksome duties of the schoolroom. There should be a warm flannel waist for this skirt and of course a sweater to be worn with or without an ulster, according to the temperature.

The ulster of to-day is a long heavy coat, semi-fitting, but without the capes which formerly characterized it. Heavy tweed, cheviot and serge are all good for this coat. The long fur lined coats now to be had at such astonishingly low cost are also most useful in a boarding school outfit.

Shetland wool sweaters made to button in front and of much the same length and shape as the one time reefer jacket are now preferred to any other style of knitted woollen jacket. They are delightfully soft, these sweaters of Shetland wool, and so light and fine that they can be slipped on under the most tight fitting coats, while they are at the same time sufficiently warm to be worn well into the autumn without the necessity of another wrap. White and gray are about equally popular in these sweaters, while in the ordinary hand or machine knitted jackets there are to be had models in practically any shade desired.

Warm stockings, heavy laced boots and at least one pair of white knitted gloves must be provided for a girl who is to enjoy her first winter of country life.

FOR the evening there must be one or two pretty gowns of cashmere, challie, voile, soft silk or some such texture, made as simply as possible. A Dutch neck and three-quarter length sleeves make a gown more comfortable for evening wear than if the yoke be finished with a high stiffly boned collar and the sleeves have long tight cuffs.

Two hats are more than sufficient in a school outfit, one to wear with the smart afternon and Sunday costume, the other for everyday wear, and then some sort of soft felt perhaps if a tam be too unbecoming.

The gown of first importance for a school girl in a large city is the coat and skirt costume, which receives such unceasing wear. For the morning separate waists and skirts are too serviceable to be lightly discarded, but there should also be at least one dress throughout of serge or light weight cloth. The winter's outfit must naturally be planned with reference to what gowns are left over from the winter before; if the best suit is possible this year for second best matters will be at once simplified, for this, with one or two extra bodices, will be perfect for everyday wear, and then more can perhaps be expended upon a gown of corduroy or perhaps a bright colored cloth dress for afternoons and vacation sprees.

THE climate in this so called temperate sone is so erratic that a fur coat is obligatory for all if the cold, crisp days of winter are to be enjoyed to the full. The brown and black pony skin coats and the less costly grades of caracul, the coat reaching not below the knees, are excellent for a school girl, but care must be taken that the skin of this coat be not too heavy for walking and regular wear in a city. Perhaps the best way of planning the outfit is to provide one simple but pretty princess dress of lightest serge or cloth in brown, dark green or red, to be worn with the fur wrap and to be used interchangeably with the regular school dress during the morning.

A plain tailor made coat and skirt, with one silk waist of the same shade, and two or more bodices of French flannel, light blue, pink or white, finished with detachable collar and cuffs of white lawn or linen will be found highly serviceable. There is little change noticeable in the tailor made coat and skirt costumes. Jackets are still a long three-quarter length, semi-fitted, giving the wonderfully long straight lines introduced first two years ago. The skirts, however, have reverted to plaited models, the majority having deep yokes fitting smoothly about the hips, with an attached flounce very full but laid on in flatly ironed down plaits or tucks.

The coat and skirt costume for afternoon is little different from the dress which a girl wears every day except that the best suit or coat and skirt costume for Sundays and Saturday sprees is perhaps lighter in color than the other suit, but there is little difference in line and cut for a young girl. Rough cloths are generally used now for the morning and broadcloths and ladies' cloth reserved for more formal wear. The waist of the afternoon dress should if possible be of the same material as the coat and skirt, but if the weight of the cloth makes this impractical the bodice may be of chiffon cloth or net dyed to be the exact shade of the rest of the dress. Strappings of cloth are still made use of on the chiffon waists which form the third piece of a street costume.

Plaids are always popular for young girls and in a light weight cloth make excellent school dresses and frocks to wear under a fur cloak or ulster.

ONE afternoon house dress will prove most useful to save the better street costume, while for evening the striped gauzes, voiles, crêpe de chine and all such soft clinging fabrics are attractive.

Another important garment in the [illegible] for a girl in a city boarding [illegible] an evening wrap or cloak. White, tan or scarlet, all are pretty, and [illegible] wrap must depend for its charm [illegible] upon the color, for it should be simp[illegible] the last degree, so that it shall bear [illegible] semblance to the elaborate opera [illegible] of a later day. Sleeveless capes are [illegible] in the evening, but loose coats with full sleeves and yoke high at the neck infinitely better in cold weather. The wrap should be heavily wadded or [illegible] lined. Unless there is a fur lining colored satin brocade or flowered [illegible] brocade are now preferred to the popular white satin lining.

Three hats are generally included in a winter outfit for a young girl, but there no need for more than this. The aim in selecting an outfit for a girl boarding school should be to give all gowns that are absolutely necessary then to choose that trousseau so cle that each dress will answer all purp required of it and that there be no garments which can just as well be without. Naturally the girl will not unlimited room for her belongings an the unnecessary articles will be ju much further trouble to keep neat a repair.

SOCIAL AMENITIES FOR THE SCHOOL GIRL

OF all outdoor pastimes there is none more enjoyable than yachting, and none where good manners are more essential, whether the boat be a one man craft or the luxurious steam palace of the plutocrat.

People invited to go yachting are always asked to assemble at some club or private pier, and therefore one of the first requisites on the part of guests is punctuality. Nothing annoys a host more than to be kept waiting, and it is hard to forgive even the prettiest or most engaging girl when she offends in this way. So make a point of being prompt.

A wise and general rule to observe aboard any boat is never to move about or do anything without permission. On a steam yacht, as far as the social amenities are concerned, the atmosphere is quite like that of a drawing room, everything being conducted with more or less formality, the servants being as numerous on the yacht as they are in the owner's home. Therefore when you wish for anything you have only to make your desires known to your host or hostess, and a soft footed Japanese brings it to you. It is not etiquette for you to get anything for yourself, or for you to ask any young man in the party to fetch you wraps or anything, and above all do not show ignorance of the proprieties by giving any sort of an order to any of the servants, even if one of them is right at your elbow and you could send him for what you wish without disturbing your host. If your host is engaged in conversation at the moment you wish something bide your time and when you can properly break in say, "Do pardon me for bothering you, but may I have my cape, please?" and he will at once send a servant to the saloon, where the wraps not immedi[illegible] needed are usually deposited.

Even if you happen to be very th[illegible] when you get aboard, do not ask f[illegible] glass of water. It is the custom yachts, to have all sorts of cooling dr[illegible] served frequently, and there will b[illegible] variety of mineral waters, or lemon[illegible] or what you like to refresh you, but must wait until they are served, w[illegible] they will be almost immediately, an[illegible] ask for something before the host s[illegible] the order would be implying that he not attending to his duties.

As blue and white are the yacht colors you should wear them and others, and above all things you n[illegible] wear rubber soled shoes. Yachtsmen sent having their beautifully poli[illegible] decks scratched by heels, and are likely to invite again a guest who w[illegible] them aboard. So if you are asked yacht and have not rubber soled s[illegible] get them at once or else decline the vitation.

Do not rush about a yacht peering quisitively into this and that, and n[illegible] venture onto the bridge or go into wheelhouse unless invited to do so. be asked to either of these places special compliment, and when you singled for this attention show that understand nautical ways by your havior. Do not tease to be allowe[illegible] stay up on the bridge when your suggests moving on, and in the wi[illegible] house show an intelligent interest in navigation, but do not get in the wa[illegible] the navigating officer or ask him end[illegible] silly questions.

If you sing to a guitar or a banjo are asked to bring your instrument al[illegible] by all means do so, but do not slu[illegible] the time. Sing too little rather than much, for it is bad form to be a mo[illegible] olist of any sort.

Talks by the April Grandmother

"MISS ANAEMIA FROSTE would be pretty but for the color of her nose. It resembles a beacon light irradiating a snowy landscape," remarked the April Grandmother when a slender blond girl had passed well beyond earshot. "Because she is so exceedingly thin and apparently bloodless it is reasonable to assume that she has suffered from indigestion for a long time and that her system has run down from lack of nutrition. A simple means of relieving such a case is to systematically wash out the stomach with copious draughts of pure, fresh, non-iced water at and between meals and to take long, rapid walks in the open air, regardless of weather, for such exercise is only beneficial when taken regularly, and the girl who does not readily digest her food must either walk from one to three miles daily or be resigned to confronting a pink tipped nose whenever she looks into a mirror.

"Imperfect circulation of the blood is nearly always evidenced by the condition of the nose, which is not only rosy of hue, but cold to the touch," continued the April Grandmother. "When a girl of active habits and normal health is thus afflicted she may make up her mind that the nose itself and not the stomach needs attention. Applications of very hot or very cold water will often stimulate the blood vessels of the nose, and a little gentle massage will probably help its condition.

"Full blooded girls who regularly eat three hearty meals and occasionally drink a glass of light wine at luncheon may find a warning written on the florid face of any middle aged gentleman whose nose is traversed by huge, angry looking veins. A generous diet is apt to develop myriads of red veins, which, once enlarged, are not to be reduced by ointments or massage, while the operations of skin specialists nearly always leave their scars. The only safe method is to take time by the forelock and from the moment the first tiny vein is detected adopt a Spartan diet. The same course is prescribed when there is the slightest indication of erysipelas, taking care, however, to protect the nose from sunburn with a light coating of rice powder, for when the cuticle peels from a sore nose then is the psychological moment for the germ to get in its deadly work.

"Just as regularly as the body is washed with a soap lathered, soft cloth, so should the nostrils be cleansed with a boric acid or pure salt solution atomizer spray. treatment will not only keep the int[illegible] of the nose from gathering germs dust and reduce inflammation of the ing membrane, but it will go far tw[illegible] checking an incipient case of c[illegible] catarrh.

"A red nose is one of the danger which nature waves as a warning the general health is endangered," cluded the April Grandmother, "so aside from the menace to her beaut is a signal which every young girl sh[illegible] promptly heed."

Brother's College Room.

THE girl who is helping her bro[illegible] to select the furnishings for his lege room should not forget among the most effective of inexpen ornaments are the porcelain steins w[illegible] come in the colors of the leading univ[illegible] ties and are decorated with correct[illegible] itials and seals.

Plate rails play an important rôle in decoration of the youthful bachelor The latest rails developed in Flemish Mission or[illegible] have a guaranteed moven[illegible] clock set in their centre and are equip[illegible] with brass mounted shelves and b[illegible] cup hangers.

Suitable plates for any darkly sta[illegible] rail have decorations representative Puritan period events done on de[illegible] glazed royal blue English porcelain, tures of cattle fired upon Royal Dou[illegible] and of coaching and hunting scenes silver edged, yellow-brown porcelain

Substantial luncheon cloths suitable a college "spread" are of Austrian we[illegible] bordered with hemstitching, headed three rows of drawnwork; of soft fi[illegible] German linen, bordered with deep scal[illegible] ing, and of tan colored crash embroid[illegible] with white cotton

Rag carpet couch covers are so dur[illegible] that they are certain to win las popularity in sophomore circles. newest rag covers are in mixed colo[illegible] in old fashioned "hit and miss," poster ends in brilliant hues. Among most attractive are those in plain tint[illegible] brown and gray, with broad, gayly s[illegible] stripes crossing the ends or reproduc[illegible] cretonne tints and designs.

Huge oblong shaped pillows covered w[illegible] rag carpeting make an excellent b[illegible] ground for more elaborate pillows cov[illegible] with denim of Princeton orange, Harv[illegible] crimson, Yale blue, &c., suitably [illegible] broidered in white or black lettering. T[illegible] may also be covers of figured bur[illegible] similar to that employed for wall co[illegible] ings, monks' cloth in natural and pop[illegible] tones, arts and crafts curtain mater[illegible] washable Austrian print, block decora[illegible] in characteristic patterns and dec[illegible] laced with leather thongs.

LINGERIE RIBBONS.

LAUNDERABLE or lingerie ribbons are markedly wider than were those formerly in general use. The majority of the threadings for the tops of corset covers, chemises and combination garments are an inch wide, while those used on petticoat flounces, night robes and negligees measure fully two inches across. This fashion so materially increases the expense of keeping up the lingerie that the care of the reserve supply of delicately tinted ribbons is of importance. As it is more economical to purchase these ribbons by the bolt, they should be kept rolled up in their original paper ribbons, which should be attended as nearly as possible to the outer end of the roll. Long eyed bodkins are specially provided for running these wide ribbons through lingerie beadings, but for the traveller who is prone to mislay her toilet utensils there are tagged ribbons which come in two yard

UP TO DATE LANDSCAPE GARDENING

Interesting Work in Preparing Models Which Combine Beauty with Natural Charm.

IN no other art has America made so conspicuous an advance of late as in landscape gardening. Our best examples of the art compare more than favorably with similar work abroad.

The methods of American garden architects differ from those followed in European countries. When one orders a house it is a comparatively simple matter to prepare drawings which will show the finished appearance of the building, but in landscape gardening the problem is much more complicated. To show how a large estate of many acres would appear when remodelled would require a series of drawings in color, while a mere plan or a general perspective would be misleading. The modern landscape gardener, therefore, is obliged to prepare a general model in relief carried out in color to be submitted to his client before work can be commenced.

The preparation of these models often necessitates an immense amount of work. It is not uncommon for these models to be ten feet or more in length, with the highest relief raised a foot or more in height. The various lawns and terraces are modelled to scale with the utmost accuracy. The shrubbery, the trees and gardens are indicated in detail, as are all lakes, ponds or running water. In order that the model should convey a complete picture all the buildings on the estate are represented by diminutive models in wood or clay, set down exactly as they will appear on the estate. Many landscape gardeners make a practice of submitting such a model in the rough. The convenience of this plan is of course obvious. If the owner desires any change he has merely to suggest it and he may watch his estate being remodelled before his eyes. With a single sweep the architect can remodel the angle or level of a lawn or wipe out a terrace or build up a hill.

One great advantage of such a model in laying out an estate is the opportunity it offers for laying out paths and roads. The various levels of the estate are obvious at a glance and the paths may be traced through them with a definite idea as to their grades. A stretch of forest or shrubbery may be picked up and set down at will until just the right place has been found for it. Some artists go so far as to represent the bodies of water by mirrors set in the clay. The various buildings again may be transferred from one position to another until they fit into the miniature landscape in just the way to suit their owner.

Once the general form of the model has been determined with the proper distribution of the buildings the whole is carried out with great care as to detail. The flower beds and shrubbery, the paths with their borders, the sweep of the drives are modelled in exact reproduction. The model is then colored. The models of the buildings are carefully painted, as are the representations of the flower beds and lawns, in order that the color scheme may be harmonious.

DESK SETS.

AN attractive looking desk set of the type which may readily be packed into a tourist's trunk includes a safety inkwell mounted on a four by eleven and a half inch tray, a paper knife and a stationery holder equipped with hand blotters. The various pieces are of plain brass to which etched brass plates and squares are applied.

Another set, consisting of a full sized blotting pad, with corners; a letter holder, hand blotter, pen tray, stamp box, clock and paper cutter, is of antique brass or copper, decorated with Nile green. Egyptian etchings representing the Sphinx, a mythological monster formerly worshipped as Protectress of Egypt; Isis, goddess of the Nile, worshipped by the Egyptians as the Great Benefactress; the Lotus, sacred lily of Egypt, or the Papyrus, a reed commonly used in ancient Egypt as a writing material.

Newest in leather desk sets are those of Tuxedo brown, Pompeian green and Indian red sealskin, which includes an eighteen inch square cornered blotting pad, a calendar, stationery holder, clock, pen tray, inkstand, pin, clip and stamp box, paper weight and penwiper. Each piece is lined with glacé kid of a matching shade and finished with gold traced bevelled edges.

WHICH WILL PAY AT LEAST

10 PER CENT PER ANNUM

PROFITS—There is a good profit in this Ink. There are 12 or 15 Ink Companies in the United States paying dividends of from 12 to 20% per annum.

THE KEARNS INK CO. of Toronto was organized two years ago to manufacture the new CANADIAN WRITING INKS, invented by J. J. Kearns. The past two years has been spent in experimenting and improving quality and to-day it stands among the top notchers in the Ink world. This Ink has met with such spontaneous approval from users, and the trade has shown such willingness to buy in quantities, that the managers deem it wise to enlarge their operations and make a big staple business enterprise out of this Company, hence offer to the public. The total capital is only $40,000, so that you can see that this is no inflated and watered wild cat scheme, but a first-class legitimate investment offered to you—one where a dollar invested to-day will be worth at least two in a year and will pay 10 per cent. income on this.

Some Orders That we Received as to the Sale of Kearns' Ink. We found the demand practically without limit; we receiving orders and inquiries far beyond our ability to supply the goods. Orders came from such houses as Parson's Fair Syndicate 17 stores in Ontario, Central Business College, Ontario Government, King Edward Hotel, Grand Trunk Railway Co., National Trust Co., Toronto Railway Co., Separate Schools of Toronto and Peterboro', Imperial Accident & Guarantee Co., Central Canada Loan & Savings Co., Consumers Gas Co., Toronto Elec. Light Co., all of Toronto.

A Safe Management—The entire management is in the hands of a Board of Directors of leading business men—men of executive and financial ability, men of "made reputation," men who can be counted on to capably and honestly direct the affairs of the enlarged Company, and see that each and every shareholder receives every dollar of the earnings of his stock.

Apsley, Sept. 8.—A meeting of the Burleigh and Anstruther Council was held in the town hall last Saturday.

Reeve in the chair, all members present.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

Moved by Councillors Harris and Hales, that this Council grant so much of Alexander St., Mount Julian, to the Dominion Government, as may be required for extending the dock across said street, and a by-law be prepared for next meeting to close part of street and convey to government.—Carried.

Moved by Councillors McCauley and Stone, that the sum of $35.00 be given to Mr. Geo. Matthews to finish the new road leading to Mount Julian.—Carried.

Moved by Councillors Harris and McCauley, that this Council lease the right of way from Mr. W. G. Stone for a road through the east half lot 9, con 1, South Burleigh, into lot owned by Mr. Wm. Bolton, for a term of 99 years, for the sum of $100, half to be due and payable on the 15th December, 1909, balance on 15th December, 1910. The said road to be improved by Mr. Bolton, without injury to Mr. Stone's adjoining property, and all large stones broken or removed to where they will not be a nuisance, and the gates to be kept shut when not in actual use. The clerk to have duplicate agreements prepared by next meeting.—Carried.

Moved by Councillors McCauley and Harris, that Mr. A. Wilson be given the sum of $10.00 to expend on boundary east road.—Carried.

Moved by Councillors McCauley and Stone, that a grant of $5.00 be made to J. K. Wilson, to brush out road leading into his lot.—Carried.

A by-law to fix the rate and levy the taxes for 1909 received its several readings, was passed, sealed and signed by the reeve and clerk.

The following are the rates:

County rate	2 mills
Debenture	2½ mills
Grant to schools	8 mills
Township rate	4 mills
Total	16½ mills

Being 1¼ mills lower than 1908.

A by-law to fix the rates and levy the amounts required by the different school sections, received its several readings, was passed, sealed and signed by the reeve and clerk. Following are the rates:

S. S. No. 1, Burleigh, 4½ mills
S. S. No. 2, Burleigh 2 mills
S. S. No. 1, Anstruther, 10 mills.
S. S. No. 2, Anstruther, 9 mills

A by-law re-appointing Mr. B. Coons collector of taxes, was read its several times, passed, sealed and signed by the reeve and clerk.

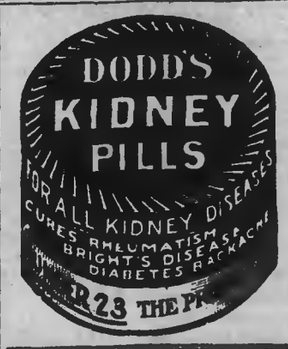
In reference to an item in one of your late issues in regard to "wormy" bass" I have fished Jack's Lake for years and never caught a "wormy" bass" or saw one caught, and the same can be said of all our back lakes that are fed by springs, though wormy bass will be caught in the streams flowing out of the lakes where the water is shallow and warm.

Mr. John Silkirk, Mr. Wm. Tucker and several of his sons left on Monday for Tongomong Lake to resume operations at the iron mine they own there. They expect a diamond drill over as soon as the ice takes, and they can get it in, and will test the depth of the deposit, which is extensive and of high grade.

The young people, to the number of 10 or 50, enjoyed a dance in the town hall last week and from all accounts had a good time, keeping it up until daylight.

Although we were supposed to have a daily mail all summer it was a poor arrangement. The mail used to be taken all over the lake before being delivered at Mount Julian, and it was all hours of the night when it arrived here, then we would get one, two, three of our dailies all together, the other day I got an Examiner only 6 days old. At present the mail lays over 24 hours at Mount Julian, so I received Saturday's Examiner to-night (Tuesday.) The service is a credit to the country!



Children Had Eczema

SUFFERED AGONY UNTOLD

reatment prescribed had no effect—DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT made thorough cure.

Many a mother's heart has been torn by the suffering of her little one who has fallen a victim of eczema. Only such mothers appreciate to the full the value of Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for this horrible ailment.

Mrs. Oscar Vancott, St. Antoine, Sask., writes:

"I have found Dr. Chase's Ointment to be a permanent cure of eczema and other skin diseases. One son, while nursing, broke out with running watery sores all over his head and around the ears. Many salves were prescribed to no effect. The child's head became a mass of scabs and he suffered agony untold. He became weak and frail and would not eat and we thought we would lose him.

"Providentially we heard of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it soon thoroughly cured him. He is seven years old now and strong and well. An older boy was also cured of eczema by this Ointment, and we hope more people will learn about it so that their poor little ones may be saved from suffering."

Chafing and irritation of the skin, from which nearly all babies suffer more or less, is a frequent source of eczema. There is no treatment for chafing so satisfactory as Dr. Chase's Ointment. Pore-clogging, unsanitary powders are being discarded by all who have once learned the value of this great Ointment in keeping baby's skin soft, smooth and healthy.

In scores of ways Dr. Chase's Ointment is useful in every home in the treatment of pimples, barber's itch, scalds and burns, poisoned skin, sore feet and every form of itching skin disease. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

The Fraserville Methodist Church officials have decided on improving the condition of the sheds.

They are going to have a cement wall built, and the west-wing will be re-built, while an entire new structure will be erected where the northern section now stands.

These improvements have been sorely needed for the past few years, as the old sheds are in a desolate state of repair.

It is understood that the contract of building the wall has been let to Mr. A. Rose, of this village.

After these improvements have been made, the Fraserville Church will be one of the finest and prettiest of its kind in the township.

London, Sept. 15.—Mrs. Wesley Scott, who is charged with the murder of her father-in-law, Harvey Scott, of 5th concession, West Nissouri, was brought to the city Monday night, and appeared before Squire Chittick, who remanded her for a week. She is at present in the county jail, where she passed a quiet night. Ed. Meredith, K.C., will have charge of her case.

An adequate motive for the crime seems hard to find. And as far as can be learned it is a case, the neighbors say, of a woman goaded beyond endurance by a long series of cruelties and petty tyranny, stretching back for many years. The dead man had borne a harsh name among his fellows.

"He was a good neighbor," one man said, "and always kept the line fences carefully. And if he worked for you he wouldn't spare himself or his horses. But he was a hard man, and close. A man who had worked hard all his life, had made no friends, and had crossed all who had come in his way."

A gate between the two places, it seems, had been left open, and some cattle belonging to Wesley Scott had strayed into the old man's premises. The deceased man became angered at this, and taking up the stick, which he always carried, he went over to see his daughter-in-law about the matter.

Caught After Hard Fight.

Warren, Ont., Sept. 15.—James Robinson, wanted for incest and infanticide, was captured at his home yesterday by his brother-in-law, Jas. Matheson.

Matheson was passing by the Robinson farm on a load of hay, when he glanced across a field, and there beheld Robinson, the fugitive, who had been at large since the 11th of August.

Matheson immediately dismounted from the hay wagon and unstrapped a strap from the harness. Robinson, being on the alert, took to the bush, and Matheson followed him. After running about a mile, Matheson drew up with the fugitive. A desperate fight ensued and Matheson finally overpowered Robinson.

In the course of half an hour, Robinson was handed over to the authorities and lodged in the Warren jail.

He was taken to Sudbury last night and lodged in jail.

Thirty-Seven New Ministers.

Toronto, Sept. 15.—Rev. Dr. McLaren, Presbyterian Home Mission secretary, has just returned from a ten weeks' official visit to Great Britain and Ireland. His purpose was to secure a number of young men for home mission work in the West.

Dr. McLaren stated yesterday, that he received thirty-seven who would start from the old country this month. Several more would follow this fall, and others in the spring. The work here, however, would afford stations for nine young preachers than were in sight either here or in Great Britain.

Young Agent's Thefts.

Montreal, Sept. 15.—Three years in the penitentiary was the sentence meted 17-year-old Hector Larose, for stealing $800 from the Canadian Pacific Railway while employed as clerk in the ticket office on the Place Viger station.

Ever since he started to work, a deficit of from $25 to $30 was found almost daily. This could not be accounted for until Larose was arrested, under suspicion, and pleaded guilty.

Editors Will Appeal to King.

Madrid, Sept. 15.—The Liberal newspapers of Madrid have published a protest against the continuance of the Government censorship and they threaten to strike unless this restriction is removed. The editors have decided to appeal to King Alfonso.

Wedding Party In Fatal Accident.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 15.—Five women and a baby were seriously injured yesterday when a taxicab, in which they were riding, was wrecked by a street car. One, it is said, will die.

Clerk Shoots Himself.

Montreal, Sept. 15.—Allan McDonald, aged 22, a clerk in the employ of the Bishop Construction Co., Beaver Hall square, shot himself yesterday morning, probably with suicidal intent, in the company's office.

Drunken Cossack's Crime.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 15.—A drunken Cossack of Emperor Nicholas' Bodyguard, enraged by the teasing of a number of children, ran amuck through the streets of St. Petersburg yesterday with a drawn sabre.

He chased a three-year-old child into the court yard of a jail, where he struck the boy down with his sabre. He wounded two men who tried to protect the child, and inflicted a score of frightful wounds upon a laundress. His fifth victim was a soldier.

A Serious Charge.

Kingston, Sept. 15.—John Lehent, aged 35, was arrested last night, charged with committing an assault on a girl not quite ten years of age. Accused is married, but for some time has not been living with his wife.

PELLAGRA SPREADS.

Deadly Disease Carries Off More Victims In North Carolina.

Durham, N.C., Sept. 15.—Pellagra is spreading in this state at an alarming rate. The ninth death in this locality occurred here Monday night. Two new cases were discovered Monday, and one of the two survivors of the eleven originally afflicted will die within a week, in all probability. There are said to be one thousand cases of the disease in North Carolina at the present time, and but one county, Onslow, it is declared, is without a patient.

The first autopsy upon a pellagra victim in North Carolina was performed Monday night on George Mebane, a large negro, who had just died, violently insane. Though the germ was found, no other trace of the disease was discovered. The heart and other organs were in perfect condition. Prior to the negro's death, Guinea pigs were inoculated with his blood. They have shown no signs of the disease yet.

Late Monday night the physicians who conducted the autopsy, headed by the pathologist of Trinity College, declared themselves completely mystified as to the origin of the disease.

Pellagra is a cerebro-spinal disease not uncommon among the peasantry of northern Italy, where it is caused by the eating of diseased corn. It affects the spinal cord and intestines and often produces dementia. Fresh air, rest and a good diet, from which maize must be excluded, are the remedies.

Lord Charles Leaves.

Toronto, Sept. 15.—Capt. R. M. Melville, R.N.R., of Toronto, accompanied Admiral Lord Charles Beresford to New York, where the latter left on the 7.10 train last evening. The admiral expects to meet his daughter in New York, where they will be the guests of Col. Thompson, an old friend.

His lordship's departure was marked by an extreme absence of ostentation. He arrived at the station about 15 minutes before train time, and stood on the platform chatting with the few friends who were down to see him off. Very few outside of the party knew who he was. He did not have a private car, and when the train pulled out he was standing on the platform of the rear Pullman, waving farewell.

Those who were present to bid the admiral bon voyage were Geo. H. Gooderham, M.P.P., Mrs Melville and family, D. H. Irish, and Harold Phillips, a student of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, from South Africa, a personal friend of his lordship.

Winnipeg at Odds With Railway.

Winnipeg, Sept. 15.—The City Council have directed counsel to get an injunction to restrain the Street Railway Co. from erecting light and power poles in streets without a civic permit.

Pending a suit now threatening the city has without prejudice a clause inserted on these permits, which clause is objectionable to the company, and they are now seeking to over-ride the city.

Cruisers End Riots.

Gaspe, Sept. 15.—Matters seem quiet at Fox River. Thirty of the ringleaders and principal rioters in the fishermen's strike have been arrested. Much credit is due the officers and crews of the cruisers Canada and Christine.

Hoteiman an Aviator.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio, Sept. 15.—A. W. Bonney, a hotelman of this place, yesterday made a flight in a monoplane of his own design.

Votes for Women.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 15.—West end women have organized a Women's Christian Temperance Union and announce their intention to demand the right of the franchise. The suffragette campaign starts forthwith and Vancouver this winter will re-echo with the cry of "Votes for Women." The movement is important in view of the local option fight.

To Restrict Death Penalty.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 15.—Premier Stolypin has again sent a circular to the Governors-General of the districts under martial law, instructing them to restrict the application of the death penalty as much as possible. They are to resort to courts-martial only in cases of exceptional importance, submitting all ordinary crimes to the civil courts.

The Empire's Merchants.

New York, Sept. 15.—A cable despatch to The Herald from Sydney, N.S.W., says: The Governor-General opened the Chamber of Commerce Congress yesterday. One hundred delegates, representing different portions of the Empire, are present.

Strathcona Visits Laurier.

Ottawa, Sept. 15.—Lord Strathcona came to the capital yesterday and spent a couple of hours with Sir Wilfrid aLurier, with whom he took lunch. He returned to Montreal on the afternoon train.

A Board of Inquiry.

Ottawa, Sept. 15.—A board of conciliation has been named by the Labor Department to enquire into the differences between the I.C.R. roundhouse employes at Halifax and the commissioners.

Generous.

"It is only right that I should tell you," she said, "that father has lost all."

"Not all!" he exclaimed.

"Yes, all," she asserted.

"No," he said firmly, "not all. You are still left to him. I could not be so cruel as to add to his misfortunes. Tell him—tell him from me that my generosity impels me to leave him what little lies in my power."

Earning a Spanking.

A lady who had company to tea reproved her little son several times, speaking, however, very gently. At last, out of patience, she said sharply: "Jimmy, if you don't keep still I'll send you away from the table!"

"Yes, that's what you always do when there's company and there ar not enough cakes to go round!" was the reply of the gifted youth.

"Heney of Piffsburg" Dying On Eve Of New Graft Work

DIS. AATY WM. A. BLAKELY.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 14.—On the eve of his prosecution of more graft cases involving members of the common council, Dist. Atty. Wm. A. Bailey, 43, is dying here, the victim of a mysterious ailment. When he first was taken to his bed, a rumour ran through Pittsburg's underworld that he had been poisoned.

So definite was this rumour that all the powers that have been fighting Blakely were unable to down it.

Then, the day after this story was published, came the grave announcement that he was suffering from an old disease, which had threatened him before.

Blakely, rich and popular, with a quiet manner, became the Heney of Pittsburg as soon as he took office. He tore the lid off Smoky City graft and frightened "the men higher up." His death would mean a telling blow to the state's effort to jail grafters.

NO FURTHER LIGHT UPON THE SPRINGVILLE MYSTERY

Coroner Dr. Gray Still Adheres to the Theory That Body Found Was That of a Woman and That Foul Play Has Been Done---Full Investigation Will be Made.

Around the mysterious skeleton lying in its egg cradle coffin in a marked grave in the little cemetery, Springville and vicinity residents are weaving the fine fabric of a murder story. They feel that the unknown person discovered in a dark corner of Campbell's bush at Kendry Siding on the C.P.R. on Sunday last did not die of his own hand, but that a foul murder was accomplished, and the body placed there with an open razor in the outstretched hand to lend credence to a suicide theory. Death from purely natural causes is not considered at all.

Coroner Gray, who has charge of the case, is thinking of taking steps to have the whole matter thoroughly sifted out by the Attorney-General's Department. He will leave nothing undone to arive at a solution of the mystery. The doctor is firmly of the opinion that the skeleton was that of a woman, and that death came as a result of violence after she had been taken there and maltreated by some unknown man, who tried to cover his crime by leaving traces of suicide. He bases his "woman" theory upon the fact that the head and outline of the face was that of a woman, while the teeth, practically all of which were intact, were small, and almost perfectly symmetrical. In addition to this, he said that the pelvic bones were much broader than would have been the case in a man. The can containing Paris green, he thinks, was left there by someone only recently, after a visit to the scene.

"It is my intention," said Coroner Gray, "to keep the whole matter open so that the inquiry can be resumed at any time. Someone may make inquiries that may lead to identification, unless the unknown was absolutely without friends in the country. At the same time I will see that the most complete investigation is made, and for this reason I would like to have a detective from headquarters at Toronto here to make an attempt to unravel the mystery, which is similar in many respects to the famous Barton murder case at Hamilton, where a woman was killed whose identification baffled the most careful investigation of the authorities. I have had the bones buried in all its clothing, but can have them dug up at any time."

EVERYTHING IS READY FOR OPENING OF THE PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL

Directors Had Their Final Meeting Before the Big Show Last Evening---Weather Man Hands Out the Promise, "Fine and Cool" for To-morrow---Official Programme Indicates the Finest Line of Amusement Features Ever Offered by the Association

"Fair and cool!"

That is the promising bulletin that the weather man has handed out for the first day of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition to-morrow, and if the goods come according to the invoice there is every reason to expect the best fair in the history of the Association.

"I took in more entries yesterday than I ever did before in a single day," Secretary Hall announced to the Examiner to-day. "So far, we are away ahead of last year." All of which is very encouraging and strengthens the opinion that the Exhibition of 1909 will smash all other marks.

The directors held their last meeting previous to the fair last night, in which a number of necessary details of business were attended to and every thing is in readiness for the opening.

To-morrow of course, is only exhibitors' day, the fair not being open to the public until Friday morning at 8 o'clock.

CONTENTED AT HOME

THE CASE WAS DISMISSED

Havelock, Sept. 15th.—Reginald Brennan and wife came up before Magistrate Edmison this afternoon charged with ill-treating their fifteen year old daughter. Mr. Basil Hall was present in the interests of the Children's Aid Society through whom the prosecution was laid and Mr. G. N. Gordon was present on behalf of Mr. and Mrs. Brennan. Some evidence for the prosecution was heard but it was not necessary for the defence to offer any, the young girl going into the box and testifying. She stated that in her home she was well treated by her parents. She was content to stay there and had no fault to find with the treatment she received. She was not punished, she said more more than she deserved.

On hearing the testimony of the girl, His Worship did not deem it necessary to proceed any farther and the case was dismissed.

THE EXPRESS RATES

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

Hamilton, Sept. 15.—At this morning's session of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, a motion by Mr. R. D. Fairbairn of Toronto brought up a question of express rates and it was the almost unanimous opinion that present rates are exhorbitant. Mr. Fairbairn wished to have Railway and Transportation Committee meet express companies and try to arrange reduction in minimum charge from 25 cents to 20 cents. Failing in this, to have the Dominion Government reduce the rates on parcel post and increase size of parcel to two pounds. Matter was finally referred back to Committee.

HARVEST FESTIVAL

Services Will be Held in St. John's Church To-morrow.

There will be harvest festival services in St. John's church to-morrow which promise to be of specially interesting character. In the morning at 10 o'clock, there will be a communion service. The evening service will be held at 8 o'clock, at which Rev. J. H. Teeney, rector of St. Philip's church, Toronto, will give an address. The church will be decorated for the occasion with fruits and grains, and the music will be of a joyful, bright nature, appropriate to the occasion.

Miller's Grip Powders cure.—Wm. Madill, Druggist.

PUNCHED A SINGER WAS DISCHARGED

Philadelphia, Sept. 14.—At a moving picture show in a hall on the north side of Market street, below Ninth, C. J. Stanley, a comedian, sang a song directed at Mrs. Louis Hansen, who was in the audience. Stanley sang that there was "class to a girl like that," and dashed a "spot light" from under his coat directly in Mrs. Hansen's face.

Mr. Hansen jumped upon the stage and pummeled the comedian three times before the house constable could take him away.

Magistrate Scott discharged the husband, with an intimation that his course had been justified.

A VETERAN SAILOR

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

London, Ont., Sept. 15.—Capt. John Dean Sullivan who built first great Western Car Ferry at Windsor and afterwards sailed it, is dead at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Alex. Gilean. He was last surviving eye witness of the Battle of Windsor and had been a sailor since he was 12 years old. He came to Windsor in 1837 and will be buried there.

For biliousness, try Miller's Granules.—Wm. Madill, Druggist.

Committed For Trial

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 15.—The hearing of Jacob Smith arrested in connection with the shooting of Dominick Spratt, was resumed this morning before Magistrate Moore. After the hearing of several witnesses who repeated the evidence given at the inquest the accused was committed for trial at the quarter sessions of the peace to be held in December. Smith, who is in a very poor state of health, was soon overcome and it was necessary for him to be assisted out of the Court by Chief Vincent.

WEDDING BELLS

GAHAGAN—RAYMER.

A very pretty wedding took place this morning at 8 o'clock, at St. Peter's Cathedral, the contracting parties being Mr. Martin Gahagan and Miss Georgina Raymer, both of town. The bride was attended by Miss Mary McEntee, while the groom was supported by Mr. Will Anglesey. The bride loked charming in a suit of taupe, with satin trimmings and buttons, while the bridesmaid was attired in a green suit.

After the wedding ceremony a sumptuous breakfast was partaken of at the residence of Mrs. John McEntee, 671 Reid street.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents, showing the high esteem in which she was held.

PLAINTIFF WON CASE

Magistrate Dumble Gave Judgment This Morning in Dispute Over a Boundary Line—The Plaintiff Awarded Compensation.

WAS FINED FOR TRESPASS

In the case of Mrs. Madden against Charles Griffin which came up before Magistrate Dumble in the police court a week ago, His Worship gave judgment this morning in favour of the plaintiff.

Griffin was charged with trespassing and with the destruction of a fence dividing his property and Mrs. Maddens. He argued that the fence was not built on the boundary line and on three different occasions pulled it down. The Magistrate found the defendant guilty of trespass and imposed a fine of five dollars and costs, and awarded Mrs. Madden ten dollars compensation for the loss incurred. In giving judgment, His Worship said that he had arrived at the conclusion that it was not a bona fide contest for a boundary. The fence had been built on a line of the old one and he did not see why the defendant should cut it down.

Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. E. F. McWilliams for the defendant.

BOLLARD INQUEST WILL BE RESUMED THIS EVENING

Fred Jopling, One of the Central Figures, Will Give His Testimony---Probabilities are That Harry Jopling and Chas. Forsythe Will be Recalled---Constable Moore and Dr. Morgan Will be Heard.

The Bollard inquest will be resumed before Coroner Dr. Gray at the Court house this evening and it is expected that the inquiry may be wound up. The inquest will commence at eight o'clock.

Fred Jopling will be the most important witness heard and his testimony is being eagerly awaited by the many curious people who have been following the progress of the case. He is regarded as the one who may be considered in a position to supply the most exact information as to what occurred during the scrap in which Arthur Bollard was injured.

It is likely that Harry Jopling and Charlie Forsythe will be called back to the stand and questioned as to the shouting to which Blake Cullen referred in his evidence on Monday night and of which three witnesses swore they had heard nothing.

County Constable Archie Moore will testify to a conversation he had with Blake Cullen in regard to the affair and Dr. Morgan will also likely be called.

Whether the jury will bring in a verdict to-night or not is not known. There is a large amount of evidence to be weighed and it is likely to take some time to come to a decision.

Smith Now In Trouble For Discharging Gun In Lindsay

Jacob Smith, who accidently shot Dominic Spratt on Sept. 3, causing his death, appeared before County Magistrate Moore this morning, and was charged with wilful neglect in discharging a firearm in the corporation of the Town of Lindsay, contrary to by-law No. 497. After hearing some of the evidence Smith was sent up for trial at the quarterly sessions to be held in December.

Magistrate Moore stated that the charge was a very serious one, and it was quite necessary to protect the general public against people discharging firearms in the corporation He stated further that it was not only against the laws of the corporation, but against the laws of the land.

Cannot Shoot Mud Hen

The magistrate also told the court that it was strictly against the laws of the Ontario Game Act to shoot or kill mud hens, and he was going to see that the law was enforced in this county. The only birds that can be shot or killed at any season of the year are crows, hawks, blackbirds and sparrows.

QUEBEC'S PULP WOOD POLICY.

Jean "Battiste" has "called" Uncle Uncle Sam's "bluff" in the matter of his punitory pulp tariff schedule. Instead of being frightened at threatened retaliation Quebec has risen to the occasion, and has decided to prohibit the exportation of pulpwood in the log, cut on Crown lands. Heretofore that province has imposed a sur-tax of 60 cents per cord on pulp wood cut on Crown lands, with a rebate in the case of wood manufactured into pulp or paper within the province. This was a variant of Ontario's policy, but less specific. The "reformed" United States tariff bill, which discriminates against —penalizes— pulp and paper imported from Ontario and Quebec has apparently put the latter province on its mettle, and precipitated the decision announced by Sir Lomer Gouin, premier of the province, to practically adopt the Ontario policy of permitting no pulpwood to be exported in an unmanufactured condition. It may be necessary as it seems to be indicated to extend the prohibition to pulp wood cut in private lands; for it by this means that the depletion of Quebec's pulp acres is threatened. Quebec, out of consideration for the poor settler, has refrained from dealing with the pulp wood, cut upon private property, which has been an important source of revenue to them. In the year 1907, out of 850,000 cords of pulpwood exported to the United States, 742,000 cords were cut from private lands. Besides United States interests have purchased large tracts of spruce lands from the province and ranking as private owners, can export at will, and it needs no unusual power of prevision to predict a repetition of the wasteful methods that have played havoc with the pulp lands of our neighbours. But with the application of the prohibitory decrees to all pulp woods, the United States people must if they wished to procure paper and pulp from Canada, establish pulp and paper mills in Ontario and Quebec, as they are likely to do under the partial prohibition and as was done in the matter of saw mills in sequence of the embargo placed by Ontario on saw logs. The United States supply of pulp wood being largely exhausted the nearest accessible supply is in Canada. While we are not disposed to be unneighbourly it is our evident duty to so exploit our pulp wood resources as to give our own people the lion's share of advantage, which advantage in the way of expenditure for labour, etc., in respect of exportation of manufactured and raw pulp wood, respectively, is about seven to one.

CANADA'S RETURNING PROSPERITY.

The statistics of our foreign trade furnish a reasonably fair indication of the good or bad condition of business in the country. Accordingly the July reports of the department of Trade and Commerce suggests a satisfactory state of affairs in Canada. Exports of domestic products for that month increased in value by nearly a million and imports showed a gain of $7,079,849. The figures for the four months of the present fiscal year, beginning April 1, are even more convincing. The domestic exports increased by $6,193,595, as compared with the corresponding four months of 1908. They are classified as follows:

The Mine. . . .	$12,048,999	$11,858,131
The Fisheries . .	3,907,440	3,209,016
The Forest . . .	13,317,175	14,762,376
Animals and their produce .	14,259,495	15,840,331
Agriculture . . .	14,917,267	18,006,788
Manufactures. .	8,,735,646	9,643,542
Miscellaneous. .	18,988	77,511

The increase in imports in the four months, ending July 31st last, compared with a simiar period in 1908, was $21,00,000. There are some who argue that exports alone are profitable. Others, says the London Advertiser, with more knowledge of economics, contend that an increase of imports is more desirable than an increase of exports, since commerce is in the last analysis barter. We pay for the goods we import by the goods we export. An individual would consider he had made a good bargain if he received more merchandise than he gave in payment for it. International trade is merely barter among numerous individuals. The nature of these transactions is not altered because the parties to them live in different countries and facilitate their bargainig by means of currency.

The foreign trade of Canada answers both tests satisfactorily. Exports are increasing; so are imports. The revival began before there was certainly of a good harvest. It will be stimulated by the greatest crop in Canada's history.

CARING FOR THE AGED WORKING MAN.

Massachusetts commission, which has been investigating the subject of pensions for aged industrial workers, thus reports:

"The problem of dealing with the aged employees is an urgent one in the modern business world. To carry them on the payroll at their regular employment means waste and disorganization of the working force; to turn them adrift is not humane. In the past large employers of labour have tried to meet the difficulty in piecemeal fashion by retiring aged employees on pensions in certain cases or giving them light work, each case being provided for on its merits; now they are beginning to deal with the problems in systematic fashion, by adopting a uniform method of retirement with pension."

This subject is one that has chiefly a sentimental interest, arising from sympathy with human suffering and hardship, for Canadians. We are too young a country to have been confronted with any considerable number of aged toilers, whose condition demands extensive or elaborate measures of state relief. In Canada there is such a general distribution of material means and the comforts thereby provided that the aged poor, who have passed their lives in toil without having provided for the period of enforced inaction, are, and have been generally provided for by their children, whom opportunity has placed in a position to repay the parental care of which they have been the objects. In Great Britain the state burdens itself willingly enough and creditably enough, too, with the care of its dependent aged. We have, for the reasons set forth and other reasons, not been called upon to adopt similar measures. But, as time goes on, we shall have to consider the case of the dependent aged. Our Government has recognized the coming necessity, and has admirably prepared to meet it by an excellent and feasible system of old age annuities. If the present generation will take advantage of Sir Richard Cartwright's scheme of old age annuities the autumn of life will have no dread for the man whose years of activity and strength of body are doomed to be spent in toil so long as the ability lasts. He will at a cost less than that of a daily pot of beer, have provided an annuity which will constitute an income, inalienable and indestructible, which will not only raise him above want, but place him in a position of comparative comfort. He will, at the same time, have saved his self-respect. The annuity which he will enjoy will be entirely disassociated from the idea of pauperism; for the income will be the result of his own saving, of the practice of his own habits of thrift.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If anybody has interest enough in the absurd controversy now raging Betwen Cook and Peary, as to priority of alleged discovery of the North Pole, to take the trouble, it would be well to suspend judgment. Cook has more the air of dignity and reserve befitting the man who has made a great achievement than Peary, whose flamboyant air and style suggest more the advance agent of a circus than a great conqueror of circumstances.

REPRESENTATION OF FAIR IN WINDOW

White & Gillespie's Window Dresser Has Struck Topical Idea.

Mr. Walter Fitzgerald, the window dresser for White & Gillespie, grocers, has aimed at representing an Agricultural fair and in more than ordinary manner has carried out the idea minutely. There is the old time horse ring, the musical merry-go-round, the candy booth and other features which are as necessary to the occasion as the big squash and the quilt that has won prizes since the fair was first instituted and represents the handiwork of John Gilpin's great, great grandfather's wife. The window is attracting the attention of the pedestrians.

MADE PRESENTATION

To Mr. Stewart Laing, Who is Leaving for Queen's.

A special meeting of St. Andrew's Sunday School Association was convened last night to bid farewell to Mr. Stewart Laing, who, for some years has been the most efficient secretary of the Sunday School. Mr. Lang leaves to-day for Queen's University, Kingston, where he enters upon the science course.

The Rev. J. G. Potter presided and the following address accompanied the presentation of a handsome copy of the Scriptures, by Mr. Cornish:

Dear Mr. Laing—On the eve of your departure for Queen's University we deem it our privilege to meet as teachers and officers of Saint Andrew's Church Sunday School Association to give some expression to our sense of loss at your departure, and to assure you of our hearty good wishes for your abundant success in your university work, and in the department of active life to which you have decided to devote your attention. We desire you to carry with you the esteem of all the officers and teachers of our Sunday School, who have been associated for some years with you, and may you always know that your devotion to duty, your ever abiding interest in the welfare of the school, and your uniform kindness and courtesy have always been recognized and appreciated.

A GENTLE REMINDER.

Now is the time to see about repainting and repairing your cutters and sleighs. 'Phone 443 and have them done and stored until sleighing time.

EXPLANATORY LETTER

Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—The reporter's interview with me which appeared in your issue of the 28th, needs a supplement. If the gentleman had taken down in shorthand what I said and not trusted to his memory, he would have given an entirely different impression on certain points. I am satisfied that he intended to be kind and courteous, but in justice to all concerned, I ask you to publish this correction.

As a matter of fact, I do not know that the Christian Science Church has ever considered the question as to what the Church would be without Mrs. Eddy, and I told the reporter that it was not our custom to speculate on such a proposition, incidentally mentioning the fact that at the present time the Church is governed by a Board of Directors, while Mrs. Eddy plans for them every pioneer movement, and if she were absent they would of course lose this service.

I have no authority whatever for making a statement as to what might happen in the absence of Mrs. Eddy, nor did I indulge in useless surmise on this point, further than to say that it was absurd to suppose that there could be any motive in secrecy or that such secrecy would be possible, that Christian Scientists make no claims whatever concerning their ability to prolong life that would need to be bolstered up by such deception.

As an apology to Mrs. Eddy, it might be well to say here that I did not understand that my personal references to her were for publication, nor that I was to be quoted at all. Otherwise I should have followed my usual custom of having my answers to questions written in order to make sure that they were not misunderstood.

I did not refer to Mrs. Eddy's wealth as being "enormous". I mentioned the fact that recent court proceedings had disclosed the fact that Mrs. Eddy was not enormously rich; that her wealth had been largely exaggerated, and that, moreover, she had always used her means to further the cause of Christian Science, and the records disclose the fact that she had provided a continuance of such a use.

Yours truly,
ALFRED FARLOW.
Boston, Mass., Sept 4, 1909.

POST CARD COLUMN.

Editor, Post Card Column.—Mr. George Lancaster would like the article in Monday's paper in reference to him corrected. He was working in Stocker's house on Weller street, and while attempting to drive a 4-inch nail into a board which had a knot in it, the nail flew back and struck him in the eye.

Monday's paper stated that he was working on a house in the south end of the city and ran against a nail in the cellar, which was altogether incorrect.—A Fellow-workman.

Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In an evening paper's report of a police court case it is stated that a Mrs. Shepperd and her daughter was concerned in the case. I wish to state that it was not myself and daughter that was meant. I live on another street and was in no way mixed up in the business. For my own sake and my daughter's sake I ask space in your paper to state the facts. I am not the Mrs. Shepperd meant and my neighbours and friends know that I am not likely to be concerned in anything that would bring me or my family into the police court. Thanking you, I remain,

Yours truly,
MRS. FRED SHEPPERD,
46 Alfred street.

IMPROVED MILL MACHINERY AT TORONTO EXHIBITION

The Peterborough Exhibit of G. Walter Green Company, Limited.

The following reference to the exhibit of Mill Machinery by the G. Walter Green Co., Limited, of this city, appears in the Weekly Globe's latest edition.

The exhibit of the G. Walter Green Company, Limited, Peterborough, manufacturers of portable saw mills, lath mills, shingle mills, shingle packers, saw jointers, saw gummers, double edgers, wood sawing machines, and a general line of mill machinery which is situated in the Machinery Hall, is worthy of special mention. This firm, which makes a specialty of saw mill machinery, is always on the alert for new ideas with the result that many improvements on their machinery are introduced annually. This year they are showing the "O. B." sawmill fitted with improved cable feed works. This machine, which is well suited for threshers, contractors and others, having limited power, will cut from 4,000 to 10,000 feet of lumber per day. The advantage that the "O. B." portable saw mill has over all others is that it is economical, saving labour, money and danger. The various types of mill machinery manufactured by this firm can be taken into the woods and moved from place to place as easy as a threshing mill. The lath mill and bolter attachment introduced by this enterprising firm enables the operator to cut round stuff as well as slabs, it being the only lath mill on the market, it is claimed, possessing this modern attachment. In a nutshell all the machines manufactured by this firm are money makers, and they challenge comparison, trial or test. Mill men, farmers, contractors, and jobbers should make it their business to examine the exhibit.

COUNCIL WILL CONSIDER THE BRIDGE QUESTION

Will Hold a Meeting To-night for That Purpose—Messrs. Begy and Company Have Been Relieved of Their Contract and Messrs. Conroy May Accept.

The Council will hold a special meeting to-night for the purpose of letting the contract for the building of the new Smith Street bridge. The Committeee of the Whole Council met last night and went into the matter. All the Council were present, with Mayor Rush presiding. Messrs. Begy and Company of St. Catharines, who were the lowest tenderers, had asked to be relieved of their tender, and Mr. Begy was present last night and addressed the Council to press that request, which was made, he said, for reasons beyond his control.

The matter was thoroughly discussed and then on motion of Ald. Turner and Duffus, it was decided that the contract for the bridge should be awarded to Messrs. Conroy, whose tender was the next lowest.

Mr. E. Conroy was present and was asked to explain his letter in regard to moving the bridge. He stated that he wished to move it south and east. This, however, was not agreeable to the Council, and the bridge will probably be built on the site of the present one.

Mr. Conroy would not accept the contract off hand. He wished the city to guarantee him cement at $1.25, and to be allowed to use the timber in the pier. He stated he would give his answer at noon to-day, but at 3 o'clock Ald. Phelan, chairman of the Board of Works, stated that he had not heard from Mr. Conroy in the matter.

GENERAL REDUCTION IN THE INSURANCE RATES HERE

Residence Insurance Changed From "B" to "A"—Mercantile Risks Substantially Reduced by the Fire Underwriters' Association.

Below will be found copies of letters received by City Clerk Armstrong from Mr. John Robertson, secretary of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association which show clearly what is being done for the city in this regard.

Dear Sir,—I am in receipt of your favour of yesterday respecting reductions in insurance rates in your city. I am, however, somewhat at a loss properly to understand your inquiry. You must, of course, know that a new tariff for Peterborough was issued last month, passed on a key rate of 35c. while your old rate was 60c It is true that every risk does not receive a reduction equal to 25c., but the new tariff brings about a substantial general reduction on all the mercantile business in Peterborough, and I cannot understand, therefore what the particular intention of the present inquiry is. I shall be glad to hear further from you on the subject at your convenience.—Yours truly,
JOHN ROBERTSON.

The second letter received to-day was as follows:—

Dear Sir,—I am in receipt of your favour of yesterday's date and in reply would advise that I am unable to give the details of the new key rate for Peterborough, as the figure that has been named is lower than would be brought out by the strict application of the table under which we calculated these key rates, and 35c. was named as the committee wished to give a substantial reduction on Peterborough mercantile business in recognition of the improved conditions. The rates on all three year business, viz., dwellings, offices, churches, schools, etc., fl have also been reduced, the classification of the town having for this kind of business been brought to "A" while previously it was "B".

Trusting this may give you the information you require,—Yours truly,
JOHN ROBERTSON.

ONE HUNDRED NEW STEEL LOCKERS FOR THE Y. M. C. A.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y.M.C.A., last night it was decided to install 100 new steel lockers of the latest design in the small locker room in the basement. These lockers are made of steel by The Federal Steel Fixture Company of Chicago to whom the contract was awarded. They are 42 inches high, 12 inches wide and 14 inches deep. They are fitted with threeway locker attachment and combination locks so that it will be impossible for any one but the owner to get into them. They are also well ventilated and afford lots of room. The members of the association who use the locks will be glad to learn of the board's decision in this matter.

The secretary, Mr. Hassard, notified the board that thus far he has been unable to secure a physical director of the standard required to take charge of the department this season. He will however continue his search and hopes to be successful shortly.

Kinmount Fair Was A Decided Success

The Kinmount Fair on Saturday was very well attended. The weather was all that could be wished for. There was a large number present from Lindsay, and there was a grand gathering of country people, who not only came to see the fair, but to enjoy a good visit. The young men and their best girls evidently enjoyed themselves, as there were plenty of them, and their happy faces would indicate that they they were having the time of their lives.

The side attractions were numerous. Newton and Brown's merry-go-round was there and did a good business. Ring games and other attractions manned by young men with lusty voices kept up the excitement.

The shell game in which the uninitiated are asked to put their name on the pea that is never in the place the spectator expects it to be, were operated quietly on the side, and several countrymen were relieved of several amounts before the authorities got wind of the game.

The merchants of the village did a rushing business, and all were delighted with the success of the fair.

The exhibits, while good, were not up to the usual standard, the reason being the earliness of the fair, but taking it altogether this disadvantage was compensated in other directions.

The Races

The horse races attracted quite a crowd, and the events aroused considerable interest. Mr. T. Bowes officiated as starter, Geo. Curtis, timekeeper and Messrs. Jos. Brown and D. McKenzie of Haliburton, as judges.

The following were the events

"Mud Sidewalk" On Street In South End Rouses Resident's Ire

"Did you ever see a mud sidewalk?" asked a resident of Lansdowne street of an Examiner reporter this morning. The latter replied that excepting several country lanes in Spring time he had not travelled along a walk of that variety.

"Well, you should see what the Council has done for Lansdowne street. They have overdone their generosity and have surprised the world with a new material for sidewalks. It's a "peach." You should see it. Instead of planks or cement they have taken this loamy clay out of some pit and dumped it along the north side of the street to answer the purposes that the old walk they tore up served. You would think they had more sense than that. Now, had that been put on the road no one would have noticed it, but for a sidewalk! Well, sir, it's got me. That is all I can say. The street, you know, is too narrow and private property will have to be used to widen it. The residents, themselves, say that they do not mind giving up a strip of land necessary to widen the street. One house will have to be moved back, but even the owner states that he is agreeable provided the Council will do the work. I have spoken to several of the aldermen, but they did not want to stir up the opposition of any who would be adverse to the work. You know there is always some one to object. I understand that the Township intends to build a sidewalk on the south side and you may be sure that it will not be of mud, although the lanes in the country are still in their primitive condition in that respect.

His Honour Judge Huycke Presented With Gold Watch

On Sunday afternoon last, at the close of the Sunday School session, the officers, teachers and scholars of the Methodist church Sunday School of Cobourg, took advantage of His Honour Judge Huycke's last Sunday with them, as their superintendent, to make him a presentation. His Honour was presented a handsome solid gold watch, accompanied with an address, expressing regret at his departure from their midst, and congratulating him on his elevation to the bench.

Indian From Alderville Was Fined For Having Been Drunk

Peter Cunigo, an Indian from Alderville was fined five dollars at the police court this morning for having been drunk yesterday. Peter pleaded guilty but did not know, when asked, who supplied him the liquor. He met a man on Charlotte street and he gave him the money to purchase a flask of whiskey.

He had no money to pay his fine and he had to go to gaol for ten days or until such time as someone should pay his fine.

WEDDING BELLS

WEST—DWYER.

A quiet wedding was celebrated at St. Peter's Cathedral on Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock, when Miss Josephine Dwer, the eldest daughter of the late Mrs. Ellen and John Dwyer, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. William Robert West. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Agnes, while the groom was supported by Mr. Fred Collins.

The young couple will reside in the city.

McBAIN-FAUX

A very pretty wedding was solemnized this morning at half-past nine at the residence of Mr. John Faux, 217 Rubidge street, when his youngest daughter, Miss Beatrice Lillian, was united in marriage to Mr. James Marshall McBain, second son of Mr. Jno. R. McBain, 107 Aylmer street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. G. W. Henderson of Charlotte Street Methodist Church in the presence of only the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The parlour was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The bride was given away by her father and entered the parlour to the strains of Mendelsohn's Wedding March, played by the groom's sister-in-law, Mrs. W. H. McBain, of Madoc. The young couple were unattended. The bride's little nephew, Master Harold Forsythe was flower bearer. The bride looked handsome in a princess gown of navy blue silk trimmed with all-over lace and chiffon ribbon. After the ceremony and hearty congratulations had been bestowed upon the young couple, the guests entered the dining room where a dainty dejeuner was served. Mr. and Mrs. McBain left on the 11.26 C.P.R. train for a trip to Montreal. On their return they will reside at 217 Rubidge street. The bride's going-away suit was of dark green cloth with hat to match. The bride was the recipient of many valuable gifts among which was a beautiful oak rocker from the packing department of the Quaker Oats Company. They carry with them the best wishes of a large circle of friends for future prosperity and happiness. The groom's gift to the organist was a beautiful silver sugar castor.

DAVIS—ROLLINGS.

A pretty weddin was solemnized this morning at half-past nine, at All Saints' Church, when Miss E. Rollings, late of Kidderminster, England, was united in marriage to Mr. Harry Davis, head dyer of the Brinton Carpet Works. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. R. Trumpour, and the young couple were unattended. The bride was attired in a suit of cream serge with hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Davis left for a trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls.

THE STYLE SHOW

Our Complete Exhibit

AUTUMN'S AUTHORITATIVE FEMININE FASHIONS

An Invitation is Extended to All to Attend our Supreme Achievement in the Display of Fashion's Fairest Fancies.

Special Show Days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday

On each of the above days we invite the public to witness the inauguration of the Fall styles in the feminine wearables at this store. On this important occasion will be revealed the first glimpse of the correct and elegant in Women's and Misses' outer attire for the coming season. These days will be devoted to showing rather than to selling---although these new fashions will be found so alluring and beautiful that it will be hard to resist the desire for immediate ownership.

The influence of the Moyen, Merovingian or "Middle Ages" period has proved an inspiration to fashion designers and is the dominant note in high class fashions in both Europe and America.

The salient features are shown in the lower waist line and the draping and trimmings at the hip.

In the garment to which we now invite your inspection, the new style features will be found in all their resplendent glory. Whatever is approved of Fashion is here.

Millinery Styles that Breathe Paris

Large Hats that set well down on the head and trimmed high are in great favour, but there is an immense diversity of shapes in the new styles. These we show are the most advanced fashion thought in Women's Headwear for the opening season. See them while they are exclusive. Some of the new shades are: Pea-soup Green, Chickory-cedar, Mouse-blue, Raisin and Chestnut Brown and Raven-blue.

Complete Fall Display of Dress Goods

To-morrow Marks the Initial Showing of the New Things for the Coming Season

To-morrow we will tear aside the veil and reveal the fabrics which are to hold front place in fashionable women's favour. It is the most correct delineation of Autumnal styles in dress materials in this vicinity. Nothing which would add to its attractiveness or to a more complete picturing of the new models has been omitted.

Tailored Suits of Superb Style

The New Jet Hat Pins

100 dozen of new Jet Hat-Pins, with 12-inch pin, 12 different styles to choose from—round, flat, oval and oblong styles, plain and diamond studded. This is one of the extreme novelties of the season.

Main Floor, 1st Aisle.

Separate Skirts are Smartly Stylish

Quite a variety of the new styles. The "Directoire" effect is especially noteworthy with its smart lines and dressy closed panel effect. The Moyen Age tendency of style is also exemplified in new skirt effect of which we show an unequalled assortment.

You'll find it desirable to inspect this showing. Many style ideas may be obtained. When you elect to buy, you'll also find decided advantages are presented by our prices.

Let Us Make Your Fall Costume

First-hand knowledge is always best. Modistes who spend weeks at the very fountain heads of fashion are better able to create original, stylish garments than are those whose information is derived from an ofttimes poorly illustrated fashion magazine.

We have unrivalled facilities for the making of modish garments—two well equipped dressmaking departments and a fashion service par excellence. Our two designers have just returned from Paris, and their information will be yours for the asking. Insure the correctness of the Fall Costume by having it made here.

Do You Wear Kabo Corsets?

The Kabo Corsets For This Season Are Working Wonders in Producing the Long Graceful Lines That Fashion Demands.

When you wonder how you are going to get the slender waist line with the small hips that are required by present fashions, buy a Kabo Corset, style No. 1000, and you'll find that it gives you the form you wish.

Smart Fancy Belts

You will find at our Belt counter an infinite variety of Women's Belts—some extreme novelties bought while our Buyer was in Paris. Dozens and dozens of stunning effects which no other store can show.

All Priced Very Reasonably.

Women's Smart Gloves

The proper new shades in street and evening Gloves for every occasion are here in abundant variety—gloves of Cashmere, Silk, Kid and Suede.

Better gloves cannot be bought in the Dominion at the prices we have marked them.

Beautiful Fancy Handkerchiefs of the Finest Linen

The collection of Handkerchiefs which our Buyer assembled when in Europe, embraces the very newest effects in fine embroidered linens, white linens, from the best looms in Ireland.

CHOOSE YOUR MILLINERY

OUR OPENING WEEK

Each season demands that every woman shall have a new Hat. A man may wear his last season's hat again this season. The change in style is not so noticeable in Men's Hats as it is in Women's, therefore it is imperative that a Woman get new Millinery each season. The styles for this season are very chic. When you buy a new hat, an article of which it is so hard to tell the value, must you not trust to one thing—reliability? We entrust our department to expert hands. When your Hat comes from our establishment it is "correct", and the price is within moderation. The values are top notchers.

Our large airy parlours are aglow with the finest harvest we have ever reaped—a veritable feast of fashion awaits the beauty-loving woman, real models from Dame Fashion's Hands, copies of, and original French designs. Can you imagine these?

Picture this charming French Pattern Hat, large in shape, jauntily caught up at the side, black velvet facing, and a huge drape crown of white chiffon, finished with a pair of handsome white wings. Another very striking model is the Grey Beaver, very large shape, almost flat, with the left side artistically caught up with natural uncurled Ostrich Feathers.

One of the features of the display is the large Russian Turban of black with gold trimmings and handsome coque mount caught with a beautiful cavachon; and yet none outshine the chic model of Amethyst Pressed Beaver. This Hat has a band of dull green beaver cloth; the side is caught up with a natural coque in "bird of Paradise effect". Is there a woman who would not go in raptures over a smart street hat? This hat of green felt is trimmed in the new aeroplane shades.

We join hands with the women of Peterborough in their praise of Paris' 1909-10 choice of Millinery. Our stock is a creditable display of the favoured styles for this season. An exclusive well chosen exhibit awaits you at Cressman's.

Wall Decorations, Elegant

From the modest abode to the finest mansion is the limit of our department. We can supply you with papers for all rooms in any house, office or any building. Our ideas are abreast with the times.

POTATO MULTIPLIES BY TWENTY-FIVE

Three Pounds Yielded Seventy-five Pounds When Hills Were Dug Up Last Week.

There is some distinction to the potatoes Mr. John Williams secured from the Guelph Agricultural College, and planted as an experiment. His property is south of St. Peter's Cemetery, and in one corner he sowed three pounds of the new variety on May 15th. On Friday, the 10th of September, he dug up the hills in which he had planted his samples and on weighing them was delighted to find that the paltry handful of three pounds had yielded seventy-five pounds. Mr. Williams considers this class of potato worth planting and recommends it to others, who are interested in the culture of this vegetable.

"DADDY" TAYLOR ACHIEVES DOUBLE CROP TRIUMPH

"Daddy" Taylor, the custodian of His Majesty's Custom's premises, is known as a most enthusiastic and successful floriculturist and horticulturist; and he has added to his laurels by producing a second crop of string beans this season off the same soil. The pods are of first-class quality, some of them measuring nine inches in length, and as crisp as a toothache temper. While the result of this double crop and its quality are largely due to Mr. Taylor's horticultural skill, he is inclined to lay stress upon the fact that he is the servant of a Liberal Government, which introduced the fashion of "growing time" into Canada, and co-relates effect and cause accordingly.

Opening Of Mr. Wm. E. Lech's New Fur And Hat Establishment

An Independent New Business Opened Up in Elegantly Appointed New Premises at 366 George Street.

The name of William Lech in relation to furs and fur goods was for nearly forty years a synonym in Peterborough of solidity and superior quality, and the same idea is to be associated with his son, Mr. Wm. E. Lech, who had the advantage of 27 years of training with the purchasing and manufacturing and business methods of his father.

Mr. Wm. E. Lech, having completely severed his connection with the firm of Wm. Lech & Sons, has established an entirely independent fur and hat business at 366 George street.

Here he has had fitted up an elegantly appointed shop, modern in every way, devoted to the sale of first-class furs, hats, and naturally allied goods.

At the street in front of the premises a deeply recessed vestibule, flanked on either side by plate glass display windows, and forming the main entrance, is floored with marble mosaic with a realistic centre-piece representing a tiger saltant with the name "Wm. E. Lech" in bronze in the street border.

The Interior.

The interior is strikingly effective, both in appearance and utility. On either side of the first sixty feet of depth is placed a range of deep cabinet wardrobes in polished, golden quarter-cut oak, adapted to containing in comparatively small space, but with effective display a large quantity of stock. The south side is devoted to fur goods and the northern side to hats, etc.

At the rear of this elegant shop a space of about 20 feet in depth is reserved for a fitting department. On each side are similar cabinet wardrobes and the further end is beautifully finished with a setting of plate-glass mirrors. In the middle is a crystal dome, composed of hundreds of cut glass squares, the inner rim of the base of the dome being set with miniature opaline electric globes. This crystal dome is supported by round columns of polished golden quarter-cut oak. The mirrors are very effectively arranged so as to reflect and reproduce the whole shop, while a recess enclosed on three sides, with mirror plate, permits a lady customer a view of every aspect of her figure. This fitting department is splendidly lighted by a skylight, and the artificial light is electrical, the latest improvements, as represented by the tungsten lamp, being installed. Above the entrance doors a range of luxfer prisms, projects daylight into the interior.

The establishment opens to-morrow with a complete, well-chosen, and varied stock of furs of all kinds, and of the highest quality, and hats in the latest styles. This stock is in charge of a capable staff. Miss Agnes McFadden has charge of the fur department, and Mr. J. H. Fraser serves in the hat department.

Mr. Wm. E. Lech opens business on his own account, in commodious premises, fitted up with a solid elegance, typical of the character of the establishment, and presents strong claims upon the public patronage warranted by goods of the highest quality, reliability and courteous service.

City Will Wait Another Week For Proposition From C. P. R.

His Worship the Mayor brought up the matter of the water front at the Committee of the Whole Council. He reminded the council that the C.P.R. was heard from. That was some weeks ago and nothing has been heard of the matter since. The Peterborough Canoe Company are very anxious to get that portion of the land at the rear of their factory so that they can go ahead with the enlargement of their factory.

The committee, however, decided that the mayor should write Mr. Leonard of the C.P.R. and ask him for the company's proposition re the water front to be submitted at once. —Carried.

Disposed Of Entire Exhibit At The Toronto Exhibition

Ald. H. Morgan and Mr. Will Richardson of the Peterborough Canoe Company, returned from Toronto on Monday evening, where they had been in charge of the Company's exhibit at the Toronto Exhibition. It was shown in the new transportation building, and consisted of a twenty-foot gasoline launch, with a fourteen-foot dinghy, cedar rib, canvas covered mahogany strip, varnished basswood, and painted canoes, and two skiffs. The entire exhibit was sold and many more orders taken. This is the second year that the Peterborough Canoe Co. have shown at the Toronto exhibition.

THE RETURN OF "THE BURGOMASTER"

DON'T FAIL TO SEE HIM.

W. P. Cullen has made a big revival of Pixley and Luder's famous musical comedy success, "The Burgomaster." and will present it at the Grand Opera House, Thursday, Sept. 16, with a large cast, headed by Harry Hermsen, in the role of the genial old Peter Stuyvesant, burgomaster of New Amsterdam, the gay youth who leads the Governor around New York when he is reincarnated. The company will number 50 people. The production is an especially handsome one. The costumes have been revised and are all new. Especial attention has been paid by Mr. Cullen to the voices of the chorus, as well as to the beauty of the feminine portion. "The Burgomaster" was the first of the Pixley and Luder pieces to gain popularity, others being "The Prince of Pilsen," "King Dodo," and "The Grand Mogul." The music is of the singing and whistling variety, and it is said that more copies of "The Tale of the Kangaroo,, and "I Love You," have been sold than of any other songs brought out in musical comedies. The plan is now open.

FOUR TEAMS IN JUNIOR SERIES SCHEDULE OPENS SEPT. 25

Junior City League Was Gotten Under Way at a Meeting of the Executive Last Night--Senior League is Held Over Until Another Team Can be Induced to Enter---Age Limit is Decided Upon.

The Junior City Rugby League will open a week from Saturday with four teams in the race.

This was decided at a meeting of the executive of the Peterborough Rugby Club last night in the armouries at which there were present President D. Walker, in the chair; Dr. A. W. MacPherson, Secretary-treasurer F. D. Craig, Geo. Lundy and Geo. Armstrong of the executive committee. J. D. Clarke, J. Deannard representing T.A.S. Juniors, W. O'Brien, T.A.S. Seniors; G. Minorgan and W. Gibson, Collegiate Institute.

The first point discussed was the age limit and it was decided that junior players must be under twenty-one on October 2nd of the present year. The age limit will be strictly adhered to and only players under the mark mentioned will be allowed to play.

The drawing up of the schedule was left in the hands of Secretary Craig and he has arranged the following list of games.

Sept. 25.—Rough Riders vs. T.A.S. Collegiate vs. Y.M.C.A.
Oct. 2nd.—T.A.S. vs. Collegiate Y.M.C.A. vs. Rough Riders.
Oct. 9.—Y.M.C.A. vs. T.A.S. Rough Riders vs. Collegiate.
Oct. 16—Collegiate vs. Y.M.C.A. T.A.S. vs. Rough Riders.
Oct. 23—Collegiate vs. T.A.S. Rough Riders vs. Y.M.C.A.
Oct. 30—Rough Riders vs. Collegiate T.A.S. vs. Y.M.C.A.

This schedule is liable to be changed somewhat if necessary to avoid conflicting with O.R.F.U. games.

The offer of the owners of the Riverside grounds for practice and games for the season was accepted and the executive will make arrangements as to practice hours of the different teams.

The only two senior teams represented were the T.A.S. and Strathconas. There was some discussion over the senior league proposition and it was decided to leave the matter over until another meeting. In the meantime an effort will be made to induce another senior team to enter. There is a possibility that the 57th Regiment may put in a team, but it is not likely tha. the Y.M.C.A. will be entered this season. A proposal was made last night that O.R.F.U. players should be barred from participating in the League. It was pointed out in this connection that if the teams depended upon O.R.F.U. players they might be seriously embarassed in the event of an O.R.F.U. game falling upon the same day as they were scheduled to play. Nothing definite was decided along that line however.

The question of admission charges, etc., was left in the hands of the executive who are to make all arrangements.

PETERBOROUGH TO BE GROUPED WITH ONE OF TORONTO CLUBS

Four Teams Will Likely Fight it Out in the Senior Series of the O. R. F. U. This Year---First Game Will Likely be Played in Toronto on First Saturday in October.

With four teams in the O.R.F.U. senior series it is likely that Peterborough will be grouped with one of the Toronto teams in one district, while Dundas and the ther Toronto club will form the other section, the winners playing off.

This was the proposition made over the long distance phone by Roy Clarke, Secretary of the O.R.F.U., to Dr. MacPherson of the local club and the Peterborough Secretary is writing to the effect that the plan will be acceptable here.

The four clubs in the senior series are likely to be Parkdale Canoe Club and T.A.A.C. of Toronto, Peterborough and Dundas, although the entry of the latter team is problemate. In the event of Dundas not entering, the two Toronto teams will play off. Peterborough being given a bye and playing the winners. Of course the Kingston team may enter which will upset the calculations somewhat.

The local seniors will have their first practice at Riverside Park on Saturday after the ball game and there will be a meeting of all the players that night to talk over the prospects. The meeting will be held in the armouries.

THE EASTERN LEAGUE RACE IS VERY EXCITING JUST NOW

The Eastern League is furnishing a better race than the American or National Leagues. The first three teams have a chance for the bunting. Toronto, of course has not as good prospects as the teams in front, but, going as they are now, they will soon be near the top.

The Newark club appears to have a good chance to beat out Rochester for the pennant, being now but six points back of the Hustlers. McGinnity's crew has the one great advantage of finishing the year at home, while Rochester, like the Leafs, takes the road to finish its string of games.

Providence is still in the running, but has been a disappointment in the last two weeks. Toronto must be reckoned with. There is just about time left for the Maple Leafs to cut in and cause some heartbreaking. Buffalo appears safely landed at the top of the second division. The herd is not likely to be passed by Montreal. The cellar position is still very much undecided. Montreal, Baltimore or Jersey City being the likely ones to land last.

Last week Rochester won four and lost the same number. Newark won five and dropped three. Providence, like Rochester, broke even, four each way. Toronto got there with six victories, and but two losses, the best showing of all. Buffalo and Montreal won three, losing five. Baltimore and Jersey City beat the Bisons and Royals a bit, the Orioles taking in four and letting out five. Jersey City captured three and lost four.

This will be a very interest g week in Eastern League circles, and the work of the top teams will be watched with much interest.

GAVE UP "NAILS" TO PLAY BALL

HARRY OTIS

West New York, N.J., Sept. 14.—"Do I know Harry Otis? Well I do that, young fellow. I've knowed Harry since he was knee-high to a Hacksnack skeeter. I hear he's playing big league base ball now. I want to know."

Joshua Carew, oldest inhabitant of this thriving village, which is located just across the Hudson from 42nd st., New York proper, was plainly willing to talk about West New York's only representative in the major leagues, the young south-paw, Otis, who stood the White Sox on their heads the first time he was tried out by Jim McGuire.

"I remember when Harry quit school. Let's see, he must a been about 14 an' big for his age. I allow, none of us thought much about the boy then. He just hung around the corner, drinking beer and smokin' them there cigarets until he began to cough like a lunger.

"'Bout this time a young feller named Pastor, who was a ball player, come here and hired Harry to throw to him. Them boys got to be thicker'n thieves and pretty soon I noticed that Harry give up his old habits. He told me that 'Pastor said he'd make a great pitcher if he'd stop smokin' and drinkin'.

"Well, sir, that there boy used to practise every day and pretty soon his pale cheeks disappeared and his eye got healthy and he began to look like a man. I guess he did fair to middlin' down in Carolina, where he pitched for the Goldsboro nine. I heerd as how he won 21 and lost nine games. What's that? He beat the great Chicago team, too? Well, I swan. I knowed there was something in that boy all the time."

RUGBY

"Dee" Taylor of last year's Argonaut back division, who has been stationed at Niagara Falls Ont., was in the city Saturday, and said that he'd be back for good in a short time. He will play rugby again with the Argnauts.—Toronto Globe.

Montreal started off the season with a dozen players in uniform on Saturday. The men went through some kicking and passing practice. The cots are now being installed at the club house, and those players who wish can start at once sleeping overnight at the grounds.

• • • •

The Hamilton Tigers had their first workout on Saturday at the cricket grounds. There was a good turnout, but a number of last year's team, who have so far not made up their minds to play, graced the touch lines. Ben Simpson was in uniform, and he demonstrated that his kicking leg is as good as ever.

Eleven events make up the championship programme of the Provincial meet of the C.A.A.U., which is to be held under I.C.A.C. auspices on the night of September 22 at Scarboro' Beach. The list of events includes the 100, 220, 440, 880 yards, one mile and ten miles runs, one mile relay race, two miles walk, running broad jump, 56-pound weight and 16-pound shot.

In the one mile relay race, which is for teams of four, two men will run 220 yards, one 440 yards and one 880 yards. This arrangement will enable every club to use their best men at the different distances.

The I.C.A.C. boys' events, which are open to club members under sixteen years of age, are as follows: 100 yards handicap and 880 yards handicap. Besides these there is a two miles ladies' walk.

Entries close Saturday with the joint I.C.A.C. Secretaries Tom Hennessey, 55 Simcoe street, or Wm Gladish, The News, Toronto.

The Argos are said to be in need of a good centre half to make the team strong in all departments. The oarsmen may develop a man from the bunch of good material.

McGregor Easson, one of the Stratford family of athletes of that name will be a candidate for the Rough Riders. He weighs 190 and is considerably over six feet in height. Emmerson, formerly of the University of Cincinnati, will also try for the Ottawa team.

The Hamilton Tiger management announce that Art Turner, who was a star half-back with Queen's for the past four years, has accepted a place on the Hamilton team's back division this year. Craig and Binkley, crack players on the Dundas intermediate team last year, will play with the Tigers.

T.A.A.C. held their initial practice at Moss Park Rink yesterday afternoon. The unusually warm weather prevented anything like a real workout being attempted. Only a few of the players were in uniform, but a large number indulged in the fun of kicking the pigskin around. Most of the men out were new material and of a promising type. The majority of the members of last year's team are expected out in the course of the next few days.

There promises to be plenty of senior Rugby in Toronto this autumn. The Parkdale Canoe Club, last year's Canadian junior Champions and one of the best drilled teams that ever played n Toronto, have decided to play senior O.R.F.U., with Toronto A.A.C., Peterborough and Dundas. The schedule will be arranged this week. Varsity will play as usual in the Intercollegiate, and Argos in the Interprovincial.

Brilliant Player Quits

Ottawa, Sept. 14.—Jack Williams, the brilliant centre half of the Ottawa football team, who has been slated for the captaincy, stated last night positively that he was out of football for good.

Williams, who had his right knee badly injured while playing hockey with the Cliffsides in the Interprovincial Amateur League last winter, and who was in the hospital for a month, and then on crutches for three weeks as the result, explains that he has been ordered too quit the game.

"Doctors tell me that I must quit football or carry a wooden leg," remarked Williams, "and I certainly don't want a wooden leg."

None of the old-timers have turned out yet, however, and it is almost certain that only one or two of those who were at the first practice last Saturday will catch places.

Kingston for the O.R.F.U.

Kingston, Sept. 14.—Kingston can have a team in the senior O.R.F.U. series if the sports will get together and work. There is abundant material, men ready to play if a good management can be secured. The backing of the 14th Regiment and Yacht Club would give strength to the organization. Crawford, Dickson, Bearance, Brch, Moxley, Mooney, Nelson, Revells, Donnelly, Wilkinson, Crozier, Davies, Dick, Laird ,Van Horn and many others are around the city, and would all turn out again if things were started.

That hot, dry eczematous condition of the skin will disappear by the use of Miller's Compound Iron Pills. 50 doses, 25 cents.—Wm. Madill, Druggist.

Keep an Eye Open for the Imitation Man

There are a hundred imitations of Semi-ready Tailoring—but the man who knows will prefer the genuine to the counterfeit.

There is only one "Semi-ready"—you can readily tell an imitation from the genuine.

Even though the former may have outward resemblance—for on every Semi-ready garment there is a woven silk label—on which appears the plain price and the Trade Mark. On a coat it is sewn on the inside breast pocket—like this:

"Like This!"

"A Child of the Forest"
This is one of the best pictures of Western Life ever shown on a curtain. It is useless to try to explain it. You must see it to know how good it is. It depicts the gratitude of a squaw for the white man because her dying child was saved from death by a priest. The Indian child when older saves the life of a settler's daughter, returning his mother's gratitude. It is a most beautifully told story and should be seen by all visitors to our Fair.
"THE WILD ASS SKIN"
This picture is taken from Balzac's famous story and is a masterpiece in photography and artistic acting. It is the story of the discouraged artist who intends suicide, but who finds he can be rich and happy, but only for a time, by purchasing the "Wild Ass Skin." The skin shrinks day by day as his pleasures increase, until the end, when the skin disappears, as well as the artist. It is one of Pathe's latest and best pictures.
Mr. Loftus will sing one of the latest songs—"Monkey Doodle Dandy."

TWO SOLDIERS DYNAMITE CHINESE CAFE

BOMB DID ITS WORK

Chop Suey Restaurant on York Street Is Wrecked by Bomb Placed Under Table — Trooper Woodward of Stanley Barracks and Young Englishman Named Wilkinson Are Charged With Crime.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—The metropolitan crime of wrecking by means of a bomb, which has been unpleasantly common in Chicago, and other American cities was introduced to the Toronto police at 10 o'clock last night when the Chinese restaurant run by Sam Lee at 209 York street, was demolished by a bomb placed under a table in the centre of the dining-room of the resturant.

Two men, the only two who had been in the place for some time before the explosion, are under arrest charged with placing the explosive, but declare that they know nothing of the matter. The police, however, say that they have evidence that on entering the place, a trooper at Stanley Barracks, showed a bulge in his pocket and remarked significantly, "There will be something doing here to-night, shooters."

The explosion was heavy and could be heard for blocks and in a moment or two a large crowd had gathered about the little restaurant, the heavy plate glass front of which was blown out into the street.

The story told by Queenie Oliver, waitress and cashier, and the only white employe of the place, is minute in all save that it fails to supply any motive for the crime. Queenie who is about 20 years of age and a slight, rather plain-looking girl, was in the place at the time and had a miraculous escape from death or serious injury.

She says she was in the place when the two men, Trooper George Woodward, 24 years of age, of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, an Englishman, and Herbert Wilkinson, English, 19 years, who has only been two days in the city, came in. They ordered temperance beer and sat at a table near the door. They drank the beer and then went to a table about the centre of the room and close to the northwall. She sat at the cashier's desk, which is beside the window and separated from the table by a heavy curtain. The men did not order anything at this table and in a minute or two got up and went rapidly out of the front door. A moment later there was a terrific explosion. Tables, chairs and dishes were thrown about like hail and the heavy glass front was thrown into the street. When the dust and debris had subsided she looked about on a place which resembled an earthquake relic.

In a moment a number of police had gathered. Inspector Wm. Davis of No. 1 division, in which the place is situated, was at Bay and Adelaide street. He rapidly made his way to the scene and ordered the soldier into custody. This was done by Policeman Sockett. Inspector Davis himself picked out Wilkinson, who had stayed to see the wreck. Both were hurried to the Court street station.

Acid Thrower Set Free.

Kingston, Sept. 16.—"He ruined my life, and I intended to ruin his." Thus spoke Mrs. Flossie Taylor, aged 18, and pretty, as she stood in the Police Court charged with assaulting Percy Willis by throwing carbolic acid at him. Willis escaped serious burns. Mrs. Taylor kept company with Willis before marrying Taylor, and alleges that Willis laughed and jeered at her on the street. Judge Price allowed her to go on suspended sentence.

Golden Flood Begins.

Fort William, Sept. 16.—Wheat is beginning to arrive in the city in large quantities, and for the first time this season the elevators were working overtime Tuesday night.

Shipping is still, however, slow, and yesterday the Wahoondah, Fairmount and barge Ungava are in the river empty, and waiting orders.

Shooting Was Accidental.

Stratford, Sept. 16.—Yesterday afternoon, before Judge Barron, William Young, aged 17, of Elma Township, was arraigned on the charge of shooting Malcolm McLellan on Aug. 5. Evidence taken went to show that the shooting was accidental, and the young man was discharged.

NOBLEMAN IS DEAD

British Nobleman, Who as First Lord of the Admiralty Came Into the Limelight In Connection With Correspondence With Kaiser Two Years Ago, Succumbs—He Resigned Two Years Ago.

London, Sept. 16.—Edward Majoribanks, second Baron Tweedmouth, who was First Lord of the Admiralty in the Campbell-Bannerman administration, and later Lord President of the Council, died last night. He was born in 1849.

He was a brother of Lady Aberdeen.

Publication of private correspondence between Kaiser William and himself on naval matters a couple of years ago caused such a flutter that he resigned from the administration. Later his health was shattered and his mind affected.

Horse Troughs Spread Disease.

Chicago, Sept. 16.—Public watering troughs for horses were condemned by the state veterinary of Missouri, Dr. F. D. Luckey, and by Dr. Schoenletzen of Kansas at Tuesday's session of the interstate association of live stock sanitary boards. Dr. Schoenletzen said they disseminated glanders.

Dr. J. M. Wright, state veterinarian of Illinois, asserted the public watering trough was in no way a spreader of disease if the water in it were kept running. Dr. Luckey said that in Massachusetts the public watering trough was responsible for the infliction of glanders upon 1,000 horses.

Great Show at St. Kitts.

St. Catharines, Ont., Sept. 16.—The Pomological Society is now in full swing. In addition, the Niagara District Horticultural Exhibition was formerly opened last night by Hon. J. S. Duff, Minister of Agriculture. The display of flowers and fruit is one of the best ever seen in Canada. The show is being held in the armory which is resplendant with choicest fruit and rarest flowers. Even the guns of the seventh field battery have been removed for the occasion. The battery fires at sun down and sun rise every day.

Robinson's Easy Escape.

Warren, Sept. 16.—James Robinson, wanted for infanticide, captured on Tuesday, after a month's chase, says that after he escaped from the constables on August 9, he hid around his own farm for two days, and then made his way to Callender, where he got employment. He returned to his home in hopes of meeting his wife. Instead he met his brother-in-law, Rev. Peter Matheson, who had come to see that the crops were harvested, and he overpowered the fugitive, and carried him, bound, to town.

Eight Killed.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 16.—As the result of a head-on collision between passenger train No. 4 and fast freight No. 51 on the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway, one mile west of Pegram station, Tenn., yesterday, eight men were killed, one seriously injured, and a number of the others reported more or less hurt. No passengers were killed. The cars caught fire and several victims were cremated.

The wreck was caused by the overlooking of orders.

Going to Schomberg Picnic.

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—Hon. George P. Graham, Hon. Mackenzie King and Hon. Charles Murphy left last night for Aurora, North York, to attend the political picnic to-day.

Messrs. Graham and Murphy will also speak at the banquet of the Manufacturers' Association at Hamilton in the evening.

Jail For Stealing a Ride.

Brantford, Sept. 16.—James McAneney and David Lawrence, two Toronto men, were caught yesterday stealing a ride on a Grand Trunk engine from London, and were sent down for 30 days.

WANT BOARD FOR TARIFF

Ontario Act Is Attacked by Wm. Robbins of Walkerville — Resolutions Passed Against Election Day Holidays and Favoring Higher Forfeit For Candidates—Ask For Lower Express Minimum.

Hamilton, Ont., Sept. 16.—The Canadian Manufacturers' Association yesterday unanimously passed a resolution asking Parliament to appoint a permanent tariff commission.

The decision was in private.

Resolutions against the making of election days holidays, and in favor of raising the forfeit for candidates from $200 to $500 were passed also.

The Ontario Assessment Act was criticised by Wm. Robbins, Walkerville, who said it was illogical and discouraged the improvement of factory property. W. K. McNaught, M.P.P., Toronto, challenged Mr. Robbins to suggest improvements to the act, and Mr. Robbins replied that it was the Government's business to do that. A. E. Kemp, Toronto, claimed that the new act was much superior to the old act, under which manufacturers were taxed on the amount of paid up capital. Mr. Robbins' resolution, condemning the act was defeated.

The association decided that the onus of proving a worker's age in connection with the employment of minors should be on the parents of the employed.

On motion of J. F. Ellis, Toronto, the following resolution was passed:

"Whereas the Dominion Insurance Act, as passed by the House of Commons at the last session, contained a clause providing for the furnishing of a return and the payment of a tax on all insurance placed with companies not registered in Canada, and whereas this is being followed by a movement on the part of the companies forming the Canadian underwriters, to have legislation enacted which will make it impossible for the insured in Canada to place insurance in unregistered companies; and whereas such legislation would prohibit the use of Canadian insurers of mutual and reciprocal and British underwriters, therefore be it resolved that the association, while recognizing always the principle of protection, place itself on record as strongly opposed to any legislation that would impair or prohibit the continual use by Canadians of the valued service by unregistered companies."

The association took up the question of express rates, and decided to make an attempt to get the minimum charge reduced to 20 cents.

Speaking on the subject of transportation, T. L. Moffatt, Weston, urged the members to patronize a competitive steamship service from Montreal and Pacific ports, so as to force the railways to reduce their rates. Alex. Saunders, Goderich, spoke in favor of a general central rate between Canadian ports and outside points. A resolution, moved by R. S. Gourlay, Toronto, seeking to impose charges for rebates, was withdrawn.

The tariff committee reported that as it was generally understood that the Government did not intend making many alterations in the tariff during the last session of Parliament, only a few general matters were attended to. The committee invites the association to discuss the question of a permanent Dominion tariff commission.

Spotters at Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, Sept. 16.—As the result of a visit of License Detectives Austin and Fartanglo to the Soo during August, fines in the Police Court yesterday amounted to $842. Benny Scipliano, a west end Italian, was found guilty on three charges and fined $460. Marcello Mancoso was fined $257 and the Algoma Hotel $125.

A vote on local option takes place here in January. The best lawyers available were secured to conduct the cases for the defence.

Split Among Labor Men.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 16.—According to a telegram from Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, the charter of the Central Trades and Labor Union, with which practically all local labor bodies are affiliated, has been irrevocably revoked. The central association refused to obey an order to expel delegates of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, outlawed by the American Federation.

Twenty Thousand Dollar Fire.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Sept. 16.—Over $20,000 loss was caused by fire which started at the Niagara Falls Planing Co.'s mill, at 8 o'clock last night. The mill and offices are completely destroyed and lumber which can be realized on, amounts to only about $2,500. The stock and building were not fully insured. A small cottage adjoining the mill was also destroyed. The fire is said to have started among shavings in the planing-room.

NON-POISONOUS

Recommended by
Ontario Agricultural College Guelph, Ontario

They report Bug Death has made an excellent record in each of the past two years. The potatoes on which the Bug Death was applied were more vigorous in growth and greener in appearance throughout each of the seasons than those on which other applications were made.

DO YOU WANT BETTER CROPS?

Of course you do. Well, the way is clear. Use Bug Death and you'll not only have a heavier crop, but larger potatoes of better quality.

Write or call and we'll tell you some more good things of this celebrated Bug Killer and Fertiliser, both in one.

THE Princess Virginia

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON,
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor," "Rosemary in Search of a Father," Etc. &c &c

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

Virginia's burden grew heavy as she mounted, though at first its weight had seemed trifling. When she had waved her handkerchief at the turning and passed out of Miss Portman's sight it occurred to her that it would be clever to lighten the rucksack and satisfy her appetite at the same time.

The one difficulty was that in her present position she could not safely unstrap the bag from her shoulders, open it, take out the parcel of luncheon and strap it on again. The way was too narrow and the rocks too slippery to attempt such liberties. At a short distance, however, and only a little out of the path to the col she could see a small green plateau, the very place for a rest. But could she reach it? The girl stood still and looked wistfully across.

The place could be gained only by a scramble over a ledge of formidable rocks and climbing in good earnest here and there, yet if the thing could be done at all it could be done in ten minutes, and to come back would be comparatively easy. Virginia was tempted.

"The dear Letitia will be eating her own lunch by this time and won't miss me if my half hour is a long one," she thought. "And, anyway, I said half an hour or so. That means almost anything when it comes to an argument."

Another moment and the girl had started. She was brave at first, but when she had gone halfway—a way which was longer and far more difficult than she had fancied—she was conscious of a certain sinking of the heart. She even felt some qualms of sympathy with the sentiments and intentions Miss Portman had expressed and heartily wished herself back by that good lady's side, but it was against her principles to be conquered, especially when being conquered meant turning coward or something like it, and she scrambled on obstinately, her cheeks burning, her heart thumping and her lips pressed together.

What a grim, remorseless giant the mountain was, and what a mere creeping fly upon its vast shoulder she! Little cared the old mountain that she was a royal princess and that the emperor who ruled the land of which it was part had the intention of marrying her. It would thwart that imperial intention without a qualm nor turn a pebble if the poor little princess toppled over its cruel shoulder and fell in a small, crushed heap without ever having looked upon the face of the Rhaetian emperor.

Then there came a later moment when, like Miss Portman, whom she so recently laughed to scorn, the princess felt that she could neither go on nor go back. She was horribly homesick. She wanted her mother and the garden at Hampton Court and would hardly have thrown a glance of interest at Leopold if he had appeared before her eyes. There were tears in those eyes, and she was hating the mountain and all Rhaetia with her whole strength when from the mysterious distance around the corner of the plateau there came the sound of a man's voice cheerfully yodeling.

Never had a sound been so welcome or seemed so sweet. It was to Virginia as the voice of an angel. "Help," she called—"help!" first in English and then, on second thought, in Rhaetian.

The yodeling abruptly stopped, and a man appeared round a corner of rock beyond the green plateau. The sun shone in his eyes, and he shaded them with his hand to look up at her. Virginia stared hopefully, expectantly. A glance photographed a tall figure in a gray coat passemolled with green, a soft green cap of felt, short trousers, bare knees, knitted stockings, nailed boots; thank heaven, no tourist, but evidently a mountain man, a guide or a chamois hunter perhaps—at all events, one capable of coming to her rescue. These things she saw and thought in a flash, and then the brown hand that had shaded his eyes dropped. She caught sight of his face.

It was the emperor.

A moment ago she had felt that she could look at him with indifference and would a thousand times over prefer a glimpse of the dear old house at Hampton Court, with an easy way to reach it, but now everything was changed. There was no longer any danger. He was there. He was coming to help her. A power higher than his had arranged this as their first encounter and would not have taken the trouble to bring him to her here if the meeting were to end in ignominy or disaster.

He had run across the plateau. Now the nailed boots were ringing on rock. She could gaze down upon his head, he was so close to her. He was looking up. What a noble face it was—better than all the pictures! And the eyes—

Virginia was suddenly and wildly happy. She could have sung for joy, a song of triumph, and, losing her head a little, she lost her scant foothold as well, slipped, tried to hold on, failed and slid down the steeply sloping rock.

If the man had not sprung forward and caught her she would probably have rolled over the narrow ledge on which he stood and gone bounding down, down the mountain side to her death, but he did catch her and broke the fall, so that she landed lightly beside him and within an ace of being on her knees.

After all, it had been a narrow escape, but the man's arms were so strong and his eyes so brave that Virginia scarcely realised the danger she had passed. It seemed so inevitable now that he must have saved her that there was room in her thoughts for no dreadful might have been. Was it not the one man sent to her by destiny, when if this thing had not been meant since the hour of her birth it might easily have been some mere tourist sent by Cook?

All her life had led up to this moment. Under the soft hat of green felt adorned with the beard of a chamois was the face she had seen in dreams. A dark, austere young face it was, with more of Mars than Apollo in its lines, yet to her more desirable than all the ideals of all the sculptors since the world began. He was dressed as a chamois hunter, and there was nothing in the well worn, almost shabby, clothes to distinguish the wearer from the type he chose to represent, but as easily might the eagle, to which in her heart she likened him, try to pass for a barnyard fowl as this man for a peasant. So thought the princess.

CHAPTER FOUR.

So she had gone on her knees to him after all—or almost. She was glad her mother did not know, and she hoped that he did not feel the pulsing of the blood in her fingers as he took her hand and lifted her to her feet. There was shame in this tempest that swept through her veins because he did not share it, for to her, though this meeting was an epoch, to him it was no more than a trivial incident. She would have keyed his emotions to hers if she could, but since she had had years of preparation, he a single moment, perhaps she might have been consoled for the disparity could she have read his eyes. They said, if she had known, "Is the sky raining goddesses today?"

Now, what were to be her first words to him? Dimly she felt that if she were to profit by this wonderful chance to know the man and not the emperor—this chance which might be lost in a few moments unless her wit befriended her—those words should be beyond the common. She should be able to marshal her sentences as a general marshals his battalions, with a plan of campaign for each.

A spirit monitor—a matchmaking monitor—whispered these wise advices in her ear, yet she was powerless to profit by them. Like a schoolgirl about to be examined for a scholarship, knowing that all the future might depend upon an hour of the present, the dire need to be resourceful, to be brilliant, left her dumb.

How many times had she not thought of her first conversation with Leopold of Rhaetia, planning the first words, the first looks, which must make him know that she was different from any other girl he had ever met! Yet here she stood, speechless, epigrams turning tail and racing away from her like a troop of playful colts refusing to be caught.

And so it was the emperor who spoke before Virginia's savoir faire came back.

"I hope you're not hurt?" asked the chamois hunter in the patois dear to the heart of Rhaetian mountain folk.

She had been glad before, now she was thankful, that she had spent many weeks and months in loving study of the tongue which was Leopold's. It was not the metier of a chamois hunter to speak English, though the emperor was said to know the language well, and she rejoiced in her ability to answer the chamois hunter as he would be answered, keeping up the play.

"I am hurt only in the pride that comes before a fall," she replied, forcing a laugh. "Thank you many times for saving me."

"I feared that I frightened you and made you lose your footing," the chamois hunter answered.

"I think, on the contrary, if it hadn't been for you I should have lost my life," said Virginia. "There should be a sign put up on that tempting plateau, 'All Except Suicides Beware.'"

"The necessity never occurred to us, my mates and me," returned the man in the gray coat passemolled with green. "Until you came, gnat' fraulein, no tourist that I know of has found it tempting."

Virginia's eyes lit with a sudden spark. The spirit monitor—that matchmaking monitor—came back and dared her to a frolic, such a frolic, she thought, as no girl on earth had ever had or would have after her. And she could show this grave soldier-hero of hers something new in life—something quite new—which it would not harm him to know. Then, let come what would out of this adventure, at worst she should always have an Olympian episode to remember.

"Until I came?" she caught up his words, standing carefully on the spot where he had placed her. "But I am no tourist. I am an explorer."

He lifted level, dark eyebrows, smiling faintly, and when he smiled half his austerity was gone.

So beautiful a girl as this need not rise beyond agreeable commonplaces of mind and speech to please a man. Indeed, this particular chamois hunter expected no more than good looks, a good heart and a nice manner from women. Yet this beauty bade fair, it seemed, to hold surprises in reserve.

"I have brought down noble game today," he said to himself, and aloud: "I know the Schneeborn well and love it well. Still I can't see what rewards it has for the explorer—unless, gnat'

MAY BE RAPIDLY AND EFFECTUALLY CURED BY THE USE OF

DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY

The medicine with a record of cures extending over 65 years. You don't experiment when you buy it.

MRS. JOSEPH MATCHETT, Huntsville, Ont., writes: "It gives me much pleasure to write you of the wonderful benefit I have found in your medicine. Last summer it saved the lives of my three little ones. They all took the summer complaint and were very sick with it. The baby would take fits, and after trying many remedies, which were of no use, I suggested we should try Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. After giving them one bottle I found a great change, and now my little ones are as well as ever. We have never been without it since, and I have recommended it to my friends."

MRS. S. A. HARRISON, Napanee, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure to send you this testimonial of what Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has done in our family. My daughter's little girl, three years old, took summer complaint and was nearly dead. After all other remedies failed I thought of your remedy. The first dose gave relief and the third cured her. My son had diarrhoea and a few doses stopped it right away. I advise all mothers to have a bottle of 'Dr. Fowler's' on hand all the time. It is a grand medicine for young and old, and I cannot recommend it too highly in all trouble where the bowels become too loose. A few doses will check the trouble at once."

fraulein, you are a climber or a geologist."

"I'm neither, yet I think I have seen something, a most rare thing, I've wanted all my life to see."

The young man's face confessed curiosity. "Indeed! A rare thing that lives here on the mountain?"

"I am not sure if it lives here. I should like to find out," replied the girl.

"Might one inquire the name of this rare thing?" asked the chamois hunter. "Perhaps if I knew it might turn out that I could help you in the search. But, first, if you'd let me lead you to the plateau, where I think you were going. Here your head might still grow a little giddy, and it's not well to keep you standing, gna' fraulein, on such a spot. You've passed all the worst now. The rest is easy."

She gave him her hand, pleasing herself by fancying the act a kind of allegory, as she let him lead her to safe and pleasant places on a higher, sunnier level.

"Perhaps the rare thing grows here," the chamois hunter went on, looking about the green plateau with a new interest.

"I think not," Virginia answered, shaking her head. "It would thrive better nearer the mountain top in a more hidden place than this. It does not love tourists."

"Nor do I, in truth," smiled the chamois hunter.

"You took me for one."

"Pardon, gna', fraulein—not the kind of tourist we both mean."

"Thank you."

"But you have not said if I might help you in your search. This is a wild region for a young lady to be exploring in alone."

"I feel sure," responded the princess graciously, "that if you really would you could help me as well as any one in Rhaetia."

"You are kind indeed to say so, though I don't know how I have deserved the compliment."

"Did it sound like a compliment? Well, leave it so. I meant because you are at home in these high altitudes, and the rare thing I speak of is a plant that grows in high places. It is said to be found only in Rhaetian mountains, though I have never heard of any one who has been able to track it down."

"Is it our pink Rhaetian edelweiss, of which we are so proud? Because if it is and you will trust me I know exactly where to take you to find it. With my help you could climb there from here in a few moments."

She shook her head again, smiling inscrutably. "Thank you, it's not the pink edelweiss. The scientific, the esoteric name I've promised that I'll tell to no one, but the common people in my native country who have heard of it would call the plant edelmann."

"You have already seen it on the mountain, but not growing?"

"Some chamois hunter, like yourself, had dropped it perhaps, not knowing what its value was. It's a great deal to have had one glimpse—worth running into danger for."

"Perhaps, gna' fraulein, you don't realize to the full the danger you did run. No chance was worth it, believe me."

"You, a chamois hunter, say that?"

"But I'm a man. You are a woman, and women should keep to beaten paths and safety."

The princess laughed. "I shouldn't wonder," said she, "if that's a Rhaetian theory, a Rhaetian man's theory. I've heard your emperor holds it."

"Who told you that, gna' fraulein?" He gave her a sharp glance, but her gray eyes looked innocent of guile and were therefore at their most dangerous.

"Oh, many people have told me. Can't they look at kings, and the most insignificant persons may talk of emperors. I've heard many things of yours."

"Good things or bad?"

"No doubt such things as he truly deserves. Now, can you guess which? But perhaps I would tell you without your guessing if I were not so very, very hungry." She glanced at the pocket of his coat, from which protruded a generous hunch of black bread and ham, thrust in probably at the instant when she had called for help. "I can't help seeing that you have your luncheon with you. Do you want it all"—she carefully ignored the contents of her rucksack, which she could not well have forgotten—"or would you share it?"

The chamois hunter looked surprised, though not displeased; but, then, this was his first experience of a feminine explorer, and he quickly rose to the occasion.

"There is more, much more bread and bacon, where this came from," he replied. "Will you be graciously pleased to accept something of our best?"

"If you please, then I, too, shall be pleased," she said. Guiltily she remembered Miss Portman, but the dear Letitia could not be considered now. If she were alarmed, she should be well consoled later.

"I and some friends of mine have a—a sort of hut round the corner from this plateau and a short distance on," announced the chamois hunter, with a gesture that gave the direction. "No woman has ever been our guest, but I invite you to visit it and lunch there, or, if you prefer, remain here and in a few minutes I will bring such food as we can offer. At best it's not much to boast of. We chamois hunters are poor men, living roughly."

The princess smiled, imprisoning each new thought of mischief which flew into her mind like a trapped bird. "I've heard you're rich in hospitality," she said. "I'll go with you to your hut, for it will be a chance to prove the saying."

The eyes of the hunter—dark, brilliant and keen as the eagle's to which she compared him—pierced hers. "You have no fear?" he asked. "You are a young girl, alone, save for me, in a desolate place. For all you know, my mates and I may be a band of brigands."

"Baedeker doesn't mention the existence of brigands in these days among the Rhaetian Alps," replied [illegible], with quaint dryness. "I've always found him trustworthy. Besides, I've great faith in the chivalry of Rhaetian men, and if you knew how hungry I am you wouldn't keep me waiting for talk of brigands. Bread and butter are far more to the point."

"Even search for the rare edelmann may wait?"

"Yes; the edelmann may wait—on me." The last two words she dared but to whisper.

"You must pardon my going first," said the man with the bare brown knees. "The way is too narrow for politeness."

"Yet I wish that the peasants at home had such courteous manners as yours," Virginia patronized him prettily. "You Rhaetians need not go to court, I see, for lessons in behavior."

"The mountains teach us something, maybe."

"Something of their greatness, which we should all do well to learn. But have you never lived in a town?"

"A man of my sort exists in a town; he lives in the mountains." With this diplomatic response the tall figure swung round a corner formed by a bowlder of rock, and Virginia gave a little cry of surprise. The hut of which the chamois hunter had spoken was revealed by the turn, and it was of an unexpected and striking description. Instead of the humble erection of stones and wood which she had counted on, the rocky side of the mountain itself had been coaxed to give her sons a shelter.

A doorway and large square openings for windows had been cut in the red-veined, purplish brown porphyry, while a heavy slab of oak and wooden frames filled full of glittering bottle glass protected such rooms as might have been hollowed out within from storm or cold.

Even had Virginia been ignorant of her host's identity she would have been wise enough to guess that here was no semmhutte, or ordinary abode of common peasants who hunt the chamois for a precarious livelihood. The work of hewing out in the solid rock a habitation such as this must have cost more than most Rhaetian chamois hunters would save in many a year. But her wisdom also counseled her to express no further surprise after her first exclamation.

"My mates are away for the time, though they may come back by and by," the man explained, holding the heavy oaken door that she might pass into the room within, and, though she was not invited to further exploration, she was able to see by the several doorways cut in the rock walls that this was not the sole accommodation the strange house could boast.

On the rock floor rugs of deer and chamois skin were spread. In a rack of oak ornamented with splendid antlers and studded with the sharp pointed horns of the chamois were suspended guns of modern make and brightly polished, formidable hunting knives. The table in the center of the room had been carved with admirable skill, and the half dozen chairs were oddly fashioned of stags' antlers shaped to hold fur cushioned wooden seats. A carved dresser of black oak held a store of the coarse blue, red and green china made by peasants in the valley below, through which Virginia had driven yesterday, and these bright colored dishes were piled out with platters and great tankards of old pewter, while in the deep fireplace a gypsy kettle swung over a bed of fragrant pine wood embers.

"This is a delightful place—fit for a king or even for an emperor," said Virginia when the bare kneed chamois hunter had offered her a chair near the fire and crossed the room to open the closed cupboard under the dresser shelves.

He was stooping as she spoke, but at her last words looked around over his shoulder.

"We mountain men aren't afraid of a little work—when it's for our own comfort," he replied, "and most of the things you see here are homemade during the long winters."

"Then you are all very clever indeed. But this place is interesting. Tell me, has the emperor ever been your guest here? I've read—let me see, could it have been in the guidebook or in some paper?—that he comes occasionally to this northern range of mountains."

"Oh, yes; the emperor has been at our hut several times. He's good enough to approve it," the host answered calmly, laying a loaf of black bread, a fine seeded cheese and a knuckle of ham on the table. He then glanced at his guest, expecting her to come forward, but she sat still on her throne of antlers, her small feet in their sensible mountain boots daintily crossed under the short tweed skirt.

"I hear he also is a good chamois hunter," she carelessly went on. "But that perhaps is only the flattery which makes the atmosphere of royalty. No doubt you, for instance, could really give him many points in chamois hunting."

"For an amateur. But you're a professional. I wager now that you would not for the world change places with the emperor."

How the chamois hunter laughed at this and showed his white teeth! There were those in the towns he scorned who would have been astonished at his light hearted mirth.

"Change places with the emperor! Not unless I were obliged, gna' fraulein—not now, at all events," with a complimentary bow and glance.

"Thank you. You're quite a courtier And that reminds me of another thing they say of him in my country. The story is that he dislikes the society of women. But perhaps it is that he doesn't understand them."

"It is possible, lady. But I never heard that they were so difficult of comprehension."

"Ah, that shows how little you chamois hunters have had time to learn. Why, we can't even understand ourselves or know what we're most likely to do next, and yet—a very odd thing—we have no difficulty in reading one another and knowing all each other's weaknesses."

"That would seem to say that a man should get a woman to choose his wife for him."

"I'm not so sure it would be wise, yet your emperor, we hear, will let the chancellor choose his."

"Ah, were you told this also in your country?"

Find Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winchester, Ind. — "Four doctors told me that they could never make me regular, and that I would eventually have dropsy. I would bloat, and suffer from bearing-down pains, cramps and chills, and I could not sleep nights. My mother wrote to Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking one and one-half bottles of the Compound, I am all right again, and I recommend it to every suffering woman." — MRS. MAY DEAL, Winchester, Ind.

Hundreds of such letters from girls and mothers expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for them have been received by The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

72 Days of Dish Washing

You spend two hours every day washing dishes. That's 720 hours a year or 72 days of ten working hours each. This means that half the time is wasted. For with Taylor's Borax Soap you finish your work in one hour instead of two.

Isn't it worth five cents to have 36 days a year to yourself—to have cleaner and sweeter dishes than ever before with less than half the work?

Taylor's Soap

This wonderful soap is unlike any other you have ever known. It digs into the corners of dishes and loosens the dirt almost like magic. It cuts away grease and leaves the surface clean and polished.

Hard water makes hard dish washing, but Taylor's Borax Soap softens the hardest water and so makes the work easy. But it does more than soften the water—it softens the hands and leaves them even whiter than before.

With this soap you save all the bother of rubbing and most of the scouring. You simply have no idea of the work this soap can save—it is the greatest surprise you have ever known.

The glassware has a lustre that fairly sparkles with brilliance. The china ware looks as fresh and inviting as new. Yet you work only half as hard with this astonishing soap.

No soap could be purer than this, for during the boiling process we run thousands of gallons of clean water through the soap. Thus every impurity is carried away and the soap is absolutely clean.

Borax also sterilizes and sweetens. It kills every germ and leaves no possibility of contagion. It destroys all odors and leaves a clean scent that is simply delightful.

This wonderful soap costs no more than the ordinary. We spend twenty-one days to make a single cake. We use the labor of more than 200 persons. Yet we make such enormous quantities—millions of cakes every year—that we buy at the lowest prices and give you the very best of quality. Try one bar and judge for yourself.

FIRE INSURANCE

The following legend taken from an enterprising Seedsman's Catalogue is not without a bearing on Fire Insurance :—

"Two years ago an Ontario Market Gardener saved four cents an ounce on the cost of half a pound of Cabbage Seed. In the fall he admitted that he was over $100 to the bad on the crop because the bargain seed had lacked vitality. Thirty-two cents saved—one hundred dollars lost. WAS IT WORTH WHILE?

FLOWER DRESSES for FANCY DANC

A PAGE FOR MISSES

In giving dances for young girls a charming idea is to have the girls all dressed as flowers. Anything more dainty and fairylike than a room full of these flower dresses, with the fresh young girl faces above them, can hardly be imagined. Or when a girl is going to a fancy dress dance, where each may choose her own costume, nothing is prettier than a flower dress.

Many flowers can be represented quite perfectly in these dresses, and while there is a certain similarity in the method of making them the finished effect shows great variety. The main material used is an inexpensive silk or some of the delicate mercerized cotton goods that look so much like silk. If the dress is to be used only once, many of these mercerized cottons give just as good an effect as silk; but if for any reason the dress is wanted for several occasions it is worth while to buy silk, for it keeps its looks better.

UNDERNEATH the actual flower part there must be a very full skirt of some gauzy material, such as mousseline, tarleton or thin liberty silk—the latter accordion pleated. When the flower to be copied has been chosen it is best to get one of the real flowers and match its petals as nearly as possible in the silk and the thin material for the underskirt.

Buy at the same time some green silk to make the calyx at the top of the stem and pointed green leaves of the sheath that grows on the outside of almost all flowers. This green need not exactly match that on the real flower, for a silk as vivid as the green of nature is apt to be too bright to be becoming, and a softer shade will be more pleasing.

The flowers best suited for these dresses are roses in any color, tulips, poppies, lilies (both the Easter lily and the water lily, the latter being particularly effective), daffodils and the fleur-de-lis or iris. The skirt should never be very long, and looks best as short as is becoming to the girl who is to wear it.

The petals of the flower are cut from the silk in the shape of those of the natural flower (except that sometimes they have to be a little longer in proportion to the width), and are sewed to the top of the skirt, turning downward. They must be lapped well over each other at the side, and in the case of roses and water lilies there must be several layers of petals, as they grow in the flower.

THE bodice is made of the green silk, cut with the long, narrow pointed pieces running down over the skirt, and the same effect, shortened, at the top. Around the neck inside the green there are more colored petals (much smaller than those of the skirt), which give the flower effect at the top. This flower effect can be carried out in either high or low neck, using more or less petals.

In making a water lily dress the green silk should be darker than for the other flowers, and the sheath leaves are much larger. To give a very perfect imitation of the flower there ought to be a little inner sheath of very pale pink and a belt made of twisted cords of dark green and reddish brown silk. These cords represent the stem of the water lily, which is so important a part of that particular flower.

Another flower which requires special treatment is the poppy. Its petals should be made of crêpe, instead of plain silk, to give the crinkly look the real ones have. Still another great difference is made in the case of the fleur-de-lis. No green at all is used, as the flower has only a thin brown sheath that withers as it opens. Use for this flower three shades of purple, a deep royal purple, a pale lavender and a pinkish lavender. The effect of the fleur-de-lis is rather harder to get than some of the others, but can be done.

THE shoes and stockings can be made an important part of the color scheme of these dresses, if one wants a complete effect. In the case of the rose, it is perhaps best to match the color of the petals, but in the water lily the flower can be best copied by having stockings and slippers of a soft, light yellow, like the stamens. In the Easter lily also the feet should represent the stamens, which in this case are a very pale yellowish green. With a fleur-de-lis dress the slippers and stockings must be lavender; indeed, there must be nothing but lavender and purple in that costume.

A little cap made like the flower which the dress represents may be worn, or one or two of the flowers in the hair. But these are not necessary to the effect, and pretty hair often looks better without the extra decoration.

In choosing which flower to copy one's own coloring should be the first point to be considered. A blonde should never use the more intense colors, such as the red or bright pink ro… sent a pale pink ros… one, but the others … a brunette. The latte… to be a lily; they b… the blonde. LATEST FASHIONS IN LINGERIE.

NEWEST in knitted combinations is a sheath-fitting, dart … gored garment of silk or lisle, consisting of a sleeveless, shoulder-strapless undervest, top-finished with an embroidery beading and tied over the shoulders with satin ribbons. The knickerbockers are finished at the knees with shirred satin ribbon garters.

Undervests in either white, blue or pink, high or low necked, are of Italian silk, of Swiss ribbed lisle thread, of open mesh net pattern wool or of wool crêpe. Their novel feature is a half sleeve cut out directly beneath the arm, so that perspiration need not be absorbed into the material. To accompany these vests are shields made of two layers of very fine stockinette intertwined with silk ribbon.

Lingerie combinations of soft nainsook or finest checked lawn consist of a ruffle-bordered corset cover and circular pantaloons headed with a yoke controlled by a ribbon-run beading. One combination of handkerchief linen presents precisely the appearance of a chemise, although it forms a most refined style of pantaloon. It closes at the back with buttons and buttonholes and has Directoire side lacings. Another shows the princess-fitting chemise, which closes in front in lace and ribbon jabot effect, and is joined to knickers which are fastened about the leg with a ribbon band.

Pleated flounces are seen on the latest models in lingerie petticoats that have been imported from Paris. These flounces, which are set on above the knees, are headed with ribbon threaded embroidered beading, have hand run tucks to the depth of six inches, and below this the fulness is pressed into pleats.

Knitted tricot brassières of the tie-round type, shaped to conform to the bust, have straps which pass around the back of the figure, cross the shoulders and form braces. More elaborate brassières of fine but heavy linen have curving darts from armhole to waist line. They are finished about the neck with ribbon threaded beading, button straight down the back, and the fronts are fastened with ribbons running through double buttonholes.

Among new models in night dresses is one of Empire style which fastens in the back and has three-quarter length bell sleeves. Another has an Empire top to which the skirt fulness is set on in small tucks. There are buttonhole eyelets through which a ribbon belt is passed, while the fulness about the shoulders is drawn up by ribbon run through hand made eyelets. A slip-on-over-the-head night dress has oddly shaped sleeves which fall from the shoulders in kimono style.

Girls who sleep in pajamas are ordering dainty coat and trouser sets of tan, blue, white or mauve sheer madras, dotted mercerized cotton, challie, wash silk or flowered dimity. They are bound with launderable ribbon and closed with cords and large silk covered buttons.

Gifts for the Baby.

GIRLS who have a talent for hand painting need not worry about what to make for the baby sister or niece.

Clothes trees of white enamelled wood are decorated with a vine of wild rose-buds starting from the base of the pole and disappearing beneath a huge pink satin ribbon bow tied near the apex of the tree. Satin covered coat hangers have tied at the base of their hooks bows of wide satin ribbon bearing the hand painted legend, "Baby's Coat," in rather large letters entwined with fine flowers, tendrils and leaves.

Bow topped safety pin holders made of three strands of wide satin ribbon of graduated length, one end of which is shirred on to a satin covered ring cushion, are decorated with hand painting in dainty floral designs. Similarly decorated bows embellish the lids of toilet baskets and clothes hampers.

The title "Baby's Record" is intertwined with the rosebuds or forget-me-nots, painted on the satin covering of the book in which is recorded the important events of infantile days. This interesting volume is also supplied with hand painted ribbon markers and ties.

Soap, pin and powder boxes, brushes and combs, teething rings and rattles made wholly or partly of china, ivory or celluloid, may be attractively hand painted or decorated with hand painted ribbons.

If a girl is exceptionally industrious she may even trace dainty designs upon the drawers and the mirror frame of baby's white wood dressing table and the various pieces of china used for the bath.

Sanitary Toilet Accessories.

SCENTED sea salt, lavender perfumed powder and cheesecloth bags holding a mixture of white corn meal and powdered orris root for softening and perfuming the bathing water are included among the toilet accessories which one daintily groomed young girl considers necessary for sanitary safety as well as for absolute physical comfort. On the same list are several bath mits of different sizes, face cloths of softest chamois and sponges of superfine quality to be used alternately while the others are being aired, dried and sunned.

Fine French flower scented soaps are used for the hands and face, Castile for general bathing and tar soap for shampooing, but there is also a regular hair fertilizing and scalp cleansing soap, and each one of these cakes is kept in an individual box of silver, crystal or celluloid.

Sterilized tooth brushes are kept in stoppered glass cases, and the sanitary tooth paste used upon them issues from the top of a screw covered zinc tube.

Violet and rose toilet waters are purchased in perfectly airtight glass bottles and essences of those flowers, as well as lavender smelling salts, in glass stoppered phials cased in hardwood boxes.

A porcelain jar which holds the cold cream has a glass cover which screws on so tightly that dust cannot possibly reach the preparation. In a leather case are orange sticks, emery boards, cakes of cuttlebone, lustre and pumice, a tube of ointment and a nail polishing machine to which a buffer is attached.

Stationery.

FASHIONABLE correspondence paper is of various textures and shades. There is the kid finished paper in oak grained effect, which comes in sheets and envelopes of two sizes and is exceptionally smart; the cross barred weave with a white or colored border resembling the finishing of a hemstitched handkerchief; what is known as French dimity, white, gray, blue and buff plain linen; a thin, fine quality of lawn, which appears in maize, mauve and dawn pink, and linen and glacé fabrics which have envelopes daintily embossed in embroidery patterns.

Herringbone weaves, showing corduroy and piqué effects, are steadily gaining ground, as they come in all the fashionable shades and in the three customary sizes. Satin, bond finished and linen fabric stationery of note, letter and commercial size may be conveniently purchased in the form of a writing tablet which is provided with an envelope drawer.

Among stationery novelties are small sheets of cross barred weave engraved with the first name of the writer and intended only for correspondence with intimate friends; featherweight sheets, accompanied by gray lined tissue envelopes, for foreign correspondence, and "hasty note" paper, with perforated gummed edges, which provides an envelope when properly folded.

PRACTICAL TALKS BY THE APRIL GRANDMOTHER

"YOU did not sleep well last night, my dear," remarked the April Grandmother as she glanced across the breakfast table at her eldest granddaughter's heavy eyes and pallid cheeks. "Sleeplessness is one of the most powerful enemies of health as well as of youthful bloom. Therefore it is wise to find out what causes it and promptly adopt a remedy. While one of the best remedies for insomnia is exercise in the open air, in the case of an athletic young girl like yourself the inability to sleep last night was probably due to the fact that you spent the entire morning in playing tennis, the greater part of the afternoon in canoeing and danced fifteen times during the evening—exercises which brought so many different sets of muscles into use that instead of being merely moderately tired you were overfatigued and consequently unable to sleep.

"Another cause of sleeplessness, and particularly among active young girls, is hunger. They are warned against the practice of eating late at night, and so they go to bed hungry, only to toss about miserably for hours, whereas all that is needed to induce sleep is a graham wafer and a glass of milk or cocoa. Such a lunch is satisfying to the stomach and so easily digested that it helps to clear rather than to injure the complexion. It must be remembered, however, that only a warm milky drink should be taken, for tea and coffee are excitants, sweet, cold lemonade is acidulous and any sort of malt or alcoholic beverage is liable to bring on a bilious attack.

"Do not be afraid to allow plenty of fresh air to circulate through your sleeping room, for even if the night is cold and damp it will not harm you provided the bed is so placed that a draught cannot strike it and that you are warmly covered from your toes to your chin. The coverings should never be drawn over the mouth, as that practice impedes breathing, and, moreover, the rule that the head should be kept cool and the feet warm applies to the sleeping as well as to the waking hours. Even the girls who exercise most strenuously during the day are apt to have cold feet at night, and this condition is a frequent cause of insomnia. If the regular hot bath does not heat the feet sufficiently they should be kept warm with a water bottle or wrapped in a woollen sheet.

"When insomnia is due to worry or any other form of nervous excitement special attention should be devoted to keeping the body warm with blankets and the head cool by means of a cloth wrung out in cold water and placed on the forehead. This treatment, by drawing the blood from the brain, quiets the nerves and usually induces sleep, but should it fail to do so try to divert the mind with light fiction. The practice of reading in bed is not generally recommended, but for an occasional case of insomnia it is infinitely better for the mental and physical health to read until drowsy than to toss about until the blood becomes feverish and the brain a prey to gloomy imaginings.

"No matter how coyly sleep may come to you," concluded the April Grandmother gravely, "do not listen to any one who advises an insomnia drug. Such sedative preparations are certain to contain morphine, chloral or cocaine and to induce an appetite which will sooner or later undermine the mental as well as the physical health."

SIDEBOARD AND DRESSER SCARFS.

A PRETTY and practical sideboard scarf of recent design is of pale gray linen bordered with wide hemstitching and embroidered at either end with white and pink roses in washable floss. Another dining room scarf is of white butcher's linen decorated with an oak leaf and oak apple pattern done in rice braiding.

Heavy white linen is employed for a scallop edged buffet cover embroidered all over with conventionalized yellow poppies, and also for a scarf and doily set embellished with natural colored roses, thistles and shamrocks.

Bureau tops of a practical and launderable type are developed in sheer chambray of delicate tones, embroidered boldly with white rice braiding, and of white handkerchief linen, barred lawn and of dotted or sprigged muslin embroidered in white or pale tints and finished with lace edged ruffles.

Most attractive lingerie covers for dressing tables are made of finest linon appliqued with square or oblong pieces of fine French embroidery or with Irish and Venise medallions and motifs set between trellises formed of Valenciennes insertion.

Substantial scarfs for dressers are of natural colored half linen pongee embroidered or braided in colors matching the drapings of the room: of pale pink, blue or apple green grounded India silks, or of delicately patterned challie.

A Stranger in Town.

"ALL aboard! Both gates! Step lively!" barked the guard.

It was the last door of the train remaining open and the signal bell from the rear was jangling overhead. A mild faced little woman block … the passage, however, obviously in two minds as to whether she would board the train or not. Her confusion increased every instant. Finally above the din she made herself heard.

"Can you please tell me, sir"—— she faltered and again hesitated.

"All aboard!" shouted the infuriated guard. "What is it?"

"I was told to take the subway," the little woman explained quietly; "but can you tell me, if you please, where I should get off? I want to gather some wild flowers."

GIRLISH NECKBANDS AND C…

VELVET ribbon bands mounted upon very thin strips of spring steel, which accommodate themselves to the movements of the neck and afford the wearer perfect comfort, are among the novelties which are destined to be popular with young girls this autumn. The velvet band, which is supposed to match the shade of a dark frock, may be decorated with a selvedge velvet bow held in place with a fancy buckle, with jewelled clasps or with metal tassels.

Little ornamental bands of a simple order which become slender girlish throats are of enamelling on sterling silver and in colors corresponding with fashionable dress shades—of seed or fish pearls and of gray pearls strung with aluminum beads. There are also dainty bands in antique silver effects and of crocheted silk rings put together with beads.

Because long chains now carry really useful pendants like small watches, lockets holding miniatures, change purses and tiny memorandum tablets, they are extensively worn by quite young girls. The simplest chains are of small links of gilt, gun metal or platinum finish or of silver combined with gold beads and have tasselled ends. Some dainty designs are of sterling silver gilt enamelled in Delft blue, ornamented with pear-shaped pink coral pendants and of flat linked greenish gold set with moss agates.

Pierced metal link chains without settings are exceedingly smart, especially the hand made type, which have thin semi-filigree centres, but many young girls seem to prefer the chains of dull silver which are brightened with amethysts, topaz and lapis lazuli.

While the heavily "jewelled" necklaces of the Oriental type are just a bit too conspicuous for ordinary wear, they make an interesting addition to the chain collection on account of their brilliancy and unique designs. The latest necklaces brought from the Far East resemble flexible snakes. They are of antique or green gold finished metal and have eyes and tongues of imitation rubies, sapphires and emeralds.

Inconspicuous Watches.

WATCHES are now worn so inconspicuously that only their owners can readily locate them. Schoolgirls often have chatelaine sized watches framed in the inner side of a leather fob attached by a strong strap and buckle to the shirt waist belt and hanging as though intended to support a change purse.

Frequently small watches are fastened to the wrist by means of narrow straps of leather run through metal eyelets set at either side of a nickel or gun metal case, and there are extension bracelets of German silver or filled gold which have tiny timepieces set in the top. These wrist watches are kept covered by the cuffs, as they are intended solely for convenience and rarely are of an ornamental character.

Ball watches concealed or enclosed in fancy spheres are such tiny affairs that they may be attached to a long neck chain as a pendant, kept inside of a change purse or set beneath the flap of a hand bag. These balls are usually of silver or gun metal and, despite the miniature proportions of the works, are reliable timekeepers.

Early Autumn Gloves.

STREET gloves for early autumn are of chamois, in white and natural color, pique sewn and fastened with one or two pearl buttons; of yellow chamois, made after the Biarritz style, and also of the loosely fitting sixteen button mousquetaire length.

The regular Biarritz gloves are worn in tan, mole, slate, black and white on the street, as well as glace kids in the fashionable shades and in three button length.

Chamois finished lisle thread gloves, which are easily cleaned, bid fair to be immensely popular this autumn, and silk gloves will be worn until muff season begins. Some of the short wristed silk gloves have embroidered cuffs and hemstitched edges and, like those of the two-clasp type, have double finger tips, so that they prove wonderfully serviceable for shopping and travelling.

Mousquetaire gloves of heavy Milanese silk are of fourteen and sixteen button length and have embroidered tops. The newest gloves of this order are tucked from the wrist to the elbow and fasten at one side with five silk covered buttons.

Mending Ornaments.

TO repair a bit of fine china apply to the edges of the broken pieces a mixture composed of plaster of Paris and dissolved gum tragacanth, fit the several parts together, tie them firmly and leave the article undisturbed until the cement has thoroughly dried and hardened. Or the pieces of china may be cemented together with a soft paste made of plaster of Paris and a solution of gum arabic, tied in place with a cord and then placed in a pan containing cold milk, which should be allowed to heat slowly until it boils. The pan must then be taken from the fire, and, after its contents have gradually cooled, the china article removed and set away to dry.

Silver photograph frames, candlesticks, vases and desk ornaments may be repaired with jewellers' solder, cleaned with whiting and then kept permanently bright by means of a lacquer coating.

White cement will hold together pieces of broken glass provided the article is not afterward washed in hot water.

Fish glue may be used to repair ornaments of finely grained wood or of heavy

GRAND RALLY

BOYS

TO SELL

THE

EXAMINER

WE WONDER if it ever occurred to the boys of Peterborough that the selling of papers was a stepping-stone to a successful business career in future years.

DO they recognize the fact that this little business offers them an opportunity to

MAKE

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

BOYS buy the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each ; or in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive ten cents from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 62 2-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts ?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say that the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

MONEY IN NEWSPAPER ROUTES.

Another boy was only thirteen when his father died, leaving two hundred dollars insurance, a widow and four younger children. The insurance money was loaned out to a neighbour at six per cent., as a sort of reserve fund, and while the widow did plain sewing, the boy carried newspapers morning and evening. After three months' experience with this work he borrowed twenty-five dollars and purchased the smallest newspaper route in town. Vigorous canvassing for new customers made that route so productive that in six months he paid back the loan. The lender offered another loan of fifty dollars, which the boy took, buying two more routes. These were covered by boys hired to do the work, however, because he felt that all his energy must go into the original route, so that he would at least be certain of good returns from that. Principles of management learned by this plan made him so successful that in less than five years he owned every newspaper route in his town. His mother's two hundred dollars was still intact, and his brothers and sisters going to school. A legacy of two hundred dollars fell to the family. This, with the original two hundred dollars and another hundred the boy had saved, was paid on a home costing twenty-eight hundred dollars, the balance to be cleared off at the rate of twenty-five dollars a month. Three furnished rooms were rented at a total of about twenty-two dollars monthly, and this money, it was agreed, should never be spent. Newspaper routes, odd jobs and the mother's contributions kept the family and paid the instalments. In four years the income from furnished rooms, put away in the bank, grew to more than one thousand dollars. The mortgage was finally cleared off, and the boy, now nearly twenty-one years old, started to get an education at the high school.

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily all selling the Examiner, but some easily make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Boys! Be Boys of Business

Get in the game. It won't hurt you, but will give you a right start. You will have money of your own to save or buy useful needs with.

BOYS ! Take your spare time between four and six o'clock and see what success you will have between now and Christmas.

NEWSBOYS' BONANZA

War Office Sells Meat.

London, Sept. 16.—Taking advantage of the prevailing shortage in the enhanced price for canned meats, the British War Office is reported to have reaped a handsome profit by selling back to certain Chicago houses large stocks of canned meats. It appears these supplies are not wanted immediately, and under its contract the War Office may replenish its reserves when it desires at the old and lower prices.

Motorman Seized With Fit.

Reading, Pa., Sept. 16.—Winfield Weidner, a conductor, was killed, and six passengers were injured here yesterday, when a trolley car was wrecked at the bottom of the hill. Weidner was married last Monday. It is believed the motorman was seized with a fit and fell from the car. The car dashed down the grade, jumped the track and ran into a telegraph pole.

Shoots Girl and Kills Himself.

Montreal, Sept. 16.—An attempted murder and successful suicide occurred on Labelle street, after Miss Victoria Forget had refused to wed Hector Charland. Charland pulled a revolver and shot the girl in the arm, and then blew his brains out.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Vesuvius is active again.

Fire did $350,000 damage to the Portland, Ore., Flouring Mills Co.

Wm. Conger, farmer, near Picton, dropped dead at his work, aged 69.

St. Catharines schools were dismissed on Tuesday afternoon owing to the heat.

John Stevens, traveler, of Montreal, aged 35, had his arm broken in two places by a fall downstairs at Lindsay.

The barns of Geo. Wiley, John Tomlinson and David Dale, in Toronto Gore Township, were destroyed by lightning and fire Tuesday night.

John Hare's barns near Cobourg were struck by lightning and burned with contents, including a team of horses owned by Coffee and Spencer threshers.

Mrs. Fitch, mother of the dramatist, has arranged to take the body of her son home to New York on the steamer Grosser Kurfurst, sailing Sept. 19. Mr. Fitch died at Chalons-Sur-Marne September 4.

S. A. Frayetta, a student of the University of Toronto, who has been working during the summer months at the Stanley automobile plant, Pittsburg, Mass., was badly burned by coming in contact with a live wire.

Boy Strangely Injured.

Galt, Sept. 16.—Found severely injured and unconscious in the barn on the farm of Robert Cowan, on the back road from Hespeler to Galt, John Dickson, 15 years old, is unable to tell how he came by his wounds.

He went to the barn to let out the cows, and, according to his story, he loosed one and remembers nothing more. Two hours later, he was found in the entry to the stable, with his face gashed. The injury extended from over the right temple, across the face and underneath the nose. His hat was in the rose stable, some distance away.

The wound seems to have been inflicted by some long, narrow instrument, and the belief is that he was struck by some person with a billy.

Ottawa Merchant Dies.

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—Thos. A. Lindsay, from whom the A. E. Rea Co., Toronto, lately purchased the large local departmental store, corner of Sussex and Rideau streets, died yesterday of bright's disease. He had been ill four months.

Mr. Lindsay was in his 45th year. Sixteen years ago he was earning $12 a week as clerk in a general store here, and since that time he built up one of the largest retail concerns in Canada. He leaves a wife and three children, a daughter 17 years old, and two sons, 15 and 11 years respectively.

Dies Playing Golf.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—After playing the last hole of the full course of the Mississauga golf links W. L. Knowles, superintendent of R. G. Dun, mercantile agency, dropped dead about six o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Though apparently in good health Mr. Knowles had during the day complained to some friends of feeling unwell and said he proposed to take a week's holidays in Muskoka. He went on the links, however, in fine spirits and had just made the 18th hole when he fell to the ground and expired immediately.

PROVINCE DOES WELL.

Gets Nearly Quarter Million Out of Sale of Mines.

Toronto, Sept. 16.—Details of the sale of the recently advertised portions of the Gillies' limit were made public yesterday by Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines. The total proceeds of the sale were $223,054.50.

This amount included $113,111 for the much-talked-of provincial mine, located on the limit, which goes to F. M. Connell, Haileybury.

In addition to the provincial mine 20 parcels were offered for sale, but only 15 parcels were disposed of, the tenders for the remaining five parcels being too low or otherwise unsatisfactory. The area sold comprises 349 acres, of which 30 is taken up by the mine operated on behalf of the province.

In a statement made by Hon. Frank Cochrane yesterday, the total receipts, including former sales and returns from ore, from the Gillies' limit up to the present time have been $329,536.40. The outlay for prospecting, mining and other purposes has been $94,092.68; so the net return to the province is $234,543.72.

No Action Taken.

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—The Free Press, the Government organ, says it can be definitely promised that no action will be taken by the Government as to the use of Asiatic labor on the mountain section of the G.T.P. until there is a full meeting of the Cabinet, and that it is highly improbable that any such permission will be granted.

In view of the delay which the collapse of the Quebec bridge entails in the completion of the transcontinental, there is not the same need for the speedy completion of the mountain section as might otherwise have been the case, and it is quite probable that a compromise will be reached by giving the company an extension of time for the completion of that section.

Six Coaches In Ditch.

Marshall, Mich., Sept. 16.—A Michigan Central train of 14 coaches was wrecked yesterday six miles south of Battle Creek. Six coaches and the locomotive are in the ditch, but no one was killed.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 15.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market this morning the offerings were 1200 cattle, 500 sheep, 650 lambs, 1300 hogs and 300 calves. A good, steady trade was done in cattle thruout the morning, and the market was active, with no change in prices to note. The supply was somewhat larger, but, as the demand was ample to absorb all the stock on the market, a steady undertone prevailed. Choice steers sold at 5¼c to 5½c; good at 5c to 5¼c; fair at 4¼c to 4¾c; medium at 3¾c to 4c; good cows at 4c to 4½c; medium at 3c to 3½c, and bulls at 2¼c to 3c per lb. On account of increased supplies of hogs, an easier feeling developed in the market, and prices declined 25c per 100 lbs. At this reduction the demand was good and active trade was done. In the early part of the day a few sales of selected lots were made at $9.50, but the bulk of the trading was done later at $9 to $9.25 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

There was also considerable activity in the market for small meats on account of the increased offerings, and a brisk trade was done. A feature of the market was the weaker feeling in the market for lambs, and prices declined ¼c to ½c per lb., with sales at 5½c to 6c per lb. Sheep were steady under a fair demand, at 3½c to 4c per lb. A good trade was done in calves at prices ranging from $3 to $15 each, as to size and quality.

Boston, Sept. 16.—Wm. H. Taft started yesterday from Boston for the longest trip ever made by an American President in office. It will include 12,759 miles and take 56 days.

The President's longest stops will be at Chicago, 15 hours; St. Paul and Minneapolis, a day each; Salt Lake City, two days and a half; something over two days at Seattle, and an afternoon and evening at San Francisco. After three days in Yosemite national park, and four days at his brother's, Chas. P. Taft, ranch at Taft, Texas, the President will reach St. Louis on Oct. 25. From there he will go to New Orleans by boat, after which he will spend a week in the southern States.

Lost Pearls In Plunge Bath.

New York, Sept. 16.—Mrs. Martha McGuerin, said to be the wife of a rich Montreal railway man, went in swimming at the Fleishman baths with a friend and omitted to check her pearl necklace. After her first plunge she found that the platform wire had snapped and the pearls were lost. Of the 30, 25 were recovered in a short time from the tank by her friend, Mrs. John Lucelle, an expert swimmer, who however, having placed the biggest one in her mouth for safety, accidentally swallowed it.

Naming the Twins.

Lady Balfour of Burleigh recently told an amusing story of the naming of twins. "A friend of mine," she said, "had the good fortune—or misfortune—to have three sets of twins, and as each pair came the parents puzzled their brains to discover suitable names for them. The first pair, being girls, were called Kate and Duplicate; the second, a brace of boys, were named Peter and Repeater, and the third, also boys, Max and Climax. But the question then arose what if there should be a fourth, and even a fifth pair? A young lady solved the difficulty respecting the fourth by suggesting Ann and Another; while in the case of the fifth a well-known authoress came to the rescue by suggesting Hugh and Cry."

358 Wage-Earners Injured.

During the month of July industrial accidents occurred to 358 work people in Canada, according to reports received at the Labor Department, Ottawa. Of these, 100 were fatal and 258 resulted in serious injuries.

The number of trade disputes reported during the month was 15, or five more than 1908. Seventy-five firms and over 4,000 people were affected. The loss of time was 118,740 days, as compared with 86,886 days in June, and 21,000 days in July, 1908, and of the fifteen disputes ten were settled.

CAME TO HIS DEATH INDIRECTLY FROM THE STRUGGLE, SAYS JURY

FRED JOPLING REFUSED TO ANSWER QUESTIONS

Claimed That it Would Incriminate Him---His Counsel and the Coroner Had a Verbal Passage at Arms---Jopling Tells the Story of the Now Famous Mix-up.

"That the said Arthur Bollard came to his death indirectly from the effects of the struggle he had in Chemong Park on the night of August 23."

That the struggle in which he was engaged at Chemong Park on the night of August the 23rd was indirectly the cause of the death of Arthur Bollard, the unfortunate Toronto boy, is the opinion of the Coroner's Jury, as indicated by the above verdict which they returned at the conclusion of the fifth session of the inquest last night. Thirteen jurymen signed the verdict. Samuel Stinson, the fourteenth member did not coincide with the decision of his fellow jurors and refused to sign.

Future Action of the Crown

As far as the Coroner's inquest is concerned the cause celebre is now at an end. What proceedings, if any, may be taken by the Crown have not been made public. Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, when seen by the newspapermen at the conclusion of the session last night refused to discuss the case or say whether or not the Crown would take any action or make any arrests.

"Can the Bollards lay an information?" You can yourself if you want to," replied the Crown Attorney and that was all the satisfaction the newspaper men could get from him as to the intention of the Crown.

The expectation that a verdict would be reached last night and that Fred Jopling would be called resulted in the largest crowd of spectators that had been present since the opening of proceedings. The spacious court room was crowded, even the passage between the seats being thronged, while the spectators pressed as close to the witness box as they could get. A very large number of Bridgenorth people was present and the interest in the case was at fever heat.

Some Sensational Features...

The culminating session was marked by unexpected and sensational features. Chief among these was the refusal of Fred Jopling to answer any questions on the ground that they might incriminate him. Every eye was on Jopling and every ear was strained to catch his reply when Crown Attorney Wood commenced the examination. Instead of answering the first question, however, Jopling put in his objection., Mr. Wood assured him that his objection entitled him to the protection of the court and that nothing that he might say could be used against him in any future proceedings but that he must answer the questions. The examination was thereupon continued after this point had been cleared up.

Another feature that was unexpected but that was appreciated nevertheless was a decidedly warm tilt between Mr. D. O'Connell representing the Joplings and Coroner Dr. Gray. The Coroner remarked that Jopling's objection was not a nice one. Mr. O'Connell protested against that statement and against the manner in which the Coroner was conducting the inquest, saying that he wanted to make a public protest. The result was that Dr. Gray grew angry and told the counsel for the Joplings not to attempt to dictate to him and finally to sit down and shut his mouth. A little further on there was another passage at arms and Mr. O'Connell announced his intention of making representations to the Department concerning the Coroner's conduct if he persisted in his cross-examination.

Jopling's Story of the Fight

Jopling was on the stand for over an hour and there was almost dead silence as he related the story of the fight and the incidents which led up to the struggle. He minutely described the row with Bollard and the wrestling match that followed and did not appear to be anxious to hide anything as he willingly answered all the questions that were asked him, after the Crown Attorney had been put on record as saying that his answers could not be used against him. The only other new witness was Peter Gravelle who did not throw much light on the case and who grew very confused at times during his examination. Dr. Greer was recalled and repeated to the jury his opinion that the cause of death was inflammation of the stomach and bowels and that a predisposing factor was the condition Bollard's body was in as the result of the struggle of the Monday night before his demise.

New Witness Heard.

Peter Gravelle, of Bridgenorth, was the first witness called.

"What was the first you saw of trouble?" he was asked

"I saw some people running by me."

"Did you know who they were?"

"No, sir."

"Where were you?"

"I was leaning against the fence at the west side of the hotel."

"Well, what were they; boys or men, or what?"

"They were boys and girls and everything else."

What do you mean by that extraordinary statement? Have you no idea of the nature of an oath?" asked Mr. Wood amid the laughter that followed Gravelle's answer.

"They were men," the witness finally answered. "Four or five of them."

"Did you start off after them?"

"I stayed where I was for a while, and then started after them."

"Did you run?"

"I ran part of the way and then stopped and listened. I then went down closer."

"What did you find?"

"Two men were down, Fred Jopling and Bollard."

"Did you hear anything said?"

"No, sir."

"Did either of them say anything?"

Didn't Pay Much Attention.

"I did not hear them say anything. I was not paying much attention."

"That's an extraordinary statement," remarked the Crown Attorney. "You went down there to see what was going on and yet you did not pay any attention."

"I did not want to get myself into trouble," replied the witness.

"Were you there before Mr. Hartshorn?"

"I did not see him when I got there. He might have been there."

"Did he separate them?"

HURT IN OTTAWA

Peterborough Man on Front Seat of Street Car Injured in Collision.

Examiner Special.

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—E. M. Smith of Peterborough, was badly injured in a collision between two street cars on Rideau street yesterday afternoon. He was on the front seat of a St. Patrick street car which crashed into the rear end of a Band street car. The latter stopped suddenly after taking the switch at the corner of Nicholas and Rideau streets. Mr. Smith's leg was badly crushed, but the doctors hope to save the limb.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Paris is Full of Them and Nearly All Use Parisian Sage

In the beauty show at the metropolis two years ago gold medals were awarded to five different women.

To the most beautiful woman between 20 and 25; between 25 and 30; between 30 and 35; between 35 and 40 and between 40 and 45.

A society reporter who interviewed all five women in the interest of his papers, reported that all of them had beautiful hair, and that each of the five enthusiastically attributed her luxuriant hair to Parisian Sage.

Wm. Madill, corner of George and Hunter streets, sells Parisian Sage for 50 cents a bottle. He guarantees it to cure dandruff in two weeks; to stop falling hair and itching of the scalp. It makes any woman's hair beautiful, soft and luxuriant.

GEOGRAPHY CLASS, STAND UP! HERE'S A NEW LESSON THAT'S NEVER BEEN TAUGHT BEFORE

News of the last few weeks is going to make a mighty change in the geographies of you boys and girls, no matter whether Dr. Cook or Commander Peary wins out, or whether their set-to is a draw.

For the last thirty years that big white vague circle in the middle of the northern half of the world has been growing smaller, little at a time. Now there is no white spot marked "unknown land" in the centre, and only a minor splotch in the whole arctic circle.

In fact, the rule the mapmakers have had to follow is a good deal like that of the farmer's wife who makes doughnuts when the children are good. If they are real good the hole in the middle gets smaller and smaller.

So the hole in the children's Arctic maps is getting smaller and smaller, until soon there will be no hole at all.

Forty years ago, or thereabouts, the map of the northern hemisphere was a good deal like a small doughnut with a big hole. Just as far as explorers of all nations have progressed into the Arctic wilds, just that far has the known area on the student's maps been increasing.

Whether Commander Peary or Dr. Cook win out, the fact still remains that it is Peary whom the world owes much for making the hole in the doughnut map smaller. His expedition of 1892 erased a big part of the white splotch off the map, as did all the rest of his far north explorations. Dr. Nansen attacked it from the other side, making it smaller yet. Abruzzi, Amundsen, Dr. Cook and many others helped, until now the fight to blot out the white spot is nearly a victory.

Dr. Cook and Commander Peary agree that they found, first land, then open water, then islands, on their dashes to the pole. Both took practically the same, though Peary's was far enough east of Cook's to prove that the land they found first was of considerable width, and that the islands later traversed are in all probability an extension of the big Arctic archipelago. So Grant Land and Grinnel Land, previously the "farthest north" of any big tract, now open up the belief that perhaps there is a large hidden, ice-covered continent up there.

Greenland, which looks small enough on most maps, is really as long as from New York to the Rocky mountains, and as wide as from St. Paul to New Orleans. This is a fact that many men and women who studied geographies years and years ago do not appreciate.

So the children of to-day and the future, it's plain to see, will find a lot in their geographies that father and mother didn't know anything about when they studied the big atlases and made paper wads behind their protecting board covers.

IS NOW AWAITING TRIAL ON ANOTHER CHARGE OF PERJURY

Resident Up Before Magistrate Dumble This Morning Charged With Swearing Falsely in Police Court on July 9th.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

A well known resident was this morning committed for trial on a charge of perjury by Magistrate Dumble. The accused is at the present time awaiting trial for a similar offence at the coming December sessions. To-day he was charged with committing perjury in the police court on the 9th day of July by swearing that he did not drink liquor on the 6th day of July, except in the police cell, when he did drink elsewhere and was drunk when arrested. He pleaded not guilty, and did not elect as to his trial.

P. C. Newhall stated that he was present at the trial of Wm. Watt on the 9th of July. The prisoner was a witness. He saw him sign the depositions. The witness heard the accused under oath say, "I did not drink liquor that day until after I was in the police cell. I was not drunk." P. C. Newhall arrested the defendant. He was very drunk, so drunk that he couldn't stand up.

He was granted bail of two hundred dollars.

WILL C. P. R. GRAIN LINE AVOID COMING TO PETERBOROUGH?

Stated on Good Authority That It Will Meet the Main Line at Cavanville, Skirting the Hills North of This City.

WORK BEGINS IN SPRING

A Toronto paper recently published an article dealing with the new grain route of the C.P.R., which Peterborough people have been led to believe will meet the line that passes through this city. The paper stated that President Shaughnessy of the C. P.R. had announced that construction work on the proposed line from Coldwater Junction to the main line would be commenced next spring, and would be rushed to speedy completion.

The C.P.R surveyors are now busily engaged surveying the route between Lindsay and the main line with a view to avoiding the hills in Emily and Peterborough townships. The original survey will be abandoned, and it is as well as settled that the line will cross the river near Carew's mill, pass through the east ward in Lindsay and follow the Lindsay-Omemee G. T. R. line to Reaboro. At this point it will cross the Grand Trunk and will follow an easterly course towards Bethany, finally tapping the main line at or near Cavanville.

NEW DAM FOR THE OTONABEE POWER COMPANY

Have Written Council Asking For Twenty Year Franchise—Will Spend $250,000 in Uniting Their Present Dams Into One With Twenty-six Foot Head of Water.

WILL MEET THE COUNCIL

The Otonabee Power Co. has followed the suit played by the Peterborough Light & Power Co., asking for a twenty year franchise. They propose to spend $250,000 in uniting their two dams into one with a head of 26 feet. Their proposition is explained in the following letter to the Council:

We desire, if satisfactory arrangements can be made with the Corporation of the City of Peterborough, to extend our power plant at Dams Nos. 4 and 5 by combining the two dams under one head, which will result in the most power being produced. We propose to develop the power at these two dams to the full capacity of the available flow of the Otonabee River under a 26 foot head, which will mean an expenditure of at least $250000.

We find that capitalists do not favour taking up the bonds of a company where the franchise is on a

BIG EXCURSION HERE TO-MORROW

The Recording Secretary of Court Peterborough, No. 29, Canadian Order of Foresters, has received the following letter, which is self explanatory:

Dear Sir and Brother,—As we are running an excursion to Peterborough on Friday, 17th inst., you would confer a favour to our court by informing the hotels of the same. There will be from six to eight hundred people going.

Believe me, yours fraternally,
CHAS. TULLY,
Financial Secretary.

SATISFACTION AMONG THE DIRECTORS OF THE EXHIBITION PROMISES TO BE A SUCCESS

Fine Weather To-day Makes the Directors Smile, While Exhibitors Have Been Rushing in Their Displays—The Programme for To-morrow.

A SCENE OF activity

TO-MORROW'S PROGRAMME.

8.00 a.m.—Grounds and buildings open to the public.
10.00 a.m.—Judging of exhibits in Main building.
1.00 p.m.—Judging of halter horses in classes No. 1 to 5, and other live stock as arranged in prize list, in small ring.
2.00 p.m.—Troupe of Arabian acrobats.
2.15 p.m.—Trotting races, 2.40 class. Prize $150.00.
2.30 p.m.—Judging of light harness horses.
Acrobatic and gymnastic performances.
3.00 p.m.—Expressmen's race. Prizes $5, $3, and $2.
3.30 p.m.—Exhibition of wonderful trained animals.
3.45 p.m.—Dog race. First heat. Judging of harness horses in front of grand stand.
4.00 p.m. — Carters' race. Prize $5, $3 and $2.

Smiles, satisfaction, enthusiasm, energy, optimism.

An Examiner reporter found large quantities of all five of these attributes this morning when he dropped in on the Peterborough Industrial directors at Exhibition Park. The bright sunshine and blue skies, coupled with the manner in which the exhibitors were pouring in the main gates, were responsible for the feeling of satisfaction. The directors were going around with a smile of large proportions and had time permitted would have undoubtedly stopped every few minutes to shake hands with themselves, or each other.

However there was no time to spare. Every director was kept on the move in some department of the work or other, and President Leary, Secretary Hall and their assistants had no breathing spells this morning, nor will they have until the big fair is over. So busy indeed are they that they had dinner at the grounds to-day in order not to lose any time.

The Examiner representative found in a stroll around the grounds that everything was looming up most brightly for the exhibition. White tents scattered here and there, flags everywhere added a picturesque effect to the scene forecasting the brilliant display to-morrow. Exhibitors

YESTERDAY WAS THE FESTIVAL OF THE JEWISH NEW YEAR

The Hebrew Race Throughout the Whole World Began Celebrating Their New Year Last Evening at Sunset.

TEN DAYS OF ATONEMENT

Last night at sunset throughout the whole world the Hebrew race began celebrating their New Year, or Rosh Hashanah as it is called in their language.

The New Year has a double significance for the Jews. In the first place, it recalls the creation of the world, which took place 6.669 years ago, according to their reckoning, and then again on this day some time in the future, or in the days of atonement which follow, the end of the world will come, when the deeds of every individual will be put on the balance and weighed, and sentence will be passed by the great Judge of the Universe.

The feast of the New Year is mentioned on two occasions in the Old Testament, though it is not called such. In Leviticus xxix., mention is made of it, where it is spoken of as a day of the blowing of the trumpet.

The ten days of atonement started to-day, and during that time every orthodox Jew feels it incumbent upon himself to frequently visit the synagogues there to have his burden lightened, according to the words, "Return ye, return ye, from your evil ways, for the great day of the Lord is drawing nigh."

OUT TEN DOLLARS

Mr. Robert Redmond Has Lost Heavily From Boys Stealing Fruit.

Mr. Robert Redmund, Downie St., has a small orchard which has suffered largely at the hands of small boys to such an extent that he considers that he has lost at least $10.00. He has asked Mayor Rush to have the Council make good that amount but the Police Commissioners will deal with it. Some one remarked that it should have been the Police Court.

FRED AND HARRY JOPLING ARRESTED ON HOMICIDE CHARGE

High County Constable Cochrane Drove Out After Them This Afternoon---Authorities Refuse to Say Who Laid the Information or What the Charge Was---Are Being Brought Into Peterborough.

High County Constable George Cochrane drove out to Bridgenorth this afternoon for the purpose of placing under arrest Fred Jopling and Harry Jopling in connection with the Bollard case.. At three o'clock the Examiner telephoned to Bridgenorth and was informed that Constable Cochrane had left there five minutes before in company with Fred Jopling and that Jopling's elder brother, James and his father, G. A. Jopling, were accompanying him to Peterborough....

On hearing of the departure of the constable the Examiner tried to get into communication with the Crown Attorney but could not find him. His son, Herbert Wood stated that he himself knew nothing about the case.

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

Ottawa, Sept. 16.—Edward Kaiting, of Belleville, died from injuries received by the collapse of Nasar airship at Central Canada fair grounds at 11 o'clock this morning. In attempting to rise the dirizible's propeller fouled an electric light wire and the machine in falling tore the insulation of the wires, the metallic framework becoming electrified. A number of people rushed to the aid of the aviator and about twenty received severe shocks, four being removed to the hospital where Kaiting died.

BLEW UP HOUSE BECAUSE GIRL THREW HIM DOWN

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

Toronto, Sept. 16.—William Smith of 312 Richmond street was arrested this morning in connection with the dynamiting of the Chinese restaurant on York street, and appeared in police court this morning along with Herbert Wilkinson and George Woodward, all three being remanded for a week. Smith's story is that Woodward before going into the restaurant showed him two bombs and told him that a girl, Bessie Maxwell, who lived over the restaurant "had thrown him down" and that he was going to blow the building to hell.

THE SCANDAL POLICY.

The Conservative party is a great party and has claim upon the country for beneficial national achievements. It has had in its ranks some men of ability and patriotism. But it seems to have fallen on evil days, to have distinctly and deplorably degenerated. What must impress the general reader at this time is the curious spectacle of a once great and influential party, through its press, attempting to influence the people in its favour, and at the same time having no policy to offer as justification for such a course. Previous to the last election, the Conservatives conducted what they described, as a session of scandal. This was done in preparation for an election, and it was finally hoped that the people would unite and turn the Liberals out of office. The politicians and their press, however overlooked the sterling good sense and desire for pair play of the Canadian people and they met the fate of all who hope to gain power by a campaign of untruth and misrepresentation.

Had the allegations made by Conservatives in the House been true, or had they been supported by a tittle of evidence it would have been the clear duty of the Canadian people to change the Government, but the fact was that most astounding statements were made with no proof, and charges of wrong-doing, without evidence, were placed before the people, who took one glance and turned away, disgusted with a party that would employ such childish, unconvincing tactics. The people may be influenced to turn out a Government if scandal is charged and proved, providing the change is made into honester hands, but they must be offered a policy which wil benefit Canada before being convinced that a change is desirable. Scratch the surface of any scandal alleged against the Liberal Government within the past ten years, and you will find a "Tory."

Take the subject of timber and the so-called scandal as to timber. No sooner was the investigation in hand than it was found that the Conservatives, when in office, had given to themselves and party friends in one year for nothing, more timber by 4,000 square miles than the Liberal Government had disposed of by public competition to the highest bidder since coming into power twelve years before. When the suggestion was made by Mr. Foster that Mr. Turriff, when Commissioner of Dominion lands, disposed of timber for less money than it was worth, lo and behold, the records revealed that that the paragon of virtue, George E. Foster, was himself in good old Conservative days an applicant for 50 square miles of timber, free.

When Mr. Foster intimated that Hon. Mr. Brodeur, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, had taken money from one vote, and used it for another purpose, behold the Hansard proved that Mr. Foster had done precisely the same thing when in office and his explanation was "well it all comes out of the same pocket."

When Dr. Reid, Mr. Taylor, chief Conservative whip, and others on their side of the House made the allegations that $1.03 per day per man for outfitting the Arctic was shameful extravagance, the records showed that when Mr. Foster was Minister of Marine and Fisheries he outfitted a vessel for precisely the same object as the Arctic and the cost of the same at a time when supplies were cheaper, was $1.30 per man per day.

When the Saskatchewan Valley Company, referred to in a case in which the Government gave away land for $1 per acre, which was worth $8 per acre, it was found that this very land had been given by a Conservative Government to E. B. Osler's (Conservative M. P. for Toronto), Company, as a bonus, and he had refused to accept it from a Liberal Government upon the ground that it was "not land fairly fit for settlement."

When R. P. Roblin, who stumped the country in the last election, and charged the Liberal Government with endless crime, prospective Minister of the Interior in Mr. Borden's cabinet charged that the Liberal Government had favoured the speculator at the expense of the settler, it was found that the official records proved that Mr. Roblin had sold thousands of acres in Manitoba to the speculators and utterly ignored the rights of the settler.

When this same Roblin implored his hearers in Ontario to turn out the Liberals and install in power himself and Conservative friends because they dealt honestly with the public domain, it was proved that he had sold 6,841 acres of the public land to a furnace man in the employ of his own government, for $1,633 cash, which land found its way into the possession of another Government employee, who in turn sold it for $68,412.75 just five weeks after the Government of R. P. Roblin parted with it for $1,633.

When Mr. Bowser, attorney-general of British Columbia, made his attack on the Laurier Government, and charged that they had made it easy for Japanese to enter the province, his words carried some weight, until Hartley Dewart, K.C., found that Bowser's legal firm had drawn the agreement between the Japanese agent and the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, under which the Japs could enter Canada through the back door by way of Honolulu. Mr. Bowser, who secured the title of "profane babbler," dropped out of the fight very quickly.

The Halifax and Moncton land deals about which so much has been, and is said, were transactions in which the controling factors, both as to valuation and sale, were well known Conservatives.

The charge made that the Liberal Government discriminated against the British immigrant in favour of those from the continent, dropped to the ground when it elicited the fact that under the Conservative Government a bonus of $1.25 was paid on British immigrants, and $5 a head on continental immigrants.

The charge that the Liberal Government did not give the land to the settler, is not repeated, now that the figures prove that the Conservatives gave away 58,097,072 acres to railway coroporations while in office, and that the Liberal Government has not given one acre o fland to a railway corporation since coming into power.

The charge that the west was not settled by the farmer, but that the Liberal Government had given the land to the speculator, vanished into thin air when the figures were produced which proved, that in eighteen years the Conservative Government gave 9,952,840 acres to homesteaders, and in twelve years the Liberal Government gave 35,501,600 acres to homesteaders.

Those who talked loudest of illegal commisisions were silent when the transactions of the Foresters were laid bare, and a number of Conservative officials, who had been kept by the Liberals, had been proved guilty by the Cassels' Commission, and were discharged from the service of the Government.

From this it will be seen that a party without a policy, and which relies upon scandal, of which the above are fair samples, has nothing to recommend it to the consideration of the people of Canada. In 1896, when the Laurier Government came into power, the most disgraceful condition of affairs prevailed in the country. Manufacturers were discouraged, farmers were dissatisfied, the northwest was empty, the annual expenses were in excess of the revenue, and growing, the public debt was increasing, and the revenue diminishing. Many grave scandals had been brought to members of the then government, who were fighting among themselves. The advent of Liberals to office and its tremendous responsibilty brought revolutionary changes in the conditions of all national interests. Manufacturers were flooded with business, farmers became prosperous, and contented; the Northwest was filled by wheat-growing settlers, the public debt was kept on an even basis; the revenue was increased, deficits disappeared, and in the past thirteen years no charge of corruption has been brought against any member of the Government. On the occasion of three general elections the people have emphatically expressed their confidence and our Conservative friends must show much stronger reason than they have heretofore been able to do, before the popular confidence will be withdrawn from the Liberal Government of the Dominion, and given to a party whose leading members have no confidence in each other.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Northward the star of empire takes its way. The alleged feat of Cook and Peary of finding the Pole, is insignificant compared with the solid advantages that come from planting a railway in an unserved region. A western financier has returned from the Old Country with millions of capital for building a railway from Edmonton to Fort Murray in the far north. This is a forerunner of the agricultural and commercial conquest of a vast region, capable of producing cereals and abounding in valuable deposits of minerals, such as coal, coal oil, gold, silver, copper, etc. The North Pole quest has made thieves and liars of honest men, while the quest of the soil and water riches of the great waterways region north of Edmonton, will bring bread and plenty to millions.

Why Not Fill Your Body WITH NEW ENERGY

And avoid the weakness and tired feelings of spring—You can do this by using DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

You need not be a victim of circumstances and suffer all the weakening and depressing effects of spring.

Tired feelings, headaches, indigestion and nervous troubles all fly when the system is flooded with rich, red blood.

Energy and vigour only come after all the ordinary wants of the system are supplied. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so wonderfully successful as a blood builder that you soon begin to feel strong and healthy by its use.

By means of its great restorative treatment you can rebuild the body when it has been wasted by worry, overwork, lingering colds or the depressing and debilitating effects of spring.

There is no reaction after the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, because it is not a stimulant. On the contrary it is a blood forming, system building medicine which by working hand in hand with Nature proves of lasting benefit to the system and thoroughly drives out weakness and disease by filling the system with new energy and vigour.

Mrs. H. A. Loynes, nurse, Phillipsburg, Que., writes: "I was all run down and could not do my work. Everything I ate made me sick. In nursing others I had seen the good results of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and resolved to try it. As a result of this treatment I have gained ten lbs., do my own work alone and feel like an entirely different person."

OUR CITIZENS ARE URGED TO STAND BY EXHIBITION

It seems to be the fact that Peterborough merchants, as a body, do not take the active interest in the Central Exhibition that would be expected from a class that desires a substantial advantage from the presence in the city of the crowds the Exhibition attracts. The merchants, however, might well do something to recognize the occasion and brighten the city by a display of flags and bunting. Nothing gives such an air of life and brightness as the general display of the meteor flag.

At the same time the citizens generally are urged to loyally patronize the exhibition.. Of course it is not as great as the National Exhibition, but it is our own, and the better it is supported by the public the better it can be made and will become. It cannot be made what it can be made without the active cooperation of the farming community, and the citizens of Peterborough.

COULD NOT KEEP THIS SECRET

"Six months ago I was cured of piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment," writes Mrs. G. A. Swayze, Copenhagen, Elgin Co., Ont. "I had been afflicted for over thirty years and tried all sorts of treatments in vain, so I was surprised and delighted to be cured. I don't care for publicity but would like to tell every one suffering from piles about Dr. Chase's Ointment."

GRATEFUL ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Roberts, Stewart street, desire, through the medium of the press, to extend their hearty thanks to the loving friends who so willingly sacrified their time to render assistance to them in their hour of trial. They especially wish to thank the young men who so willingly offered themselves as bearers, and also the officers and members of St. John's church. It is with a sincere sense of gratitude that Mr. and Mrs. Roberts extend their thanks to all those who did their best to lighten the load of sorrow which it has been their lot to bear.

Came To His Death Indirectly From The Struggle, Says The Jury

"No, sir."

"Did you hear Bollard say anything to Jopling about any unfairness or foul play?"

"No, sir."

"Did you hear the word 'Rotten' or Bollard call out 'Let go?'"

"No, sir."

"That is strange."

"I wasn't paying much attention," replied the witness.

"Did you get any hint of the trouble before you left the hotel?" asked the Coroner.

"No, sir."

"Did any one mention Bollard's name to you"

"No, sir."

"Did you try to separate them that night?" asked Mr. Wood.

"Yes, sir."

"When was that?"

"They were standing on their feet, talking to one another and shaking hands," replied Gravelle, amid loud laughter from the spectators.

"Did any one interfere with you?"

"No. Short Long touched me on the shoulder and started to laugh at me."

"Did he say anything to you?"

"No."

"He just laughed at you?"

"Yes."

"Did you hear the word 'Dirty' used?"

'No."

Laughed at Him.

Gordon Long was recalled.

"Did you hear the evidence of the previous witness?"

"Yes, sir."

"Was it right?"

"As far as I was concerned it was."

"Did you touch him on the shoulder and laugh?"

"Yes, sir."

"Why did you do that?"

"I though it was a kind of a joke at that stage."

"Was he the joke?" asked Mr. Wood, smiling.

"Not in particular."

"You were glad it was over?" the Coroner asked.

"I wasn't sorry."

"Did you say anything to him?"

"I said something; I forget what it was."

Refused to Answer

There was a craning of necks and a murmur ran through the crowded court when Fred Jopling's name was called as that of the next witness. With his right arm in a sling Jopling entered the box and was sworn.

"You live in Bridgenorth?" asked Mr. Wood, commencing his examination.

"I refuse to answer any questions that may be asked me on the ground that my answers may incriminate me," stated the witness firmly amid a dead silence.

"Your objection entitles you to the protection of the court," answered the Crown Attorney. "Any statements you make now cannot be used against you hereafter but you must answer the questions."

A Lively Tilt

"That is not a very nice objection," remarked the Coroner.

"It is quite proper," replied Mr. O'Connell.

"It may be proper but it is not very nice," returned the Coroner. "If I was in his position I would want to tell the whole truth."

Mr. O'Connell objected to the Coroner's statement and to the way in which the examination was being conducted. "I wish to make a public protest," he stated. "Such proceedings are highly improper and injudicial."

"Are you in a position to come here and talk to me like that?" exclaimed the Coroner.

"I don't want you to dictate to me," he went on. "This is a serious matter, not a matter of dollars and cents, its a matter of life and death. I'll not allow you or anybody else to dictate to me. I'll do my duty or try to do it and if I can't why I'll resign, I only want to get at the truth and I am not going to allow it to slide over, I'd do the same if that man there," pointing to Fred Jopling, "were my brother."

"Mr. O'Connell again objected to the nature of the proceedings, saying that it was shameful but Dr. Gray advised him to remain silent.

Fred Jopling's Evidence.

The examination was then resumed.

"You live in Bridgenorth?"

"Yes, sir".

"You supply the cottagers at the park during the summer as a grocer and butcher?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you know Bollard?"

"No, sir, I did not."

"What was the first knowledge you had of him?"

"About ten o'clock on the night of the trouble Blake Cullen spoke to me. He said there were two fellows laying for my brother down in the park. He called me out of the hotel to tell me.

"Did he tell you who they were?"

"No, sir."

"Did you know Bollard by sight then?"

"No, sir."

"Did you ask Cullen who they were?"

"No, sir, I did not ask any questions. I struck off down the verandah and called Harry who was over at the swings. He came over to me and I walked towards him. We met about the middle of the road. I asked him what they were laying for him for and he said he did not know."

"I said to him, come on down and we'll find out."

"You went down into the park?"

"Yes, sir."

"Harry's way home lay in the opposite direction?"

"Yes, sir."

"You knew they were not likely to catch him in the park?"

"Well, the last I saw of him was with two girls who I knew had to go down into the park." He was with them when I called him."

"Did you know where the fellows were going to lay for him."

"No, sir, I had it in my mind to go as far as Seidenburg's cottage, where the girls had to go."

Told Cullen to Stay Back.

"What did you tell Blake Cullen?"

"I told him to stay back after I met my brother and we dropped back. We went on."

"Did you run?"

"I ran part of the way."

"Did you see the Bollard party?"

"Yes, sir."

"Were they walking or standing still?"

"They seemed to be standing on the path".

"How many were there?"

"It looked to me as if there were four, three gentlemen and a lady. I don't know for sure, but I thought there were four."

"Were you running when you came up to them?"

"No, sir, we stopped running outside of five or six yards from them."

"You followed on then?"

"Yes, we followed on."

"Was anything said?"

"My brother said, 'I think that's him now.'"

"Were you excited?"

"I was not a bit excited."

"Was it dark?"

"It was pretty dark, yes."

'What next?"

Jumped on His Brother.

"Bollard jumped on my brother and crushed him right to the ground".

"How old is your brother?"

"Seventeen years."

"And Bollard?"

"I don't know; the papers said nineteen."

'How old are you?

"I am 27."

"What happened then?"

"I told Bollard not to jump on a kid; I took him by the shoulder, but he paid no attention to me. I then put my arms around his neck and pulled him off."

"Was there any shouting?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who did the shouting?"

"My brother cried out in a half-choking voice as if he was being choked." I told Bollard to get on his feet, and I would talk to him on my brother's behalf."

"That doesn't correspond with what other witnesses say," remarked the Crown Attorney.

"It doesn't matter what the other witnesses say; that's the truth." said the witness, emphatically.

"I Can Trim You."

"Did Bollard say anything?"

"He said: 'I can trim you or anything you have got down there." I said 'Are you all ready,' and he said 'yes,' and I said, 'Let her go,' and he rushed at me."

"How did you catch him?"

"I caught him under the arms."

"It was a sort of a scrimmage?"

"Yes, it was a wrestle."

"Was it friendly?"

"Not very friendly."

"Were you angry?"

"No."

"What happened?"

Tried to Turn Him Over.

"I threw Bollard on to the road on his shoulder, and we turned into the ditch; I ran my hand between his legs and tried to turn him over. He hollered."

"Did you hear him say 'Let go?'"

"No, sir, I just heard him holler."

"What did you do when Bollard turned over?"

"I struck him with my fist in the face."

"A hard blow?"

"Yes, it was a good smart blow."

"Did you strike him more than once?"

"No, sir."

"How did you run your hands between his legs?"

"From behind."

"Did you catch hold of anything?"

"No, sir."

"How do you account for those parts being injured?"

"I don't know unless they were squeezed by my arm?"

"Did Harry catch him in that way?"

"I did not see him catch like that. He hadn't time."

"That was the only hold you had on him that way that night?"

"Yes, sir."

Learned Held Around Home.

"Where did you learn that hold?"

"I learned it around home, where I do a little wrestling."

"Not many around Bridgenorth can upset you?"

"Not many; my other brother there has turned me over."

"What happened when you struck Bollard in the face?"

"He kind of gave up."

"Was it from the effects of the hold or of the blow?"

"I don't know."

"Did you get up?"

"I got up and he got up right after, and we walked over to where Marks and Mr. Hartshorn were."

"Did Mr. Hartshorn separate you?"

"No, sir."

"Did any one separate you?"

"No, sir; we separated on our own accord."

"Did you hear only one cry from Bollard?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did he say 'Dirty,' and 'Let me go?'"

'I did not hear him."

"Other witnesses have sworn that he said 'Let go' three times, and 'dirty' twice, said the Crown Attorney.

"Not to my hearing."

"You did not let go of him on account of that cry."

"No, I got off him when he fell back."

Cause of the Quarrel.

"I said to Marks," witness continued, "What is this all about?', and Marks said that my brother had called Bollard a name; that they were down in the village, and that Harry had talked about Bollard's dirty trousers, and had then called him the name and drove off."

"How did you get your hand injured?"

"I don't know. It is cut in three places on the knuckle; perhaps the gravel scratched it."

"Did you know how Bollard cut his finger?"

"No, sir."

"It is said that it was bitten."

"I did not bite anybody."

"I turned to Harry," witness went on, 'and asked him if he had called Bollard the name mentioned. He said that he had not. Bollard said that he did. I said "Harry, if you called Mr. Bollard that name you must take it back. The easiest way out is the best. I told him to shake hands and they did so. Bollard then said to me "That wasn't a fair way you caught me." I told him I would show him how it was and I ran my hand between his legs from the rear. He just turned and said:

"I'll wrestle you for five dollars and I said I'll take you."

"You had a hard wrestle?"

"Yes, it was harder on me than the fight."

The Wrestling Match.

"We took side holds and he asked if I was all ready. He put his foot under mine and tried to bring me back, but I put on a hip-lock and he came my way and came hard; I threw him on his back and he tried to turn me over. When he couldn't he turned over himself and I got off him. He then came at me with his head down, and I said "I don't know anything about catch-as-catch-can; let us take side holds.' He, however, ran his hand between my legs from in front and threw me in half a minute and held me.

"Did the fall hurt you?"

"No, sir. I got up and said 'We'll have another with side holds. That was hardly a fair shake.' Bollard, however, said, 'I'm all in.'"

"'All in' commonly means exhausted, I suppose?"

"Yes, sir. Bollard walked over to a pine tree and vomited. He sat down on the grass and then lay down. He complained of being bit on 'he shoulder. I told him that I did not bite him, but he said I did so. I got a match, lit it, and showed him that there was gravel stuck in the shoulder and that his arm was covered with dust. I brushed the dirt and gravel off him. I said to him 'It's too bad, old chap, that we got into this trouble.' I shook hands with him and with Miss Minns and Marks. I asked Bollard if he would be all right and he replied that he would be all right in a few minutes, and I said goodnight and came home with my brother".

No Occasion to Interfere.

"Do you know where Seilenburg's cottage is?"

"You had no occasion to interfere with them?"

"No, sir."

"Harry would have no occasion to interfere as there was no one to interfere with the girls?"

"No."

"Did Cullen keep back when you told him to?"

"At the time he did, but afterwards I saw him down there."

"Did you hear any one running after you?"

"No, sir, there were just the two of us."

"Did you see Charlie Forsythe there?"

"Not until it was all over."

"Did you know that he had been sent for, to see things through?"

"No, sir."

"You wouldn't think it likely that fellows that were laying for a man would have a lady with them?"

"I wouldn't have."

Another Hot Argument.

Dr. Gray rigidly examined the witness as to his purpose in following the Bollard party.

"Why did you waylay that young man?" he asked.

Mr. O'Connell was on his feet in a second to object again.

"I want to make a public protest against this cross examination on the part of the Coroner," he announced.

"I am not cross examining him. I only want to get the information."

Another Verbal Fight

"Are you charging the witness with waylaying Bollard?" asked Mr. O'Connell.

"You go and sit down," retorted the Coroner and he went on questioning Jopling as to his reason for going down.

Mr. O'Connell stated that he would not sit down without having made a protest against the cross-examination of the witness by the Coroner.

Dr. Gray however, went right ahead with his examination.

"What would you have done if you had been placed as Bollard was? Wouldn't you have fought as he did?" he asked.

Mr. O'Connell again rose and protested but Dr. Gray told him to sit down and keep his mouth shut.

"Why didn't you get an explanation from Bollard when he was in the light around the pavilion?" asked the Coroner.

Mr. O'Connell protested again. "If this method of cross-examination is continued," he stated slowly and distinctly, "I will make representations to the department concerning your conduct."

"I respect you Mr. O'Connell, but you had better sit down quietly," said the doctor.

Jopling stated that he went down to get an explanation and if Bollard had not jumped on his brother the thing would not have occurred.

The Cause of Death.

Dr. T. N. Greer, who assisted Dr. Scott in the post mortem examination, was recalled.

"I think, Doctor," remarked Mr. Wood, "that you can give the jury your opinion of the cause of the death of Arthur Bollard, in a clearer form than you have previously done."

"The primary cause of death," replied the witness, "was inflammation of the bowels and stomach, and I consider as a predisposing cause the condition of his body as a result of the struggle on that Monday night.

"The only external injury was the discoloration of the private parts. That in itself would not cause the inflammation in the bowels and stomach, but taking that slight injury into consideration with the severe struggle he went through, I believe that his vitality was so lowered that in the succeeding two days the functions of his organs were so impaired and interfered with that an attack of any disease that might ordinarily be called mild, would have a more serious result.

Caused Indigestion.

"I consider it likely that the condition the struggle left him in caused indigestion. Particles of undigested food fermented in the bowels, this fermentation being caused by germs and producing poisons, culminating in blood poisoning or toxaemia. I found no wound that I could say directly caused death. I could not understand the amount of inflammation in any other way than that his vitality was so lowered, his resisting powers so interfered with, that he could not stand off an attack that might not otherwise have proved fatal."

"Suppose that a young man is in a struggle on Monday night; appears all right until Thursday morning; a physician is called in and he dies Friday night. Did you think it possible for septicaemia to start in on Thursday morning and culminate fatally on Friday night?" asked the Coroner.

"I would not think it likely," was the reply.

To Mr. O'Connell witness said that a blow over the solar plexus, paralyzing the nerve centres and organs might cause sudden death. It was possible for death to occur from a pin scratch or from some other trivial accident."

Struggle Would Have Effect.

"The struggle even without any injury would have an effect?" asked Mr. O'Connell.

"Yes, it would contribute largely, lowering his vitality so that he would have less resisting power to withstand the effects of the inflammation."

"It might occur to a man lifting too much or over exerting himself in any way?"

"Yes, sir."

"Blood poisoning from a pin scratch would show itself at the part injured?" asked Mr. Wood.

"At or near the part, yes."

Dr. Morgan Not Heard.

Dr. Greer was the last witness called. It was intimated that the jury would like to hear the testimony of Dr. J. A. Morgan, who was present during the post mortem.

Crown Attorney Wood explained to the jury that they might as well put Mr. O'Connell on the stand. He stated that Dr. Morgan had been attending Fred Jopling, and had been in consultation with his counsel.

Coroner Gray also made an explanation. They had had the testimony of two good doctors, who were officially employed to make the investigation.

Dr. Morgan could not go into the box and gainsay their statements. He had not been present in an official capacity.

Mr. O'Connell suggested that the jury would like to hear Dr. Morgan's testimony.

Coroner Gray said that he was willing to leave the matter to a vote of the jury, and accordingly a show of hands was called for. It resulted in seven votes each way.

"It's a tie," announced the Coroner," and I suppose I have the deciding vote."

"It's not a question of a vote," remarked Mr. O'Connell; "it is a matter that rests entirely at your discretion."

"Well, call Dr. Morgan," commanded the Coroner.

Constable Moore called Dr. Morgan's name several times, but he failed to respond.

"That's all the evidence I have to put in," stated the Crown Attorney.

The Charge to Jury.

Dr. Gray then briefly charged the jury. "The Joplings are decent people, as far as I know," he said. "They have been catering to the campers at the park, and have been well patronized, I hear. You have heard it stated that Harry Jopling warned people to come and protect him. I don't take much account of it. They practically followed those two boys and the girl. You have heard it said that Harry made arrangements to have people on hand. It is unlawful to waylay people going home.

"This is a serious matter, not merely a matter of dollars and cents. That injury was the predisposing cause of Bollard's death. It is possible for a man to sustain an injury that is treated lightly, but that results fatally. I am not going to dictate to you what you shall do; I am leaving the matter in your hands."

The jury was then taken from the room at five minutes to 10 o'clock. They were out one hour, for which period the majority of the crowd that thronged the court room remained discussing the case and speculating upon the verdict. Very few left the court room until the decision had been given.

A minute or two before 11 o'clock the fourteen jurymen filed back into the room and handed their written verdict to the Coroner, who read it aloud to the anxious crowd, who crowded forward into places of vantage as the jury entered.

There was no comment after the decision was read. Dr. Gray announced to the spectators that that ended the proceedings as far as they were concerned and the crowd noisily dispersed, the jury being dismissed a few minutes later, after arrangements had been made for their recompense for attendance.

LARGE EARNINGS

An Established Business—Burt Company's Departments Profitable Over a Term of Years—This Year's Estimates.

The certificate of Messrs. Clarkson & Cross, the auditors of the F. N. Burt Company, Limited, whose securities are being offered by A. E. Ames & Co., of Toronto, goes to show that not only has the business been profitable over a term of years, but that present conditions are very healthy.

The Accountants certify that the computed profits for the first eight months of 1909 are $79,543.20, and that on the basis of this computation, cost experience and volume and character of orders on hand they feel justified in estimating net profits for the year 1909 of $119,000. While the F. N. Burt Company, Limited, takes over the businesses as of September 1st, 1909, it is pointed out that these estimated earnings would provide $52,500 for a year's dividends on the Preference stock and $66,500, being 8 7-8 per cent. on the Common Stock, for depreciation charges and Common stock dividends.

The foregoing is indicative of the basis of the statement of Mr. S. J. Moore, President of the Burt Company, as follows: "I am confident that the Company will be able to maintain its dividends on the Preference stock at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum and that, commencing January 1st next, the Directors will be justified in paying quarterly dividends of one per cent. on the Common stock, being at the rate of four per cent per annum, while prospects are excellent for increases in dividends on the Common stock from time to time thereafter."

Mr. Moore is on record as stating that the prospects for a favourable experience with the F. N. Burt Company, Limited, securities are quite as good as were the prospects of Wm. A. Rogers, Limited, at the time its shares were sold to the public a few years ago. The Rogers Preference shares, which are now quoted at about 110, were sold at par, without any Common stock bonus, and the Rogers Common shares, which at that time were worth about $40 each, are now worth about $140 each, and carry dividends at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

DELAY TACTICS DEFEATED BY PEREMPTORY ORDER OF THE COURT

Mr. Burnham Ordered to Attend Examination for Discovery and Answer Questions He Has So Far Evaded Re Protest.

A motion was made by Mr. J. Grayson Smith, on behalf of the Hon. J. R. Stratton, before the Hon. Mr. Justice Magee at Osgoode Hall, in the City of Toronto, yesterday afternoon, for an order to commit Mr. J. Hampden Burnham for contempt of Court, or else to attend at his own expense and answer the questions that were submitted to him on his examination on the 9th inst., and to produce letters and correspondence which he failed to produce. Mr. Burnham declined to answer all questions relating to dealings of himself and others on his behalf as to alleged detectives, notwithstanding that he was being examined under the Cross Petition, in which it is alleged that these detectives were really working for Burnham, as canvassers in his election, and were treating and bribing voters. An affidavit was filed upon the motion showing that one of these alleged detectives admitted that he received several hundred dollars from Mr. J. H. Burnham and his official agent, Mr. James Kendry, and others, to work for Mr. Burnham during his election, and he further admitted that he spoke to electors in Mr. Burnham's interest, and that he spent considerable money in treating electors.

Mr. J. A. Jones, of Toronto, represented Mr. Burnham on the motion. After a lengthy argument, lasting several hours, Mr. Justice Magee ordered Mr. Burnham to attend and answer all questions regarding his dealings and transactions with the alleged detectives, and to attend for examination forthwith at his own expense. The costs of the motion were directed to be paid by Mr. Burnham in any event.

Owen Sound Bookseller Tells How School Book Business Is Bungled

He Addresses an Energetic Open Letter to Deputy Minister of Education Colquhoun---Old Books Condemned and New Ones Not Obtainable.

Mr. R. J. Edgar, one of the leading stationers of Owen Sound, sends the following letter, which there is reason to believe reflects the sentiments and experience of others in the trade, to Mr. A. H. U. Colquhoun, Deputy Minister of Education:—

Dear Sir,—After appealing in vain to the different educational publishers in Toronto for better service on public and high school text books, they have referred us to your department. We have also written the different publishers of text books in regard to compensation on books that have recently been cut off by your department without a moment's notice to the trade. They have informed us that they can do nothing in this particular; that they are in the same predicament as ourselves, and again refer us to your department.

It seems reasonable that we should have some explanation from you. Let us inquire into the latter reference first; that is to say, the changing of authorized text books without due notice to the trade or the pupils. Naturally enough we feel unfairly used in this particular.

It is quite impossible to avoid being caught with text books that yesterday were worth one hundred cents on the dollar and to-day are not worth anything but what heat they may generate in the furnace.

Our personal experience this term is that we find ourselves stocked with Gage's Practical Speller, public school readers, high school bookkeeping, arithmetic, geography and Botsford's Ancient History.

All the above were authorized text books and in full use at the close of last term, June, 1909. We had no notice that any or all of these publications would be discontinued until after the present school term opened this month. In fact, the schools were informed of the discontinuation of the above text books. This intimation we did not receive from your department, as we naturally would expect, but from the press, local teachers, and pupils. We immediately proceeded to try and procure the newly-authorized text books, a task we have found almost impossible, owing to the delay in publication.

The public school readers have been taken from the "octopus book ring" and given over to the infant industry, The Timothy Eaton Co., who have plastered their trade mark over the cover and use the readers as a huge advertising scheme. What does this concern know of the supply and demand for school books? Evidently very little. We have had a standing order now for over three weeks for the Primer, First Reader, Third Reader, and Fourth Reader, none of which we have since been able to procure. We cannot even succeed in procuring a statement when we may expect to receive the same. We have written and telegraphed, to no avail, while the pupils are demanding these books daily. We have information from other districts that their situation is similar to ours.

The newly-authorized High School Physical Geography and Ancient History are not ready yet, and we are informed that they may not be supplied for a month. While we have in stock plenty of text books the above are substituting we are not allowed to supply the same. The trouble is not alone with the bookseller. We are daily having complaints from parents about the sudden changes of the text books. They inquire what they are to do with the recent purchased readers and text books which they say would have served for years with other members of the family, while now new purchases are necessary.

It may seem ridiculous to you for an ordinary bookseller to offer suggestions, but it does seem practical to us that if you had given the bookseller and the pupils six or twelve months' notice of any change of text books all trouble or confusion with either or with the publishers might easily have been avoided. It would have been fair to the dealer—he could have disposed of his stock—while the pupil would have avoided purchasing unnecessarily.

Your License Department allows the "whiskey dealer" three to six months to dispose of his stock after he has had notice of the discontinuance of his license. Is the book trade not entitled to at least as fair treatment from your department? What are we going to do with the text books you have cancelled without notice? Are you going to allow us any compensation on these books? We are only asking what we are entitled to from your department, with the desire to know if this sort of thing is going to continue; also to learn just where the bookseller stands with the Education Department.

Yours very truly, R. J. EDGAR.
Owen Sound, Sept. 13.

Lansdowne Street Residents Can Blame Themselves Re Walk

The Lansdowne street resident who complained to an Examiner reporter yesterday that the City had neglected that highway by not providing what they called a decent sidewalk, seems to have erred as the residents have not been treated as badly as he states. Engineer Hay explained the matter to the Examiner and it seems that last autumn the residents on the north side of the street were informed that it was necessary that they move back their frontages to make the street of required width. The distances varied from four to fourteen feet. None of the property holders did as was requested, and they therefore did not get the sidewalk. They were told that the sidewalk would be the very first to be laid at the south end of the city. The residents did not comply and the old board walk became dangerous to pedestrians, and had to be torn up. A gravel walk was laid this summer and not mud, as stated by a Lansdowne Streeter. This is the situation, and apparently the Board of Works did their duty in trying to give the people of that street a good walk.

LOCAL DEPUTATION TO WAIT UPON MACKENZIE AND MANN

It has been decided that a deputation from the Peterboro' city Council will wait upon Messrs. Mackenzie and Mann at once in an endeavour to have the proposed Toronto-Ottawa C. N.R. touch that city. The personnel of the party is left to the discretion of Mayor Ruah of Peterborough. The visit from prominent residents of the electric city is due, it is understood, to a hint thrown out by the C.N.R. authorities that in the event of certain concessions being granted the road might be turned sufficiently north to touch that city before turning down to Lake Ontario at Cobourg. This new route would mean but a very slight deviation being made in the route which the C.N.R. executive have practically decided to follow.—Toronto Globe.

Council Will Expropriate Land For Aylmer Street If Offer Is Refused

Decide to Commence Proceedings for Arbitration if Ex-Mayor Best Still Declines to Accept $500—Conroy Bros. get Contract—Cheques Returned.

DISCUSS AGREEMENT AGAIN.

The Council with Mayor Rush in the chair and Ald. Buller, the only absentee, met last night for the purpose of awarding the Smith street bridge contract or rather of reawarding it and incidentally several other matters cropped up and were attended to. The following report of the Committee of the Whole Council was read by Ald. Phelan and on his motion seconded by Ald. McIntyre.

That Geo. A. Begy & Co., having withdrawn from the contract for the construction of the Smith Street bridge, the next lowest tender, that of E. and F. Conroy, at the prices mentioned in their tender, be accepted, and if the moving of the bridge, as asked by Messrs. Conroy, by which they will reduce their price by $1,000, will in the opinion of the City Engineer not injure the bridge or cause the city extra expense, that the bridge be moved accordingly.

The by-law giving the contract to the Conroy Bros. was given its readings and passed.

The question of returning to Begy & Co. the cheque deposited with their tender was introduced. Mr. Begy had asked to have it returned to him. The aldermen were for the most part in favour of giving it to him considering the circumstances. Ald. Bradburn said there was no particular hurry and it might be retained for a while. Ald. Morrow was of similar opinion. "It is not business to return it. This man tendered against local men and was awarded the contract." According to business methods Ald. Morrow considered that the cheque should be forfeited by the tenderer. Ald. McIntyre said he did not want to keep Begy's money and considered it a mean principle. Ald. Turner, Ald. Duncan, Ald. Duffus and others expressed their opinions. Ald. Duncan agreed with Ald. Bradburn that it would not do any harm to retain the cheque for a short time. Ald. Turner and McIntyre moved that Mr. Begy's cheque be given back to him. Ald. Bradburn and Morrow moved in amendment that this question be allowed to remain over for a time. The motion carried. Alderman Bradburn asked for the ayes and nays on the motion which were as follows.: Yeas, Ald. Phelan, Turner, Morgan, Metheral, McIntyre, Duffus,. Nays, Gillespie, Morrow, Duncan and Bradburn.

Aylmer Street Again

Although ex-Mayor Best promised the Council that he would convince them that the strip of his property required for the extension of Aylmer street was worth $800 they still maintain $500 is a sufficient sum and in accordance with that idea it was moved by Ald. McIntyre and Turner that the City Solicitor be instructed to offer Mr. Best $500 and if he refused that proceedings be taken to expropriate the part required. The citizens have already the information regarding this matter as it has been published several times already.

The strip is 60 feet wide by 220 in length and it has been emphasized that if it is opened up Mr. Best will be given 440 feet extra street frontage which can be divided into fine building lots. Ald. Morgan expressed his opinion by saying that it was a little bit of a hold-up on the part of Mr. Best, and as the city has not had a case for arbitration yet he suggested that that means be tried. The aldermen are desirous of giving the Princess street residents and property holders the extension of Aylmer street and steps will be taken immediately to expropriate the strip.

The Franchise Agreement

Messrs. J. H. Larmonth and E. A. Peck representing the Peterborough Light and Power Co. were present at last night's meeting to discuss with the Council certain changes in the proposed agreement which has been under consideration all summer, changes which were pointed out by the City Solicitor in committee.

Some of the aldermen did not want the question discussed. In view of the request from the Otonabee Power Co., Ald. Phelan urged that both companies be heard together. Ald. Gillespie held that the Peterborough Light and Power Comany's agreement should be considered. He had handled it so long and so often that he was getting tired of putting it off.

Ald. Morgan voiced another faction. "Put them both to one side, Mr. Mayor," he said, "I like to see these companies in a hurry, but I'm not, and the people are not. The people want to take their time in this matter and and if we wait a bit we may get an offer to our liking. They will come to us—there is no need of us going after them."

Ald. Morrow backed up Ald. Gillespie, and the representatives of the Peterborough Light and Power Co. were called in.

Mr. Larmonth objected to several proposed changes in the agreement, and without leaving any room for doubt said that they would not proceed in the matter if the city demanded them. "I have been instructed not to submit to any further concessions. We have given to the city a great many things." Mr. Larmonth said a 20 year franchise was of no use to them. "We feel that we have a pretty good thing without the franchise," Mr. Larmonth remarked. The council wanted the 30 years reduced to 20, but Mr. Larmonth refused.

Another stumbling block was Ald. Hicks' suggestion that should the company market all its power they give the city the right to use their poles for power which the city may acquire.

Mr. Larmonth made a noise that sounded like "No," in capitals. The city could use the poles for street lighting but not for power or domestic lighting purposes.

"We hope to supply the demand in Peterborough, no matter what it is," he said; "I do not see any need for that at all. It is getting in the thin edge of the wedge there."

"We are anxious to remove from the streets as many poles as possible, and we expected that you would help as much as possible," Ald. Hicks replied.

"We are asking you to stick to the Hydro-Electric Commission Act. We are not asking for any right the city has or may have."

Ald. Hicks suggested that the rates referred to in the agreement apply to power generated within a radius of 25 miles of the city. Mr. Larmonth again refused. Ald. Hicks cut the radius in two, but the company would not go beyond the city's limits. Other points were discussed, and Ald. Hicks and Ald. Duncan moved that a copy of the proposed agreement be sent to each alderman that they could study it thoroughly, and that another meeting to be held next Wednesday.

The meeting was then adjourned.

THE COUNCIL'S DOINGS

Awarded Smith Street bridge contract to Conroy Bros., at price estimated by City Engineer, at $28,457.

Gave back Geo. A. Begy & Co. cheque deposited with their tender for the contract.

Decided to expropriate land owned by Mr. Henry Best for Aylmer street extension, if he refuses offer of $500.00.

Discussed with Mr. J. H. Larmonth clauses in proposed agreement for thirty-year franchise.

Shelved for the present a letter from the Otonabee Light and Power Co., for a twenty-year franchise.

AN AUTHORITY WRITES ON INSURANCE RATES

To the Editor of The Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—During the past few days reference has been made in our local papers to reduced insurance rates for Peterborough. The city is to be congratulated on its equipment which has made the reduction possible.

It occurs to me, however, that the articles referred to may be, to some, misleading, and I, therefore, offer an explanation.

It is true, as stated, that there has been a reduction of 25 cents in the key rate. There are, however, many other features to be taken into consideration in arriving at a rate on a mercantile or manufacturing risk. It does not, therefore, necessarily follow that the reduced key rate will give a lower net rate in every case. As a matter of fact, while of course in the majority of cases the rates are to some extent reduced, there are others whose rates are advanced. In such cases, of course, there are defects or extra hazards charged for, that either did not exist or were not taken into consideration in the previous rating. In such cases the only consolation is that were the key rate not reduced, their rate would be still higher by 25 cents.

Early in the year the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association sent to Peterborough several competent rating officers, who thoroughly inspected every building used for mercantile purposes.

As a result of their report, and taking into consideration the lower key rate promised for improved fire protection and equipment, a new tariff was issued for Peterborough, which took effect, for new business and renewals, on the 9th of August last.

As stated above, the tendency is a reduction, yet some rates remain unchanged, while others are advanced.

There is, of course, some reason for the increase where one is made, and I shall always be pleased, as will any agent, to give any information which may lead to the securing of a more favourable rate.

On dwelling houses of first and second class construction there is a reduction of 5 cents per hundred, and in this respect we are in the same class as the city of Toronto. On third and fourth class dwellings, there is no change in the rate.

Trusting that this explanation may prevent any misunderstanding with respect to rates, I remain,

Respectfully,
W. J. THOMPSON.

PREVENTION IS WORTH WHILE.

When you consider the risk to life, the expense, the anxiety which is involved in an attack of appendicitis and a surgical operation, it is certainly worth while to avoid it by keeping the liver and bowels regular by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Doctors are now unanimously of the opinion that appendicitis comes from a neglect to keep the liver and bowels in a healthful condition.

RE NORTHUMBERLAND AND DURHAM POWER COMPANY

The Port Hope Guide has the following:

The Northumberland-Durham Power Company, lessee of the whole of Healey Falls power from the Dominion Government, and the Culverwell syndicate, owning certain Trent river powers, north of Trenton and at Campbellford, have completed a contract with a leading financial corporation for the underwriting of two and a half million dollars bonds for the development of these powers.

The deal was consummated by Mr. John Alexander Culverwell, of Port Hope, Managing Director of the Company and of the syndicate, assisted by R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., of Toronto and Lindsay. Power will be transmitted to Belleville and the cement mills, Deseronto, Napanee and Kingston: also west to Port Hope and Cobourg, and also north to Havelock, Norwood and Blairton mining districts.

Eighteen Municipal Councils have officially endorsed the Government Lease to the Company, which has been organized by the leading manufacturers and business men of the district.

These powers will be developed on the dam being built by the Dominion Government for the Trent Canal

OBITUARY

MRS. W. PARNELL

The many friends of Mr. Wallie Parnell of this city will sympathize with him in the loss he has sustained by the death of his wife who passed away in Toronto on Tuesday, at the residence of her father, Mr. Charles Goodacre, 77 Humber street. Her death was due to heart failure. She was 27 years of age and was well known and highly respected. Her many friends in Peterborough will learn with deep regret of her demise.

Her husband, three children, her parents and one brother and one sister are left to mourn her loss.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 from the family residence, 552 Bethune street to the Little Lake Cemetery.

World's Record Twice Broken By Sensational Maggie Winder

The sensational Maggie Winder has twice broken the world's record for three-year-old pacing fillies this year. At Lexington she paced a mile in 2.08¼, and at Indianapolis, in the Western Horseman stake, she stepped in 2.06¼. The former world's record was 2.08¾, held by Brenda Yorke. Maggie Winder is a bay filly, owned by J. M. Winder of Bristol, Pa. She is by Oratorio out of Clara Direct, she by the great Direct. In her record miles the filly was driven by Henry Jones, the Lexington horseman.

CAUGH WITH A HOOK

Mr. Fred Guerin, While Fishing, Caught a Crane Down the River With a Rod and Line.

There have been many fish stories told during the present fishing season that, by their reason of their extremely remarkable features, have startled and astonished the hearers of them. But one has recently come to light that puts all previous ones in the background. The other day, Mr. Fred Guerin of this city was still fishing a few miles down the river. For bait he was using minnows. A crane was flying about when it suddenly dropped to the vicinity of the minnow. It bit at it and was loth to let it go when Mr. Guerin pulled in the line but the crane hung on and when quite near the boat Mr. Guerin grabbed it by the neck. He brought it to the city and now has it at his home.

THE BEST HERITAGE

If nervous energy could be secured by a large cash payment, every person would make a big effort to find the money.

By reason of well directed study, assisted by practical experience, a way has been found to supply energy to jaded and overwrought nerves, without its costing a fortune.

Pure fresh air, exercise, and eating the simplest foods will produce this desired result.

Among foods for human consumption none contain the necessary elements to sustain life in greater quantities than milk and wheat.

Orange Meat which is made from the whole wheat, thoroughly steam cooked, malted, flaked and toasted, contains the necessary elements to sustain life in greater proportions than any other cereal.

Peterborough, Thursday.

Sir,—Far from being angry at the walk on Landsdowne we are pleased. On George St., south of Perry, our shortest route, there is no light at all and part of the way, although they got through a lot of money last year, there is no sidewalk at all. They put a few trees in the way, but fortunately are gradually being worn away. Won't our visitors who walk from the Exhibition feel foolish.—Yours truly, OH! YOU.

ROLLER SKATING CONTEST.

There will be a roller skating contest for ladies and gentlemen at the Auditorium Roller Rink, George St., this evening, when a prize of an umbrella will be given to the best gentleman skater and a parasol to the best lady skater. The Auditorium Roller Rink is the popular place for this popular pastime, and there should be a good crowd present this evening to take part in the competition.

FRED AND HARRY JOPLING ARRESTED

"Has an information been laid in the Bollard case?" the Examiner asked County Magistrate Edmison.

"I am not in a position to give you any information along that line," replied the Magistrate. "You may hear something a little later on this afternoon.

"We have heard that Constable Cochrane has gone out to make an arrest. Will you say anything about that?...

"Not at present," remarked Mr. Edmison and he refused to discuss the case further.

Later.—The Examiner interviewed the County High Constable this afternoon and learned that Harry Jopling was included in the warrant which reads in part as follows and was signed by Magistrate Edmison:—

Whereas Frederick Jopling and Harry Jopling of the township of Smith in the County of Peterbrough have this day been charged upon oath before the undersigned, George Edmison, Police Magistrate and a Justice of the Peace, in, and for the said County of Peterborough, for that they, on Monday, the twenty-fifth day of August, 1909, at the Township of Smith in the said County of Peterborough did kill and slay Arthur Bollard contrary to the provisions of the Criminal Code, etc.

Harry Jopling had gone to Young's Point but will come direct to Peterborough on his return to Bridgenorth, when they will appear before Magistrate Edmison this afternoon. Both are prepared to pay bail. Fred was waiting in the office of his counsel, Mr. D. O'Connell, until his brother arrived. He is suffering from blood poisoning and to such an extent that it is feared that he will lose a finger.

RUGBY

All the Ruby players of the city are reminded that there will be a practice of the senior teams at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon after the ball game and that they are expected to be on hand. There will also be a meeting of the players on Saturday night at the armouries.

LAST GAME OF SEASON

The last ball game of the season will be seen at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, when the championship of the City Baseball League will be decided. The contesting teams will be the West Ends and the T. A. S. The T.A.S. expect to win the game and thereby carry off the championship, while on the other hand the West Ends are just as cocky that they beat the Quinlanites and make a tie between the Abstainers and the Park St. team. Whichever way it turns it will be a good game of ball, and the fans will no doubt want to see the best game of the season. It will be called at 2.30 o'clock at Riverside Park.

LAKEFIELD FAIR—The annual Exhibition of the Lakefield Agricultural Society will be held in the Society's Grounds at Lakefield, on Tuesday and Wednesday, September 28th and 29th. The Directors have made quite a number of improvements during the past season, a fine new Grand Stand having been erected, also a Judge's stand, and an inner ring for Judging Horses and Cattle in. They are expecting a splendid exhibition this year. Prize Lists, entry forms, &c may be obtained from the Secretary, W. Sherin, Lakefield, or any of the Officers or Directors. 4d-64-1w-37 were busy ranging their exhibitors, especially in the main building, where the ladies were hard at work. The display of fancy work upstairs will be better than ever and visitors should not overlook this department. Down stairs there is a splendid collection of professional and amateur photography, while the Singer Sewing Machine Co., T. Barrie & Company, the Brinton Carpet Company and other firms have attractive exhibits. Others will be installed this afternoon, and every foot of space in the main building will be utilized. Other manufactureres and business men have exhibits in tents outside, many of which were arranged this morning. The Ontario Department of Agriculture is one of these.

As early as this morning the Midway attractions were being arranged, a family of "Royal English gypsies" having the honour to be the first to get ready for business.

The half-mile track, one of the best in Canada, was never in better shape than it is just now and those followers of the horses may look for some of the best racing ever seen here. Special Pictures FOR THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

"SATAN'S SMITHY"

"TRAINING BULLS FOR THE FIGHT"

In Spain, where the Bull Fight is the national sport, it is natural that great attention is paid to the rearing of the animals which take part in the sport. This picture shows the Bulls being exercised in many different ways before being ready for the fight. It should be interesting to all Exhibition visitors.

A CHILD OF THE FOREST

This is one of the best pictures of Western Life ever shown on a curtain. It is useless to try to explain it. You must see it to know how good it is. It depicts the gratitude of a squaw for the white man because her dying child was saved from death by a priest. The Indian child when older saves the life of a settler's daughter, returning his mother's gratitude. It is a most beautifully told story and should be seen by all visitors to our Fair.

Mr. Loftus will sing one of the latest songs—"Alice, I Will Still Love Thee."

AIRSHIP DISASTER

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—Yesterday was a day of disaster and disappointment for Tony Nasser, an aviator, who had undertaken to thrill the visitors to the Canada Central Exhibition with scents of his dirigible balloon.

The initial attempt, which took place at noon, was attended by a fatality. A couple of successful ascents took place and then came the culminating misfortune, when the airship blew up while being brought back to the ground.

Live electric wires were responsible for the double misfortune. The airship first became entangled in some wires in front of the grand stand. Edward Keating of Belleville, the owner of a "wheel of fortune"; Malcolm Campbell of Glengarry, and Carl Wingerter, one of Nasser's assistants, caught hold of the framework of the machine to pull it down.

They received about 2,200 volts, and fell to the ground as if dead.

The propeller of the machine had torn the insulation off the wires. Campbell and Wingerter were revived, but Keating was soon pronounced dead.

The subsequent destruction of the airship was due to it coming into contact with an electric wire when being brought through an exhibition park gate. It caught fire and was then allowed to go into the air. Ascending several hundred feet, it exploded, and nothing but some bars of twisted iron descended to earth. The ship was valued at $15,000. It was not insured.

Patrick Still Fighting.

Albany, N.Y., Sept. 17.—Albert T. Patrick, who is serving a life sentence in Sing Sing prison, for the murder of Wm. Marsh Rice, in New York in 1900, has filed with the clerk of the Court of Appeals, notice of an appeal from a decision rendered by the appellate division, dismissing the writ of habeas corpus granted him by Justice Wm. J. Gaynor last February.

Patrick claims he is confined in Sing Sing illegally, and that Governor Higgins had no right to commute his sentence from death to life imprisonment. Sometime ago Patrick endeavored to secure a review of his case by the United States Supreme Court, but the case was dismissed on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction. Patrick's appeal will probably come before the court in October.

Crews Congratulates Sailors.

Battle Harbor, Labrador, Sept. 17.—The following despatch was read yesterday by Capt. Bartlett of the Roosevelt, from Governor Williams of Newfoundland:

"I transmit with pleasure the enclosed message from the Earl of Crewe, Secretary of State for the Colonies:

"I congratulate Capt. Bartlett and his men on their safe return from the arduous enterprise, in which they, as Newfoundlanders, have taken so important a part.

"(Signed) Crewe."

Steamer Burns; Crew Escape.

Kingston, Sept. 17.—The St. Lawrence River Steamboat Co.'s steamer Islander was destroyed by fire at Alexandria Bay shortly after midnight. The vessel burned to the water's edge and then sank. The crew had a narrow escape, Capt. John Bertrand being obliged to jump for his life. The Islander was valued at $20,000.

Canada Should Have Them.

London, Sept. 7.—(C.A.P.)—The Glasgow Herald, while pleased that the business offices of the Allan Line will remain in Glasgow, prophesies that the time is coming when such concerns, railway as well as shipping, will have to be largely directed from the Dominion, which is the base of their operations.

Harriman's Wealth.

New York, Sept. 17.—According to a Wall street publication, "it can be stated on the highest authority," that Mr. Harriman's property amounted to between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000. He is extremely brief, bequeathing all the property to the widow.

Canadian Ministers Returning.

London, Sept. 17.—Sir Frederick Borden sailed yesterday for Canada per the Megantic. Hon. L. P. Brodeur sailed to-day on the Virginian.

CANADA DOING GREATER TRADE MAN FOR MAN THAN THE U.S.

Hon. G. P. Graham's Speech at Brilliant Banquet Given by Canadian Manufacturers' Association at Hamilton— Mackenzie King Answers to Toast of Labour.

Hamilton, Sept. 17.—Hamilton set the standard for banquets in the splendid entertainment given by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association in the Alexandria Rink here last night.

Amid a scene of gaiety and glitter, surrounded by a gallery of ladies, Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, the Lieutenant-Governor, three Dominion Cabinet Ministers, a Provincial Minister, and many members of both Parliaments, with prominent business men from all over Canada, participated in the enjoyment of a well-selected series of speeches based on a brief and excellent toast list. After the royal toast, "O Canada" was sung with great fervor. The music throughout was excellent and the catering from Toronto exceptional.

Lord Strathcona was the notable figure, and was received with extreme cordiality. He remained till midnight and seemed none the worse of his recent long journey to the coast, the leading points of which he touched upon in his brief speech.

"What would become of public life if everyone was as selfish as that," asked Hon. G. P. Graham, in speaking of the reluctance of business men to take part in public affairs.

It was the duty of Canada to have a tariff that would benefit Canadians, he said. As long as they had a tariff and indirect taxation, they would have to provide funds for the carrying on of the business of the country. The Government was not to be stampeded into any action by what any man or country could do. They had found new markets before and could find them again. (Applause.)

JOHN HENDRY,
New President of the C.M.A. ..

The health of Hon. J. M. Gibson, Lieutenant-Governor, was drunk, and in replying he said he occupied a position somewhere between those of the extreme protectionist and the ardent free trader, the exact point being determined by the views of the last man he had discussed the matter with. (Laughter.) He would have preferred to speak as a simple citizen of Canada.

He had once been interested in the production of electric power, which had met with great favor from the public before it had begun to do anything. After the power had been brought to the city from a distance of 35 miles, the men who had been regarded as benefactors were looked upon as scoundrels. (Laughter.) He spoke subject to correction, and more or less figuratively, he explained.

He had also been connected with the street railway, but more officially than financially.

In proposing Lord Strathcona's health Mr. Hobson declared that his lordship's whole lifework had been devoted to the advancement of Canada. He was not only the Grand Old Man of Canada but of the British Empire.

The speaker ran over a long, and spoke in a quiet voice, but looked very well. It was a surprise and an undeserved honor, he said, to be received with so much consideration by men of such distinction as he saw around him. He was proud to accept the invitation from such an association.

The work of the association since its inauguration had been devoted to the development of their great heritage. The visit the association had paid to Britain had been of the greatest value, as comparatively few of the forty millions there realised Canada's opportunities.

It was eighteen years since he had visited Western Canada. Then Vancouver was but a turned patch of ground. To-day it was a great city, with all the accessories of civilization and social life. Victoria and New Westminster in their development would add their share also to the Dominion as a whole. He was struck by the fruit districts of British Columbia and Calgary, which had formerly been known as Whisky Points, was now a great city, while Edmonton had a situation than which none was more beautiful. Saskatoon he also applauded.

Hon. G. P. Graham caused much merriment by declaring that he had some raw material for manufacture to present to the ladies in the gallery, in the person of the Minister of Labor. If they could put him through the matrimonial factory they would do the Government of Canada much service, (Laughter.) He was pleased to meet Col. Gibson, and observed that it was due to the pluck and energy of the citizens of Hamilton that electrical development had reached such an advanced stage.

Man for man, Canada did a much greater trade than the United States. Canada having a trade of $36 a head, while the United States had only $42 a head. The banks showed an increase of bank deposits in ten years of $430,000,000, while the banks had $794,000,000 in circulation, an increase in ten years of $540,000,000.

"When you go to Europe go by the Canadian route, the same as you want us to buy your goods," was an injunction loudly applauded. Mr. Graham had met some of them in London who had traveled via New York and who returned by New York. He was glad to say that the mails by the Canadian route beat the New York route into Toronto. (Applause.)

"The Hudson Bay Railway is going to be built no matter what anybody says," was another of Mr. Graham's statements, and he referred to the progress of the I.C.R.

Hon. W. L. M. King, Minister of Labor, replied to the toast to labor. He acknowledged the compliment paid to labor in including the toast among the few on the list. It was something more than ordinary courtesy, and the workingman of Canada would be the first to recognize its significance. Conditions were changing, since the man of labor had no longer to depend on the rich man's crumbs. By various means, but chiefly by their own efforts, the working classes had attained the world's respect. Labor and capital meet to-day as parties to a contract and each party was respected by the world as it fulfilled the obligations and duties of the contract.

The following officers were elected by the association at the afternoon session: John Hendry, Vancouver, president; W. H. Rowley (Hull), J. P. Murray (Toronto), W. A. Marsh (Quebec), W. H. Barker (Vancouver), T. B. Deason (Winnipeg), J. P. Edwards (Londonderry, N.S.), James Fleming (St. John, N.B.), Hon. F. L. Haszard (Charlottetown), P. Burns, (Calgary), vice-presidents; J. O. Thom, Toronto, Parliamentary; Stanley Pettit, Toronto, commercial intelligence chairman; C. M. Murray, Toronto, reception and membership; J. F. MacKay, Toronto, technical education; R. O. McCulloch, Galt, tariff; J. R. Marlow, Toronto, railway and transportation.

A WOLFE MEMORIAL.

Lord Northcliffe Gives $500 to Start Fund.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 17.—At the Canadian Club luncheon Lord Northcliffe closed a splendid address on affairs of the Empire from a business viewpoint by enthusiastically endorsing an interview given by F. C. Wade, in which he pointed out that for 150 years, Canada had utterly neglected the grave of Gen. Wolfe at Greenwich and endorsed Wade's suggestion that the Canadian Clubs now in conference at Montreal should call on all Canadians Clubs in Canada, and all chapter and daughters of the Empire to join in raising a fund for the erection of a great Canadian monument to Wolfe at St. Alfege Church, Greenwich.

Lord Northcliffe declared that nothing would delight him more than in contributing $500 to the project. Later, he remitted his check for that amount. A number of others have promised large contributions.

Killed on Way to Funeral.

Delhi, Ont., Sept. 17.—Early yesterday morning Jacob Billo, a farmer, living about four miles north of here, was struck by a M.C.R. express going west, and instantly killed.

Billo was on his way to attend a funeral, and was walking on the railway track. The M.C.R. is double-tracked and he stepped off the south track on to the other track to pass a freight train, when the express train struck him. He leaves a family of ten children, his wife having died last spring.

A False Charge.

North Bay, Sept. 17.—The trial of Archibald McColl, ex-chief of police of Haileybury, and formerly of the Toronto police force, on a charge of accepting a bribe from Dominic Dromessi, an Italian confined in Haileybury jail, and then allowing his escape, took place yesterday before Judge Valin. The evidence of Dromessi, the chief crown witness, was badly shattered on cross-examination, and McColl was honorably acquitted.

Courteous Chinaman Fined.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—Yee King, was fined $20 and costs for offering Mrs. Goldie Carter the shelter of his umbrella during a rain storm.

The Chinaman pleaded that he had been taught in the New York missions to be courteous to white women.

"I always consider it a diversion tending to a breach of the peace when any Chinese accosts a white woman," said Judge Beitler.

Young Farmer Disappears.

Belleville, Sept. 17.—Stanley C. McMullen, a young farmer, who lives near Sidney Crossing, is missing. He drove into this city over two days ago and has not been seen since.

Boy Accidentally Shot.

Saskatoon, Sask., Sept. 17.—William Henry, the five-year-old son of Oliver Marriott, was accidentally shot through the heart Wednesday night and died shortly afterwards. The little fellow was playing with his three-year-old brother. The latter was holding a rifle, which was supposed not to be loaded.

Only Served Six Months.

Kingston, Sept. 17.—After serving only six months on a three years' term in the penitentiary, E. Bishop of Ottawa was pardoned and was met at the gate by friends. He was a letter-carrier and tampered with the mail he handled. His previous good character aided in his release.

Fund For Mrs. Scott's Defence.

London, Ont., Sept. 17.—The people of Niagara are taking a great interest in the case of Mrs. Wesley Scott, who is alleged to have murdered her father-in-law, and have started a subscription list to meet her legal expenses.

Two Elopers Caught.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—Local detectives have arrested Frank Farrar and Miss Flossie Gull, a young lady with whom he eloped from London, Eng., three months ago. They have been followed ever since by the girl's mother.

Kills the Bugs Feeds the Plant with Bug Death

NON-POISONOUS

Recommended by

Ontario Agricultural College Guelph, Ontario

They report Bug Death has made an excellent record in each of the past two years. The potatoes on which the Bug Death was applied were more vigorous in growth and greener in appearance throughout each of the seasons than those on which other applications were made.

DO YOU WANT BETTER CROPS?

Of course you do. Well, the way is clear. Use Bug Death and you'll not only have a heavier crop, but larger potatoes of better quality.

Write or call and we'll tell you some more good things of this celebrated Bug Killer and Fertiliser, both in one.

W. G. MORROW, Managing Director

THE Princess Virginia

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON,
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor," "Rosemary in Search of a Father," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

"Yes, for the gossip is that she's an English princess. Now, what's the good of being a powerful emperor if he can't even pick out a wife to please his own taste?"

"I know nothing about such high matters, gna' fraulein, but I fancied that royal folk took wives to please their people rather than themselves. It's their duty to marry, you know. And if the lady be of royal blood, virtuous, of the right religion, not too sharp tempered and pleasant to look at, why, these are the principal things to consider, I should suppose."

"So should I not suppose if I were a man and emperor. I should want the pleasure of falling in love."

"Safer not, gna' fraulein. He might fall in love with the wrong woman." And the chamois hunter looked with half shamed intentness into his guest's sweet eyes.

She blushed under his gaze and was so conscious of the hot color that she retorted at random "I doubt if he could fall in love. A man who would let his chancellor choose for him—he can have no warm blood in his veins."

"There I think you wrong him, lady," the answer came quickly. "The emperor is—a man. But it may be he has found other interests in his life more important than woman."

"Bringing down chamois, for instance. You would sympathise there."

"Chamois give good sport. They're hard to find—harder still to hit when you have found them."

"So are the best types of women—those who, like the chamois and the plant I spoke of, live only in high places. Oh, for the sake of my sex I do hope that some day your emperor will change his mind—that a woman will make him change it!"

"Perhaps a woman has already."

Virginia grew pale. Was she too late, or was this a concealed compliment which the chamois hunter did not guess she had the clew to find? She could not answer. The silence between the two became electrical, and the young man broke it at last with some slight signs of confusion.

"It's a pity," said he, "that our emperor can't hear you. He might be converted to your views."

"Or he might clap me into prison for lese majesty."

"He wouldn't do that, gna' fraulein, if he's anything like me."

"Anything you like; Why, now you put me in mind of it, he's not unlike you—in appearance, I mean, judging by his portraits."

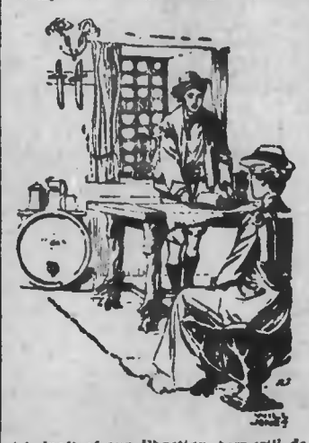
"You have seen his portraits?"

"Yes, I've seen some. I really think you must be a little like him, only browner and taller perhaps. Yet I'm glad that you're a chamois hunter and not an emperor—almost as glad as you can be."

"Will you tell me why, lady?"

"Oh, for one reason, because I couldn't possibly ask him, if he were here in your place, what I'm going to ask of you. You've very kindly laid the bread and ham ready, but you forgot to cut them."

"A thousand pardons. Our talk has set my wits woolgathering. My mind should have been on my manners instead of on such faroff things as emperors and their love affairs."



"A draft of our Rhaetian beer will do you more good than anything."

He began hewing at the big loaf as if it were an enemy to be conquered And there were few in Rhaetia who had ever seen those dark eyes so bright.

"I like ham and bread cut thin, please," said the princess "There: that's better I'll sit here if you'll bring the things to me, for I find that I'm tired, and you are very kind."

"A draft of our Rhaetian beer will do you more good than anything," suggested the hunter, taking up the plate of bread and ham he had tried hard to cut according to her taste, placing it in her lap and going back to draw a tankard of foaming amber liquid from a quaint hogshead in a corner.

But Virginia waved the froth crowned pewter away with a smile and a pretty gesture. "My head has already proved not strong enough for your mountains. I'm sure it isn't strong enough for your beer. Have you some nice cold water?"

The young man laughed and shrugged his shoulders. "Our water here is fit only for the outside of the body," he exclaimed. "To us that's no great deprivation, as we're all true Rhaetians for our beer. But now on your account I'm sorry."

"Perhaps you have some milk?" suggested Virginia. "I love milk. And I could scarcely count the cows, they were so many, as I came up the mountain from Allebelligen."

"It's true there are plenty of cows about," replied her host, "and I could easily catch one. But if I fetch the beast here can you milk it?"

"Dear me, no! Surely you, a great strong man, would never stand by and let a weak girl do that? Oh, I almost wish I hadn't thought of the milk if I'm not to have it. I long for it so much!"

"You shall have the milk, lady," returned the chamois hunter. "I"—

"How good you are!" exclaimed the princess. "It will be more than nice of you. But—I don't want you to think that I'm giving you all this trouble for nothing. Here's something just to show that I appreciate it and to remember me by."

She would not look up, though she longed to see what expression the dark face wore, but kept her eyes upon her hand, from which she slowly withdrew a ring. It fitted tightly, for she had had it made years ago, before her slender fingers had finished growing. When at last she had pulled off the jeweled circlet of gold she held it up temptingly.

"What I have done and anything I may yet do is a pleasure," said the hunter. "But, after all, you have learned little of Rhaetia if you think that we mountain men ever take payment from those to whom we've been able to show hospitality."

"Ah, but I'm not talking of payment," pleaded the princess. "I wish only to be sure that you mayn't forget the first woman who, you tell me, has ever entered this door."

The young man looked at the door, not at the girl. "It is impossible that I should forget," said he, almost stiffly.

"Still, it will hurt me if you refuse my ring," went on Virginia. "Please at least come and see what it's like."

He obeyed, and as she still held up the ring he took it from her that he might examine it more closely.

"The crest of Rhaetia!" he exclaimed as his eyes fell upon a shield of black and green enamel set with small but exceedingly brilliant white diamonds. "How curious! I've been wondering that you should speak our language so well"—

"It's not curious at all really, but very simple," said Virginia. "Now," with a faint tremor in her voice "press the spring on the left side of the shield, and when you've seen what's underneath I think you'll feel that you can't loyally refuse to accept my little offering."

The bronze forefinger found a pin's point protuberance of gold, and, pressing sharply, the shield flew up to reveal a tiny but exquisitely painted miniature of Leopold I. of Rhaetia.

The chamois hunter stared at it and did not speak, but the blood came up to his brown forehead.

"You're surprised?" asked Virginia.

"I am surprised, because I'd been led to suppose that you thought poorly of our emperor."

"Poorly! Now, what could have given you that impression?"

"Why, you made fun of his opinion of women."

"Who am I, pray, to 'make fun' of an emperor's opinion, even in a matter he would consider so unimportant? On the contrary, I confess that I, like most other girls I know, am deeply interested in your great Leopold if only because I—we—would be charitably minded and teach him better. As for the ring, they sell things more or less of this sort in several of the Rhaetian cities I've passed through on my way here. Didn't you know that?"

"No, lady, I have never seen one like it."

"And, as for my knowledge of Rhaetian, I've always been interested in the study of languages. Languages are fascinating to conquer, and then the literature of your country is so splendid one must be able to read it at first hand. Now, you'll have to say 'Yes' to the ring, won't you, and keep it for your emperor's sake, if not for mine?"

"May I not keep it for yours as well?"

"Yes, if you please. And—about the milk?"

The chamois hunter caught up a gaudy jug and without further words went out. When he had gone the princess rose, and, taking the knife he had used to cut the bread and ham, she kissed the handle on the place where his fingers had grasped it. "You're a very silly girl, Virginia, my dear," she said "But, oh, how you do love him! How he is worth loving, and—what a glorious hour you're having!"

For ten minutes she sat alone, perhaps more. Then the door was flung open and her host flung himself in, no longer with the gay air which had sat like a cloak upon him, but hot and sulky, the jug in his hand as empty as when he had gone out.

"I have failed," he said gloomily—"I have failed, though I promised you the milk."

"Couldn't you find a cow?" asked Virginia.

"Oh, yes, I found one, more than one, and caught them too. I even forced them to stand still and grasped them by their udders, but not a drop of milk would come down Abominable brutes! I would gladly have killed them, but that would have given you no milk."

For her life the princess could not help laughing, his air was so desperate. If only those cows could have known who he was and appreciated the honor!

"Pray, pray don't mind," she begged. "You have done more than most men could have done. After all, I'll have a glass of Rhaetian beer with you to drink your health and that of your emperor. I wonder, by the bye, if he, who prides himself on doing all things well, can milk a cow."

"If not, he should learn," said the chamois hunter viciously. "There's no knowing, it seems, when one may need the strangest accomplishments and be humiliated for lack of them."

"No, not humiliated," Virginia assured him. "It's always instructive to find out one's limitations. And you have been most good to me. See, while you were gone I ate the slice of bread and ham you cut, and never did a meal taste better. Now, you must have many things to do which I've made you leave undone. I've trespassed on you too long."

"Indeed, lady, it seems scarcely a moment since you came, and I have no work to do," the chamois hunter insisted.

"But I've a friend waiting for me on the mountain," the princess confessed. "Luckily she had her lunch and will have eaten it, and her guidebook must have kept her happy for awhile, but by this time I'm afraid she's anxious and would be coming in search of me if she dared to stir. I must go. Will you tell me by what name I shall remember my rescuer when I recall this day?"

"They named me for the emperor."

"They were wise. It suits you. Then I shall think of you as Leopold. Leopold what? But, no; don't tell me the other name. It can't be good enough to match the first, for, do you know, I admire the name of Leopold more than any other I've ever heard? So, Leopold, will you shake hands for good-by?"

The strong hand came out eagerly and pressed hers. "Thank you, gna' fraulein, but it's not good-by yet. You must let me help you back by the way you came and down the mountain."

"Will you really? I dared not ask as much for fear, in spite of your kind hospitality, you were, like your noble namesake, a hater of women."

"That's too hard a word even for an emperor, lady, while, as for me, if I ever said to myself 'No woman can be of much good to a man as a real companion' I'm ready to unsay it."

"I'm glad. Then you shall come with me and help me, and you shall help my friend, who is so good and so strongminded that perhaps she may make you think even better of our sex. If you will you shall be our guide down to Allebelligen, where we've been staying at the inn since last night. Besides all that, if you wish to be very good you may carry our cloaks and rucksacks, which seem so heavy to us, but will be nothing for your strong shoulders."

The face of the chamois hunter changed and changed again with such amused appreciation of her demands that Virginia turned her head away lest she should laugh and thus let him guess that she held the key to the inner situation.

His willingness to become a cowherd and now a beast of burden for the foreign lady he had seen and her friend whom he had not seen was indubitably genuine. He was pleased with the adventure, if not as pleased as his initiated companion. For the next few hours the hunter was free, it seemed. He said that he had been out since early dawn and had had good luck. Later he had returned to the hut for a meal and a rest, while his friends went down to the village on business which concerned them all. As they had not come back, they were probably amusing themselves, and when he had given the ladies all the assistance in his power he would join them.

The way down was easy to Virginia, with his hand to help her when it was needed, and she had never been so happy in her twenty years. But, after all, she asked herself as they neared the place where she had left Miss Portman, what had she accomplished? What impression was she leaving? Would this radiant morning of adventure do her good or harm with Leopold when Miss Mowbray should meet him later in some conventional way through letters of introduction to court dignitaries at Kronburg?

"I hope, gna' fraulein," the chamois hunter was saying, almost shyly and as if by an effort, "that you won't go away from our country thinking that we Rhaetians are so cold of heart and blood as you've seemed to fancy. We men of the mountains may be different from others you have seen, but we're not more cold. The torrent of our blood may sleep for a season under ice, but when the spring comes, as it must, and the ice melts, then the torrent gushes forth the more hotly because it has not spent its strength before."

"I shall remember your words," said the princess, "for my journal of Rhaetia. And, now, here's my poor friend. I shall have to make her a thousand excuses."

For her journal of Rhaetia! For a moment the man looked wistful, as if it were a pain to him that he would have no other place in her thoughts nor time to wip it since there sat a lady in a tourist's hat and eyeglasses and the episode was practically closed. He looked, too, as if there was something he would add to his last words if he could, but Miss Portman saw the two advancing figures and shrieked a shrill cry of thanksgiving.

"Oh, I have been so dreadfully anxious!" she groaned. "What has kept you? Have you had an accident? Thank heaven you're here! I began to give up hope of ever seeing you again alive."

"Perhaps you never would if it hadn't been for the help of this good and brave new friend of mine," said Virginia, hurrying into explanations. "I got into dreadful difficulties up there. It was much worse than I thought, but Leopold"—Miss Portman started, stared with her nearsighted eyes at the tall brown man with bare knees, colored, gasped and swallowed hard after a quick glance at her princess—"Leopold happened to be near, came to my help and saved me. Wasn't it providential? Oh, I assure you, Leopold is a monarch—of chamois hunters! Give him your cloak and rucksack to carry with mine, dear Miss Manchester. He's kind enough to say that he'll guide us all the way down to Ailsbelligen, and I'm glad to accept his service."

Miss Portman, a devout royalist and firm believer in the right of kings, grew crimson, her nose especially, as it invariably did at moments of strong emotion.

The emperor of Rhaetia here, caught and trapped, like Pegasus bound to the plow, and forced to carry luggage as if he were a common porter—worst of all, her insignificant, twice wretched engaged!

She would have protested if she had dared, but she did not dare and was obliged to see that imperial form—unmistakably imperial, it seemed to her, though disappearing in humble guise—loaded down with her rucksack and her large golf cape, with galoches in the pocket.

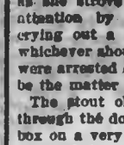
Crushed under the magnitude of her discovery, dazed by the surprising brilliance of the princess' captors, stupefied by the fear of saying or doing the wrong thing and ruining her idol's bizarre triumph, poor Miss Portman staggered as Virginia helped her to her feet.

"Why, you're cramped with sitting so long," cried the princess. "Be careful. But Leopold will give you his arm. Leopold will take you down, won't you, Leopold?"

And the imperial eagle, who had hoped for better things, meekly allowed another link to be added to his chain.

Miss Portman started.

CHAPTER FIVE



"OH, himmel!" exclaimed Frau Yorvan, and "Ach, himmel!" she exclaimed again, her voice rising to a wail, with a frantic uplifting of the hands.

The grand duchess grew pale, for the apple cheeked lady suddenly exhibited these alarming signs of emotion while passing a window of the private dining room. Evidently some scene of horror was being enacted outside, and Virginia and Miss Portman had been away for many hours.

It was the time for tea in England, for coffee in Rhaetia. Frau Yorvan had just brought in coffee for one, with heart shaped sugared cakes which would have appealed more poignantly to the grand duchess' appetite if the absent ones had been with her to share them. Naturally at the good woman's outburst her imagination instantly pictured disaster to the one she loved.

"What, oh, what is it you see?" she implored, her heart leaping, then falling. But for once the courtesy due to an honored guest was forgotten, and the distracted Frau Yorvan fled from the room without giving an answer.

Half paralyzed with dread of what she might have to see, the grand duchess tottered to the window. Was there, —yes, there was a procession coming down the hill? street that led to town from the mountain. Oh, horror upon horror! They were perhaps bringing Virginia down, injured or dead, her beautiful face crushed out of recognition! Yet, no; there was Virginia herself, the central figure in the procession. Thank heaven! It could be nothing worse than an accident, to poor, dear Miss Portman. But there was Miss Portman, too, and a very tall, bronzed peasant man, loaded with cloaks and rucksacks, headed the band, while the girl and her ex-governess followed after.

Unspeakably relieved, yet still puzzled and vaguely alarmed, the grand duchess threw up the window overlooking the little village square. But as she strove to attract the truants' attention by waving her hand and crying out a welcome or a question, whichever should come first, the words were arrested on her lips. What could be the matter with Frau Yorvan?

The stout old landlady popped out through the door like a Jack out of his box on a very stiff spring, flew to the overloaded peasant and, almost rudely elbowing Miss Portman aside, began distractedly bobbing up and down, tearing at the bundle of rucksacks and cloaks. Her inarticulate cries ascended like incense to the grand duchess at the open window, adding much to the lady's intense bewilderment.

"What has that man been doing?" demanded the grand duchess in a loud, firm voice, but nobody answered, for the very good reason that nobody heard. The attention of all those below was entirely taken up with their own concerns.

"Pray, mein frau, let him carry our things indoors," Virginia was insisting, while the tall man stood among the three women, motionless, but apparently a prey to conflicting emotions. If the grand duchess had not been obsessed with a certain idea which was growing in her mind she must have seen that his dark face betrayed a mingling of amusement, impatience, annoyance and boyish mischief. He looked like a man who had somehow stumbled into a false position from which it would be difficult to escape with dignity, yet which he half enjoyed. Torn between a desire to laugh and fly into a rage with the officious landlady, he frowned warningly at Frau Yorvan, smiled at the princess and divided his energies between quick, secret gestures intended for the eyes of the Rhaetian woman and endeavors to unburden himself in his own time and way of the load he carried.

With each instant the perturbation of the grand duchess grew. Why did the man not speak out what he had to say? Why did the landlady first strive to seize the things from his back, then suddenly shrink as if in fear, leaving the tall fellow to his own devices? Ah, but that was a terrible look he gave her at last—the poor, good woman! Perhaps he was a brigand! And the grand duchess remembered tales she had read—tales of fearful deeds, even in these modern days, done in wild mountain fastnesses and remote villages such as Ailsbelligen—not in Rhaetia perhaps, but then there was no reason why they should not happen in Rhaetia at a place like this. And if there were not something evil, something to be dreaded, about this big, dark browed fellow, why had Frau Yorvan uttered that exclamation of frantic dismay at sight of him and rushed like a mad woman out of the house?

It occurred to the grand duchess that the man must be more notorious for

"LITTLE DIGESTERS" SURPRISE PEOPLE

They Make Even Chronic Dyspeptics Forget Their Stomachs

When a man who for years has been unable to eat a square meal without being thoroughly miserable afterward—who has tried doctors and medicines without relief—who is, in fact, a chronic and almost hopeless dyspeptic—wins this state finds that by taking a "Little Digester" regularly he can eat 3 hearty meals a day, and feel good over it, he is nearly as much surprised as delighted.

The number of those who have had this experience with "Little Digesters" is steadily growing. More are hearing of them—trying them—being cured by them—every day.

The makers have such complete confidence in them that they guarantee them to cure any case of Sour Stomach, Heartburn, Flatulence or Dyspepsia—or your get your money back.

"Little Digesters", with this statement guarantee, cost 25c a box at your druggist's, or by mail from the Coleman Medicine Co., Toronto.

ing ruffian? Can't you see he intends to steal your rucksacks or—or blackmail you or something? Is there no manservant about the place whom the landlady can call to help her?"

All four of the actors on the little stage glanced up, aware for the first time of an audience, and had the grand duchess' eyes been younger she might have been still further puzzled by the varying and vivid expressions of their faces. But she saw only that the dark browed peasant man who had glared so haughtily at poor Frau Yorvan was throwing off his burden with haste and roughness.

"I do hope he hasn't already stolen anything of value," cried the grand duchess. "Better not let him go until you've looked into your rucksacks. Remember that silver drinking cup you would take with you"—

She paused, not so much in deference to Virginia's quick reply as in amazement at Frau Yorvan's renewed gesticulations. Was it possible that the woman understood more English than her guests supposed and feared lest the brigand, perhaps equally well instructed, might seek immediate revenge? His bare knees alone were evidence against his character in the eyes of the grand duchess. They gave him a brazen, abandoned air, and a young man who cultivated so long a space between stockings and trousers might be capable of any crime.

"Oh, mother, you're very much mistaken!" Virginia was protesting. "This man is a great friend of mine and has saved my life. You must thank him. If it were not for him I might never have come back to you."

At last the meaning of her words penetrated to the intelligence of the grand duchess through an armor of misapprehension.

"He saved your life?" she echoed. "Oh, then you have been in danger! Heaven be thanked for your safety, and also that the man's not likely to know English or I should never forgive myself for what I've said. Here is my purse, dearest. Catch it as I throw and give it to him just as it is. There is at least £20 in it, and I only wish I could afford more. And what is the matter, my child? You look ready to faint."

As she began to speak she snatched from a desk at which she had been writing a netted silver purse. But while she panted, waiting for Virginia to hold out her hands, the girl forbade the contemplated act of generosity with an imploring gesture.

"He will accept no reward for what he has done except our thanks, and those I give him once again," the girl answered. She then turned to the chamois hunter and made him a present of her hand, over which he bowed with the air of a courtier rather than the rough manner of a peasant. And the grand duchess still hoped that the emperor might be at the window, as really it was a pretty picture and, it seemed to her, presented a pleasing phase of Virginia's character.

She eagerly awaited her daughter's coming, and, having feigned at the window to watch with impatience the rather ceremonious leave taking, she hastened to the door of the improvised sitting room to welcome the mountaineers as they returned to tell their adventures.

"My darling, who do you think was listening and looking from the window next ours?" she breathlessly inquired when she had embraced her newly restored treasure, for the secret of the adjoining room was too good to keep until questions had been put. "Can't you guess? I'm surprised at that since you were so sure last night of a certain person's presence not far away. Why, who but your emperor himself!"

The princess laughed happily and kissed her mother's pink cheek. "Then he must have an astral body," said she, "since one or the other has been with me all day, and it was to him—or his doppelganger—that you offered your purse to make up for accusing him of stealing."

The grand duchess sat down, not so much because she wished to assume a sitting position as because she experienced a sudden uncontrollable weakness of the knees. For a moment she was unable to speak or even to speculate, but one vague thought did trail dimly across her brain: "Heavens, what have I done to him? And maybe some day he will be my son-in-law."

Meanwhile Frau Yorvan—a strangely subdued Frau Yorvan—had dropingly followed the chamois hunter into the inn.

"My dear old friend, you must learn not to lose that well meaning head of yours," said he in the hall.

"Oh, but, your majesty"—

"Now, now, must I remind you again that his majesty is at Kronburg or Peterabruck or some other of his residences when I am at Ailsbelligen? This time I believe he's at the baths of Melina. If you can't remember these things I fear I shall be driven away from here to look for chamois elsewhere than on the Schneehorn."

"Indeed, I will not be so stupid again, your—I mean I will do my very best not to forget. But never before have I been so tried, to see your high-born, imperial shoulders loaded down as it—as if you had been a common sepacktrager for tourists instead of"—

"A chamois hunter. Don't distress yourself, good friend. I've had a day of excellent sport."

"For that I am thankful. But to see your—to see you coming back in such an unsuitable way has given me a weakness of the heart. How can I order myself civilly to those ladies who have"—

"Who have given peasant Leopold some hours of amusement. Be more civil than ever for my sake. And, by the way, can you tell me the names of the ladies? That one of them—a companion, I judge—is a Miss Manchester, I have heard in conversation, but the others"—

"They are mother and daughter, sir. The elder, who in her ignorance cried out such treasonable abominations from the window, as I could tell even with the little English I have picked up, is Lady Mowbray. I have seen the name written down, and I know how to speak it because I have heard it pronounced by the companion, the Miss Manchester. The younger, the beautiful one, is also a miss, and the mother calls her Helene. They talk together in English, also in French, and, though I have so few words of either language, I could tell that London was mentioned between them more than once while I waited on the table. Besides, it is painted in black letters on their traveling boxes."

A Curious Silver Purse

By Marjorie

THESE September days witness a bewilderment of wonderfully attractive novelties, particularly the things of personal adornment shown in Paris shops, all so alluringly displayed that few women withstand the temptation, and in consequence economical intentions are scattered to the winds.

A number of the latest and smartest ornaments have been grouped on this page. Every woman who studies the complex question of dress knows the value of these trivials, accessories which must balance harmoniously with the character of the toilette and mark it, the color scheme an essential often ignored.

When a new color or other dress suggestion is launched immediately we see it copied in wrist bags, purses, umbrellas, belts, girdles, veils, footgear, gloves and jeweled ornaments. This is a great advantage in choosing one of the season's fashionable colors for a gown, coat, suit or hat, because it is an easy matter then to add small things of the same hue. It is often quite impossible to match last year's novelties, even though but a few months have elapsed since its vogue.

DESCRIPTION OF THE SKETCHES.

Coiffure ornaments for evening wear have become more fashionable than ever, in fact a head without a bandeaux or coronet for ceremonious wear is the exception.

The exquisite bandeau shown above is of gold in a very fine filigree pattern closely studded with pearls of varying size. The fastening is made under the circular ornaments at the side.

Smart Parisians, brunettes and women with black hair, are wearing coronets and bandeau of gold and silver with mountings of topaz, some of the stones being quite large and regal looking. Being French jewelry, of course their acquirement is not really expensive. Yellow as a color has been much to the fore for gowns, hats and accessories.

Evidently we have not finished with the black velvet neckband variously ornamented. One of the other sketches displays a charming finish for the neck in the form of narrow velvet with sliding fastener-end fringe of gold designed in pearls. The large centre buckle may be raised or lowered according to one's fancy.

AT LAST—A PRACTICAL VEIL HOLDER.

Every woman will welcome this latest veil holder, a device so simple and practical that it seems incredible that a clever brain did not produce it long ago.

Disposing gracefully of the veil ends is not by any means an easy matter. Oftentimes they are so carelessly treated that an otherwise becoming effect is ruined by this one detail.

The above illustration gives proof of its efficiency. The ends of the veil are slipped through the loops at each end of the pin fastening it securely, giving the neatest kind of a finish. This one is in the form of a coiled snake with an emerald in the centre. A number of attractive designs are shown and no doubt will be duplicated at a more reasonable figure, although this pattern was only $3.50.

These charming girdles with their fascinating metallic ornaments make a most attractive accompaniment for either high waisted frocks or those reaching the normal waistline.

The newest vagary in girdles is depicted in the group above. The gold clasp buckle holds the softly draped girdle in place. Note the long and pointed tassels of gold, and the curious shape of the ornament just above.

Several other girdles are shown, one being an entirely different arrangement of the usual ornaments. A plain colored ribbon, black velvet or a brocaded pattern could be thus employed.

Another girdle ornament is pointed and has three sides of silver with jade mountings and very long, straight hanging fringe, the ends are irregular in length.

The fourth is an attractive design with ornaments in gold lapis mountings.

FASCINATING FANCIES IN HAT PINS.

Hat pins in the form of butterflies, flowers and leaves are quite the newest craze along this line.

A great deal of this work appears in silver and gold in very fine filigree work with a discreet showing of mock gems. Herewith is shown one in the shape of a five-petaled flower with turquoise in the centre. Mountings are sometimes added to leaves and flowers, suggesting dewdrops realistically. Most charming are the hat pins showing a spray of ivy, these in brilliant enamel with a queer little bug poised on the leaf. One large leaf or several smaller ones appear as pins.

A butterfly hat-pin is shown of enamel with fine studdings of French brilliants, blue, green and yellow also appear in enamel. Butterflies in gold filigree with studdings of rari-colored stones are very effective, especially on a black hat. The butterflies are poised upon a tiny gold spiral, the slightest movement of the wearer causing these to tremble.

A set of coral hat pins in a very unusual shape is shown and also an umbrella handle in bright blue enamel. Some handles are oddly streaked with another color. Still others are wonderfully designed with flowers, the stately iris being a favorite.

GRAND RALLY

BOYS

THE

EXAMINER

WE WONDER if it ever occurred to the boys of Peterborough that the selling of papers was a stepping-stone to a successful business career in future years.

DO they recognize the fact that this little business offers them an opportunity to

MAKE

100 Per Cent ?

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

BOYS buy the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each ; or in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive ten cents from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 62 2-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts ?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say that the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

MONEY IN NEWSPAPER ROUTES.

Another boy was only thirteen when his father died, leaving two hundred dollars insurance, a widow and four younger children. The insurance money was loaned out to a neighbour at six per cent., as a sort of reserve fund, and while the widow did plain sewing, the boy carried newspapers morning and evening. After three months' experience with this work he borrowed twenty-five dollars and purchased the smallest newspaper route in town. Vigorous canvassing for new customers made that route so productive that in six months he paid back the loan. The lender offered another loan of fifty dollars, which the boy took, buying two more routes. These were covered by boys hired to do the work, however, because he felt that all his energy must go into the original route, so that he would at least be certain of good returns from that. Principles of management learned by this plan made him so successful that in less than five years he owned every newspaper route in his town. His mother's two hundred dollars was still intact, and his brothers and sisters going to school. A legacy of two hundred dollars fell to the family. This, with the original two hundred dollars and another hundred the boy had saved, was paid on a home costing twenty-eight hundred dollars, the balance to be cleared off at the rate of twenty-five dollars a month. Three furnished rooms were rented at a total of about twenty-two dollars monthly, and this money, it was agreed, should never be spent. Newspaper routes, odd jobs and the mother's contributions kept the family and paid the instalments. In four years the income from furnished rooms, put away in the bank, grew to more than one thousand dollars. The mortgage was finally cleared off, and the boy, now nearly twenty-one years old, started to get an education at the high school.

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily all selling the Examiner, but some easily make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Boys! Be Boys of Business

Get in the game. It won't hurt you, but will give you a right start. You will have money of your own to save or buy useful needs with.

BOYS ! Take your spare time between four and six o'clock and see what success you will have between now and Christmas.

NEWSBOYS' BONANZA

Boys, figure this proposition out for yourselves. Be ambitious. Good newsboys are always taken care of and recommended for future positions.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Work is to be begun in January on a railroad connecting Mexico and the Panama Canal.

Ald. Emery Lariviere of Montreal has entered an action for $25,000 against Mr. McLea Walbank for slander.

Police have gone to the White Dog Indian camp at Swan Lake, 30 miles north of Kenora, to arrest an Indian who, it is alleged, wantonly shot and killed a young girl.

The Trades and Labor Council of Vancouver has passed resolutions asking the Dominion Government to turn a deaf ear to the request of the G.T.P. to be allowed to bring in Chinese labor.

Owing to the absence of a good many delegates no definite steps were taken at the convention of Canadian Clubs of Canada in Montreal yesterday afternoon for the formation of a federation of the clubs throughout the Dominion.

While acetylene beacons were being refilled off Port San Juan, a quadruple explosion occurred. Mate Jas. Moor, Seaman W. Cavin and George Alexandre of Tender Joliffe, receiving so serious injuries that the steamer was ordered back to Victoria, B.C., under forced speed and the trio sent to hospital.

Hid Horse For a Joke.

Chatham, Sept. 17.—Ross Heatherington and Earl Dawson, two young farmers of Romney, pleaded guilty to a charge of horse-stealing in the County Police Court before Judge Houston yesterday morning.

The young men took a horse and rig belonging to Edward H. Suskey while the latter was attending a harvest home social in Zion Church, and hid it in a neighboring barn yard, intending it to be a practical joke. By thus doing they were leaving themselves liable to a term of fourteen years in Kingston.

They were allowed to go on suspended sentence, after paying the costs of the court, $25.05.

May Have Robbed Bank.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—Dan McLaughlin and a Pinkerton detective are on their way to Quebec in connection with the arrest in that city of a man who gives every promise of being one of the men concerned in the Provincial Bank robbery of a few days ago at the Yamachiche branch.

The man had been exchanging Provincial Bank bills, and when arrested was found to have several hundred in his possession.

A package sent by express to Portland, Me., by the prisoner, will be held up. It is believed to contain money.

Cigarette Will Cost Boy $25,000.

New York, Sept. 17.—If Grevel Wilfred Edward Acker, of Atlantic Highland, N.J., smokes a cigarette within the next twenty-two years he forfeits his rights as residuary legatee to an estate now valued at $25,000, and left to him by his grandfather, Wilhelm Henry Maxmillian Grevel, who died at No. 95 East 10th street on Aug. 17. Counsel for the executors filed the will for probate Wednesday, and the grandson, who is now three years old, will receive only $250 if he violates its terms, which apply to him before he is twenty-five years old.

Electric Railway Scheme.

Barrie, Sept. 17.—There is a possibility of Barrie having a street railway in the near future. John W. Moyes of Toronto has roughly outlined a proposition which he may later put in definite form before the council.

He proposes to build an electric railway connecting the C.P.R. and C.N.R. at Atherley with the C.P.R. at the 13th con. of Essa. As far as Barrie is concerned, the right of way on certain streets and financial backing to some extent will shortly be asked.

Women In Terrible Duel.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—Behind the closed doors of a fashionable South Side apartment house two women fought a duel. One fell dead with eleven bullet wounds in her body. The other, her sister-in-law, sustained mortal injuries.

Mrs. Julius Tripp, wife of an officer of the firm of Morris, Mann & Reilly, is the dead woman. Mrs. Jacob Silvers, the sister-in-law, is at the Washington Park Sanitarium.

Tug Is Confiscated.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 17.—The fishing tug Ogle, owned by the Keystone Fish Co. of this city, which was captured in Canadian waters on Wednesday will be sold at Port Dover, Ont., to the highest bidder. The captain and crew have been released and will return to this city to-day or to-morrow. The boat was across the line, and consequently can lawfully be confiscated by the Dominion Government.

Sues For False Arrest.

Montreal, Sept. 17.—George J. Ellis has entered an action for $5,399.50, damages for false arrest, against the Atlantic, Quebec and Western Railway. He was employed by the company at New Carlisle, Que., and when a robbery took place and $1,200 disappeared, he was charged with the robbery. After being kept in jail for a year, Ellis was honorably acquitted.

Another Labor Split.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 17.—The Detroit Federation of Labor practically withdrew from the American Federation of Labor by voting unanimously not to comply with the recent orders of the executive council to unseat the Electrical Workers' Union. The matter will be appealed to the American Federation convention at Toronto in November.

Didn't Pay Wife's Funeral.

Windsor, Sept. 17.—Wm. Cawrse, who was married a second time two months ago, was put in jail Thursday for his refusal to pay the expenses of his first wife's funeral as ordered by the court.

Underwriters Secretary Leaves.

Winnipeg, Sept. 17.—W. H. Burch, secretary of the Manitoba and Northwest Underwriters Association for some years, has resigned to assume the superintendency of the Phoenix Insurance Co.

More Harvesters Needed.

Winnipeg, Sept. 17—In consequence of the continued demand for men for farm work in the West, it has been decided by the C.P.R. authorities to operate another excursion from all points in the eastern provinces of Canada. Special trains of this excursion will probably leave the east at the beginning of next week.

It is the hope of the C.P.R. officials that 3,000 additional men can be obtained and brought to the country in time to assist in harvesting operations, especially in the Province of Saskatchewan.

Many telegrams were received at the local offices of the passenger department of the company Wednesday and yesterday, asking for men for pressing needs, farmers stating that they were unable to save their crops owing to the need of farm laborers.

Judging by the way in which the crowds were pouring into the Exhibition grounds this afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition of 1909 will surpass all previous records in the matter of attendance. The rush commenced at 12.30 and since that time the wickets have literally been besieged. The attendance this afternoon will in itself be a record breaker. Every south bound street car is loaded to the guards and the Radial Railway Company has every available bit of rolling stock in commission too. Everything was called into use except the snow plough and the sweeper.

The crowds started to gather in the city early, the trains this morning bringing people from all directions, some of them coming many miles to see the fair. The excursion from Picton which arrived shortly after eleven brought a tremendous crowd, three-quarters of which visited the fair grounds this afternoon.

The predictions that the Examiner has been making recently in connection with the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition are being aboundantly fulfilled. This year's Fair is the most successful on record in every branch. Never before was there a larger number or a better lot of exhibits than are being shown at Exhibition Park just now. The accommodation there which has usually been found ample has been taxed to its utmost and in some cases its utmost is not enough. A finer lot of horses were never shown here and there is simply not room for all the exhibits in this line. Fully seventy-five entries could not be provided with stable accommodation, a condition that never existed before.

The showing in poultry is also better than ever, some 500 birds being shown. The large tent provided for the storing of the poultry is hardly big enough and the ducks and geese have been stored in the old quarters just north of the tent. The swine exhibit is away ahead of last year and the showing of roots and grains in the main building is twice as good as was made last year.

In every way is the fair superior. Manufacturers and merchants never took so much interest in the Exhibition or exerted themselves so much to make attractive exhibits. The result is that visitors this afternoon will find a profitable and interesting array of exhibits in which local and outside firms are prominently advertised. The main building is certainly worth more than a brief visit. Every corner of it is crammed full of interesting features that will prove entertaining and instructive. Downstairs nearly every part is taken up with the displays of manufacturers and merchants while the remaining floor space is devoted to the roots and grains. Upstairs is a splendid showing of ladies' work, the south side of the hall being given over to the horticultural department.

Over on the Midway, when an Examiner reporter visited it this morning he found many attractions that will this afternoon exchange "fun and amusement," as the barkers say for coin of the realm. The attractions include English Gypsies, the Ocean Wave, Box Ball Game, Cane Rack, Baseball game and many other similar amusement features. "We are simply swamped," said President Leary to the Examiner. "We never had so many entries in some lines and we simply haven't got the accommodation for them. There are seventy-five horses up street that we could not provide with stable room. Isn't this glorious weather?" he remarked as he hustled off to superintend the work of some of his assistants.

It was impossible to get anywhere near Secretary Hall this morning. In self defense he had a barricade erected in front of his tent and in front of that again every time the reporter tried to get in was a mass of exhibitors. The judges are at work this morning and that added to the duties of the secretary and his assistants. However in spite of the fact that they are up to their ears in work the directors are deliriously happy at the weather and everything else.

There promises to be a record crowd weather conditions are perfect and a better programme was never offered. The grounds will be brilliantly illuminated for the occasion and the main building will be kept open so that people who were unable to attend this afternoon will be able to see everything by going this evening.

Lift Lock Lye.

One of the most attractive exhibits at the fair is that devoted to a demonstration of "Lift-Lock Lye," the new cleaning production manufactured in Peterborough, and which is attracting much attention on account of the widespread advertising campaign, which is being conducted on behalf of it. A splendid showing is made of "Lift Lock envelopes, and Lift Lock Lye, and the exhibit has been viewed with interest by hundreds of visitors. Everywhere handsome signs meet your eye, telling you that "Lift Lock Lye Lessens Labour." and those who have used the preparation say that there is more truth than poetry in the statement. In connection with the lye the manufacturers are conducting an advertising campaign, in which envelopes play a prominent part, and of which 50,000 were sold in the first month.

EXHIBITION NOTICES.

One of the most encouraging features of the Peterborough Industrial this year is the increase in the number of prominent exhibits of a special character throughout the grounds, and in the main building. City merchants and manufacturers took a lively interest in displaying their wares in an attractive manner. And it is satisfactory to note that, while these varied individual displays increased, the interest to visitors, they also proved advantageous to the exhibitors themselves by the special attention given their goods.

The G. W. Green Co.'s Exhibit of Improved Mill Machinery.

With commendable enterprise, the G. Walter Green Company, Limited, of McDonel street, west, have erected on the grounds the whole of their mill machinery exhibit, which was shown at the Toronto Fair. It required the services of a large number of the firm's expert machinists and labourers, all day Thursday and Friday forenoon, in setting up the machinery, under the direction of Mr. Maud, the Company's experienced superintendent.

This exhibit was admittedly the most effective on the Fair Grounds, as well as the most attractive, to a large class of exhibitors—no expense being spared to demonstrate the practical utility of the machinery.

The machines worthy of special mention were: The "O. B." sawmill, fitted with improved cable feed works. This machine, which is well suited for threshers, contractors and others, having limited power, will cut from 4,000 to 10,000 feet of lumber per day. The advantage that the "O. B." portable saw mill has over all others is that it is economical, saving labour, money and danger. This saw mill was in operation all day, being driven by a gasoline engine. There was also shown a two-saw edger, which was also in running operation; a combined shingle machine, box-board and beading machine; a shingle jointer; a shingle packer; a combined lath mill and bolter, and several other devices for sawmill work. The various types of mill machinery manufactured by this firm can be taken into the woods and moved from place to place as easily as a threshing mill. The lath mill and bolter attachment introduced by this enterprising firm enables the operator to cut round stuff as well as slabs, it being the only lath mill on the market, said to possess this modern attachment. A number of Green's lift and force pumps were also shown and a display of shafting, pulleys, saws, etc.

Awards For Best Lawns Announced

Judges Find That Horticultural Society is Doing Excellent Work in Educating the People to Beautify Their Premises.

THE PRIZE WINNERS

The judges appointed by the Horticultural Society to judge the lawns entered in their annual competition have made their awards and the list of prize winners shows who are considered the possessors of the most beautiful lawns in the city in their respective classes. The judges had more work to do this year and it was likewise more difficult. The example set by those citizens who have been awarded the palm in past years, has had good effect and many others are trying to emulate them and, indeed, have surpassed their work in some cases. There are others who keep their lawns and boulevards in excellent condition, but did not enter the list and generally speaking there is an improvement throughout the entire city, and it is believed that in a few years the Horticultural Society will have a big list of entries. They are doing a good work in this respect and deserve the support of those citizens who are sufficiently interested in their home to adorn it with as pretty lawns and flower pots as their neighbours, or even to keep them in better condition.

There are two classes in the contests, the professional class, in which men are paid to care for the property, the other is the amateur class, in which the owner of the grounds looks after it himself, and by his own efforts secures beautiful surroundings.

Prize Winners.

Professional Class—

1.—Mr. James, on Mrs. A. L. Davis' grounds.

2.—Mr. Vickers, on Hon. J. B. Stratton's grounds.

3.—Miss Dickson, corner Murray and Dickson street.

4.—Mr. John Wood, corner Hunter and Belmont streets

Amateur Class—

1.—Miss Davidson, Park street, Ashburnham.

2.—Mr. Isaac Richardson, Homewood Avenue.

3.—Mr. S. McKee, Water street north.

4.—Jas. Stevenson, Simcoe street.

Flowers.

1.—B. Cooney, Stewart street.

2.—Mrs. W. Kennedy, Aylmer St.

3.—Mr. W. Taylor, C.P.R. grounds.

4.—Mr. Wm. Logan, corner Aylmer and Brock streets.

Special Mention.

Peterborough Lawn Bowling Green.

Mrs. John Thorndike's property.

Special attention is drawn to Miss Davidson's property, the winner in the amateur class. She has fruit and flowers and a lawn which is indeed beautiful and does credit to the city as well as to Miss Davidson, who looks after it herself.

Lifebuoy Soap is delightfully refreshing for Bath or Toilet in hot weather. For washing underclothing it is unequalled. Cleanses and purifies.

HAS TO STAY IN JAIL

Bobby Burns, Drunk and Disorderly, Must go up on the Hill Till After the Fair.

Bobby Burns must stay in gaol until after Peterborough's big industrial exhibition is over. That is what Magistrate Dumble told him this morning in the police court. He pleaded guilty to having been drunk and disorderly. Burns came here from Ottawa, and is a stranger to Peterborough. Chief Roszel thought it would be best to keep him in gaol until after the fair and His Worship carried out the Chief's suggestion.

AFTER 25 YEARS

Mr. Joseph B. Boyd, Formerly of Douro, is in the City To-day.

Joseph B. Boyd, of Langdon, N.D., a former resident of the township of Douro, who left here twenty-five (25) years ago, was registered at the Oriental Hotel yesterday, and is also the guest of Mr. Martin McManus, Albert St. He is at present on his way to New York. He will stop off at Peterborough and visit his old friends and home in the Township of Douro. It is just a couple of months ago since Mr. Boyd had the misfortune of losing his residence in a cyclone, in which his wife was killed. He is a prosperous general merchant in Langdon and for two terms was member of the Senate.

FRED AND HARRY JOPLING ARE OUT ON BAIL OF $4000 EACH

Amout Was Fixed by Magistrate Edmison Last Night—When Application Was Made to Him by Mr. D. O'Connell, Solicitor for the Joplings.

Fred and Harry Jopling arrested yesterday by High Constable Cochrane on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Arthur Bollard are out on bail of $4,000. As soon as they were placed under arrest their counsel, Mr. D. O'Connell made application to Magistrate Edmison for bail and the application was considered at the Magistrate's office at nine o'clock last night.

Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, acting under whose instructions High Constable Cochrane laid the information, expressed himself as being favourable to bail being granted and Magistrate Edmison therefore fixed bail at $4,000 in each case.

There are two sureties of $2,000 in each instance and the bailsmen are H. LeBrun and G. T. Jopling.

The preliminary hearing will take place before Magistrate Edmison in the County Police Court on Friday morning, September 24, at ten o'clock. Bail was only granted until that time and the two young men must appear then, being given their liberty in the meantime. The arrests have caused a sensation, especially in Bridgenorth.

The Stock Of The F. N. Burt Co. Being Rapidly Subscribed

Of Interest To Peterborough Investors.

Special to The Examiner.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 17.—Messrs. A. E. Ames & Co., Limited, announce that subscriptions for the seven per cent. convertible preference shares of the F. N. Burt Company, Limited, are coming in most satisfactorily. It is pointed out that while in deference to the holiday season not being over, the offering was designed to give a full eight days from first publication before closing the subscription books, viz. until next Tuesday afternoon at four o'clock, the right of closing at any prior time is reserved, and it is not unlikely it may be exercised. It is intended on the one hand to give investors sufficient time to make up their minds. On the other hand, while a long share list is desirable, it is hoped to guard against a severe cutting down in allotment. It would appear well, therefore, for those intending to subscribe to lodge their subscriptions without delay.

Working 24 Hours A Day In The West With Few Stops

Mr. H. C. Pierce, of Wadena, Sask., is trying an experiment which is unique in farming operations. With 22 horse power Hart Parr kerosene engine Mr. Pierce is engaged in cutting his grain and plowing his land. The engine is hauling an eight-foot Massey-Harris binder and a 14-inch 6-furrow steam plow. The sheaves are dumped upon the plowed ground. The outfit is running night and day in charge of two crews of three men in each. The meals are brought to the men, who eat on the tender, engine and binder while moving, and the outfit never stops except to take on more fuel and to fill the hard oil cups. The corners of the field have been rounded off with teams, and the plows are continually in the ground. The outfit is averaging 35 acres every 24 hours. The binder is doing good work and no litter is being left on the plowing. Mr. Pierce stated that the cutting and plowing was being done at a cost of less than one dollar per acre. He will harrow and pack immediately after threshing, and any volunteer crop will sprout this fall. Thus the benefit of the early plowing will insure better results next year, and be a source of additional profit.—Norwood Register .

SCAFFOLD FALLS 38 FEET INJURING NINE MEN

Serious Accident at Barn Raising Near Cold Springs in Northumberland County---Twelve Farmers Working on Scaffold When it Broke---Three Saved Themselves ---One of the Nine Has Concussion of the Brain---Others Had Bones Broken.

Examiner Special.

Where—At barn raising on Matthew Linton's farm, near Coldspring, in Hamilton Township.

When—Thursday afternoon, five o'clock.

Cause—Scaffold Broke; Nine Men Dropped 38 feet to the floor.

Injuries—All are more or less injured from only severe bruises to concussion of the brain in one case that may be fatal.

All are believed to be prominent farmers.

At a barn raising on the homestead of Matthew Linton, of the 7th line of Hamilton Township, Northumberland County, a scaffold fell 38 feet, carrying with it nine men who were helping in the "bee," nearly all of whom met with serious injuries.

The accident occurred in the afternoon, about five o'clock, after a hard day's work. Nearly one hundred men had gathered from the neighbouring farms to help their neighbour, Mr. Linton, and the labour was nearly over. Then men were scattered all through the structure, up on rafters and beams, on the floor, and among the number were twelve on the inside of the building, putting up what are known as the "purline" plates.

Support Broke.

They, like the rest were deeply engrossed in their work and were separated along the scaffold, which had been made by stretching two long poles, thre or four feet apart, between two beams. Across the poles short planks were laid, thus completing their frail walk in the air. Without any warning except a rather prolonged creak, one of the two poles snapped in the middle and fell with the planking and nine of the men. The other three caught at projections on the inside of the barn and hung to them. Their comrades crashed down to the floor with the boards that had formed their scaffold. They fell in an almost every possible manner, some saving the misfortune to fall head first.

Those Injured:

The list obtained from a gentleman who resides in the neighbourhood is as follows:

CHARLES GIBB, alighted on his head, sustaining concussion of the brain. His chest was bruised and in a bad way. All last night he remained unconscious, except for several intervals, when he seemed to revive. His condition is considered very serious.

RICHARD NELSON, a general shaking up and bruising. No bones broken.

HAMPTON MINIFIE badly injured. Had five ribs broken and may have other internal injuries. He had many bruises about the body.

ASA MINIFIE, general bruises. Not as bad as the others.

ARCHIE BOWMAN, severely shaken up and bruised.

WM. AUSTIN, elbow and knee may be dislocated; wrist and two fingers broken.

HARRY BRISBIN,
JOHN GRIEVE,
JAS. THOMPSON, several ribs believed to be broken.

Such are the injuries reported to have been sustained and looking at the distance the men were precipitated it is almost miraculous that some one was not killed.

Doctors Called.

The fall was heard throughout the yard, and all the other men on the building were aware of it on the instant, some of them even having seen the men hurled through the air. The injured were picked up and carried out on to the ground. Doctors Irwin and Field, of Cobourg, were called and hurried to the farm and relieved the men as much as possible. Jibb was most seriously injured, and to-day shows but little improvement. The accident has cast a gloom over the country side and as many families were affected. The excitement last night reached anxiety in some homes until it was learned that none of their "men folks" were injured. The accident, as stated, was due to the breaking of one of the two poles, which formed the skeleton for the scaffold.

Gymnasium In South End Will Be Thoroughly Equipped

The P. A. C. rooms will be opened for the winter session Friday, October 1st. The club bids fair to fill a long-felt want in the south end of the city. The popular pastor of Park St. Baptist Church, Rev. W. C. Riddiford, has been busy of late, getting some apparatus for gymnasium purposes, which, when fitted up, will add very much to the use of the rooms, as a quiet, and a proper place of recreation. There is plenty of room for basketball, and the club intend to give the local Y. M. C. A. artists, all that's coming to them in that direction. All men will be made welcome at the rooms, and the physical work wil lbe under the direction of good and competent men.

At a meeting held last night the following officers were elected:

Hon. Pres.—Rev. W. C. Riddiford.
President—Mr. Jack Pilling.
Vice-President—Mr. Charlie Green.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. Herb. Reid.

It was decided that the following low rates for membership would be charged, which it is hoped will cover the running expenses of the dub:

Senior membership, $2.25 per year.
Junior membership, $1.25 per year.

Full information regarding the Club can be obtained from Mr. Herb. Reid, 143 Pery street.

It is the intention of the committee of arrangements for the opening to try and get a good programme of sports, music, etc., which will appear later.

Quaker Oats Company Installs Improved Fire Protection System

The Quaker Oats Company have just completed an improvement to their fire fighting equipment which will enable them to handle any kind of a fire on their own premises with their own apparatus. To accomplish this feat the company has gone to great expense. A sprinkler system was installed some time ago and it was operated from their own pump house which lifted the water from the river, a distance of 20 feet, to the pumps. Now, however, this has been done away with. A 10 inch main has been laid from a point up the river down to their pumps with a drop of 14 feet. This gives a direct pressure of seven pounds before the pumps are started at all. Then when the pumps are in operation a water pressure of 135 pounds is maintained while the hydrants are in use.

Yesterday afternoon the new water main was tested and Chief Howard and Engineer Rankin were invited to be present. When the pumps were turned on a stream of water was thrown over the top of the grain elevator, a height of 176 feet. This is a most creditable feat and it will put the Quaker Oats Co. in a most desirable position in case of fire. While the stream was being thrown the water gauge showed 120 pounds pressure, while the steam gauge showed only 40 pounds pressure.

The test was most perfectly satisfactory in every way.

New Steel Bridge Over Indian River Was Tested Yesterday

Mr. John E. Belcher, C.E., County Engineer, accompanied by Mr. J. Fife, chairman of the Bridge Committee of the County Council visited the new steel bridge and abutments completed yesterday in the Township of Otonabee over the Indian River. They carefully inspected and tested the structure, having had driven over it an eight-ton Traction Engine accompanied by a three-ton Threshing Machine without its having shown the slightest deflection. The span is 60 feet. The super-structure was erected by the Hamilton Bridge Co., the abutments of concrete by Mr. John Dingdale & Son, mason contractor all from the design of Mr. Belcher.

WHY IS IT THUS?

At the Harvest Festival service in St. John's Church last night in the large congregation present there were, all told, only a dozen or so men, the others being women and girls. Why is this condition a feature of nearly all church services, especially those held during the week? Is it because women are naturally more devout than men, more grateful for Divine favours, and endowed with more decided moral aspirations? The cynic will say that it is because women are in greater need of the regenerative influence of church services, but we all know better than that. Does it serve to show that men are so engrossed in the pursuits of business, in the chase after material wealth; that their time is so fully occupied with the work of providing for the maintenance of their wives and daughters, that they have no time for religious duties, leaving them to the "women folk" and thus aiming to earn a title to Heaven by proxy? We are fond, some of us, of making much of woman's devotion to the frivolities of society, bridge, tea-drinkings and gossip, but this is to be noted that if church work is to be done, church services to be attended, works of mercy to be wrought, women are to be conuted upon. Their social "frivolity," their love of dress is only a thin veneer over hearts filled with a spirit of devotion, and swelling with aspirations to the good and true; their fine raiment and abominable hats are only outside show, visible veilings of an inward and spiritual grace, covering a great deal of good as the brilliant beauty of the flower is the condition and precursor of the ripened seed. Is there danger of man becoming too material—of forgetting the higher things?

GUELPH.

The Examiner has received an invitation from the joint committee of the Guelph City Council and Board of Trade to attend the "formal opening of the Royal City's new waterworks system" on Sept. 23rd. Guelph is very proud of its waterworks system, and its other municipally-owned services. In a circular accompanying the invitation, is given the following information:

City of Guelph, Ontario, population, 14,060:

The Royal City leads in successful municipal ownership.

The City owns and manages—

Water works system—cost to ordinary householder per year, $8.96.

Artificial gas plant—supplies gas $1.00 per 1,000 feet.

Electric light plant—connection being made with Hydro-Electric power lines.

Street Railway system—3c fares, and owns 15¼ miles of steam railway, from which a dividend of 13% is received from the city from the lesses.

Value of Guelph's utilities exceeds liabilities by $1,258,404. The general tax rate of the city is 14¾ mills and further reductions are confidently anticipated owing to increasing returns from utilities.

This seems a fine showing. But, take the waterworks, upon which the Guelph people are putting particular emphasis. The above states that the annual waterworks cost to the ordinary householder is $8.96. We don't know what basis this is reckoned upon, but the Peterborough waterworks system furnishes water to a seven-room house, fully equipped—baths, water closet and basin, including 1,000 foot lawn, for $8 per year net, nearly a dollar less than the rate paid by Guelph householders, for the same service, assuming that the calculations have been made on the same basis. Is Guelph's boasted success of her municipal ownership deserved? In both Peterborough and Guelph, the water works system is managed by a commission, and we in Peterborough do not regard our water works commission as in the same class as municipal management. Our ownership of the waterworks system is satisfactory, because it is not municipally managed. Owing to circumstances and conditions it is demonstrated that municipal management, changing yearly, in personnel and subject to popular influences, cannot give the satisfactory management furnished by an independent commission, in which business principles and not the expediency of local politics are the determining factor. However, Guelph is to be congratulated upon the apparent thrift of its general civic interests.

YIELDING THE PALM GRACEFULLY

(Finance Chronicle.)

No one could more frankly render honour where he deems it due than does Jesse Macy in his article in McClure's on "The Efficiency of English Courts." His own remarks are prefaced by an extract from The Tribune, of Chicago, which points out that England and Wales, with a population of nearly thirty-five millions are well served by ninety-two judges, while the State of Illinois, with some five million people, has more than two hundred and forty—excluding Federal judges and the justices of the peace.

Mr. Macy points out that American and English judicial procedure have a common origin. Present practical differences aredue largely to the circumstance that since pre-revolutionary times many details have changed but little in the United States, while British judicial processes have been radically reformed within the past century or so. Strange as it may appear, discretionary rulings of the court have been much more generally substituted in the old land for mediaeval technical rules which shielded the judge from responsibility. Undoubtedly, evasion of justice by means of technicalities is a prevalent source of lawlessness in America.

Mr. Macy tells his American readers that they need look no farther than Canada for the practical benefits of British legal methods. While spending some weeks at Seattle a few years ago, he was impressed by the reiterated statement that the police force and courts of the city "were burdened with the care of criminals properly belonging to Victoria." The reason for this is said to be that criminals were afraid to remain in the Canadian city and within the reach of British law.

In passing it may be said that ex-President Eliot, of Harvard, writes in the September McClure's upon "The Best way to Prevent Industrial Warfare"—and his prescription calls for a general application of the Canadian Industrial Disputes Investigation Act.

FARMERS AND THE WHEAT MARKET

Prof. John Lee Coulter, of the University of Minnesota, is of the opinion that the farmer can, if he will, control the wheat market. He contends that if the wheat growers exercised the power they possess, they would soon put the wheat speculators out of business.

In an article in the Canadian Threasherman Prof. Coulter tells how, in his opinion, this could be done. By holding wheat in reserve, he says, the farmers would themselves hold the same power over the market which Armour had over Leiter in 1898. As a first step the professor recommends that the cost of producing wheat under all conditions be ascertained in careful detail, as only by that means can a minimum price be placed on the grain. He believes the uncertain forces which make wheat growing more or less hasardous can be as carefully studied as scientists now study any detail of agriculture. This could be followed by the working out of an insurance system which, applied in a businesslike way, would take away much of the suffering now found to result from erratic climatic conditions and other uncertainties, and at the same time remove much worry.

Having learned the cost of production, when to sell and when not to sell, always avoiding sacrifice sales, the professor says farmers should individually and collectively bend their best energies during the next few years to getting enough of their own storage facilities on the farm at local stations and at terminals to care for foreign and domestic demand, and thus visibly affect market conditions. Farmers, however, should not stop here; they should see that their grain is intelligently handled, carefully studying the present market system. What is needed is more information concerning conditions of crops and supplies of grain, as well as regarding people's wants and demands. Farmers should report regularly the actual conditions, and either establish in connection with their business organization a crop reporting system, or work in connection with the Government system. They should also study the best methods for growing crops on farms, for storing surplus crops, for farm stock and for home buildings and elevators. Then, if the consumers, the millers and exporters are not ready for the grain and the farmers need the money they would find no difficulty in borrowing on the grain for security. "If," concludes Prof. Coulter, "the farmers had had four or five million bushels of grain stored ready to sell, Mr. Patten would not have dared attempt the manipulation during the last six months. Farmers could spoil any attempted corner, as did Mr. Armour, in the case of Mr. Leiter in 1898."

Why We Are Stronger.

The old Greeks and Romans were great admirers of health and strength; their pictures and statuary made the muscles of the men stand out like cords.

As a matter of fact we have athletes and strong men—men fed on fine strength making foods such as Quaker Oats—that would win in any contest with the old Roman or Greek champions.

It's a matter of food. The finest food for making strength of bone, muscle and nerve is fine oatmeal. Quaker Oats is the best because it is pure, no husks or stems or black specks. Farmers' wives are finding that by feeding the farm hands plentifully on Quaker Oats they accomplish a double result; the men go to their work with greater vigor and the expense of such feeding is less than with other foods. 16

WARSAW WOMEN'S INSTITUTE MEETINGS

Warsaw, Sept. 13.—The Warsaw Women's Institute held their meetings at the home of Mrs. Ed. Hamblin. The president was in the chair. There were fifteen ladies present. The meeting opened by singing "Blest be the Tie That Binds," and repeating the Lord's Prayer. Minutes of last meeting were read and found correct.

The matter of changing the library was taken up, but it was decided to leave it where it is for the present. Printed programmes were obtained and distributed. The names of books which some of the members wished to read were put down, but the purchasing of them was left over until next meeting. We are very sorry the libray is not being used more, but will be open in future from 8 to 9 o'clock on Saturday evenings. Mrs. Mathews read a paper on pickling and sauces, and a discussion followed on the making of pickles and catsup, which was very interesting and our President also gave some recipes for making different kinds of sauces and pickles. A letter from the agricultural department was talked over and the Secretary instructed to write for a lady delegate to come on the same conditions as usual.

Moved by Mrs. Robert Mathews, seconded by Mrs. David Taylor, that a letter of condolence be sent to Mrs. and Mr. S. R. Payne, expressing the sympathy of the members of the Women's Institute for their sad bereavement, caused by the death of their son, Harold. The matter of providing lunch by the Institute for their sad bereavement, caused by the death of their son, Harold. The matter of providing lunch by the Institute was proposed, but not decided. After lunch being served the meeting closed by singing "God Save the King." Next meeting to be held on Oct. 14, at the home of Mrs. Geo. Clements. Subjects, "Books we Should Read," Mrs. Marvin; "Music in the Home," Mrs. Geo. Taylor.

MAKE THE BLOOD RICH AND RED

Miss Cynthia Hutchinson, Hanceville, B. C., writes: "My system was so completely run down that my friends as well as myself thought I could never get better. All medicines failed to help me. A trial of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food benefitted me and at the end of a month people scarcely knew me I had improved so much. The blood was enriched, colour improved, new flesh was added, and I got strong and well."

Sir,—Having occasion to visit the Lift Lock while in your city to-day, in company with many others, I was very unfavourably impressed by the conduct of a number, which appeared to me to be the younger employees of a large manufacturing establishment on Hunter street, passing remarks not of a pleasing nature to us as we went by at noon hour. Trusting this will have its desired effect and the nuisance will cease, I am

DOURO ITEMS

Examiner Special.

Douro, Sept. 15.—Mr. Clarence Moher, brother of Frank Moher, Reeve of Douro, of Sault Ste Marie is spending a few days with friends here.

Mrs. Jeremiah Moher of Sault Ste Marie is visiting friends here.

Mr. J. W. Condon had a six acre piece of oats which is well worthy of mention. This is no story as Maurice Condon, uncle of J. W. Condon saw him cut the oats and noted that the binder could only elevate about one half a swarth and also remarked that the binder discharged two and three sheaves at the same time.

Corn cutters are busy this last week and many new machines have been purchased.

Mrs. William Allen's brother of Chicago is spending a few days here.

Human Life Increased BY FOURTEEN YEARS

Longer life is due to better understanding of Nature's Laws and use of such medicines as DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

During the last century the average life of man has increased by about four years. Insurance statistics prove this.

What is the reason?

People are learning to take better care of their health and to follow the laws of sanitation and hygiene.

The first law of health and the most important calls for "Daily movement of the bowels."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have helped to prolong the life of many because they have enabled them to follow this first law of health.

A torpid, sluggish condition of the liver and kidneys is certain to bring constipation of the bowels, clogging of the digestive and excretory systems, poisoning of the blood and give rise to the most dreadfully painful and fatal of diseases.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills purify the blood and cleanses the system as no other treatment can because of their unique and combined action on the filtering and excretory organs—the liver, kidneys and bowels.

Mrs. R. Morrow, Bracebridge, Ont., writes: "For years I was troubled almost constantly with constipation of the bowels and never got anything to do me the lasting good that has been obtained from Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They not only relieved the trouble but have entirely cured the headaches from which I used to suffer, and have improved my health in a general way."

BIG ATTENDANCE AT THE FAIR TO-DAY

up-to-date buggies, carriages made by the old established firm of Geo. Fitzgerald & Co., whose showrooms and factory are situated on the corner of Water and Brock streets. It was a splendid display of modern-wheeled vehicles, and received the admiration of crowds of visitors. It must be gratifying to this local firm of manufacturers to be able to "hold their own" in this district against the strong competition of the large outside factories.

The exhibit of our local firm of buggy builders was a comprehensive one, and showed what can be turned out in our own city in this particular line. Under a wide stretch of canvas there was a showing of as handsome-looking rigs as a horseman would want to set eyes on. They consisted of well-finished buggies, with covered tops, trim-looking cushion-tired runabout, comfortable, two-seated carriages, etc. Most of the rigs were rubber-tired; the gearings were in varied colours, the bodies in piano box and other designs, artistically finished, and adorned with nickel and plated trimmings.

Mr. Fitzgerald stated that he had also a fine collection of similar buggies in his warerooms, some of which were sold, ready to be taken away. By manufacturing their own buggies, carriages and waggons, Messrs. Fitzgerald & Co., are enabled to control more perfectly the quality and workmanship of their products and because of this they are able to give what they promise. The Fitzgerald line of vehicles are known to be honestly built, because they are built under their own supervision. Wheels, shafts and gear wood are of special high grade hickory and guaranteed. The painting and trimming of each vehicle testifies for itself, and the entire work is mechanically constructed. Their motto is to make the best and their very large trade this season is one result of their excellent turnouts.

Madam Need Not Sweep Nor Dust Again.

One of the most interesting of the exhibits on the Fair Grounds, especially to the ladies, was that shown by the representative of the Manson-Campbell Company, Limited, of Chatham. Here was demonstrated the practical usefulness of the Chatham Vacuum Celaner, making it so easy to clean a house without removing rugs, carpets, or furniture. The Vacuum Cleaner makes house-cleaning the work of a few minutes, instead of many hours. The drudgery and confusion are all overcome, and there is not labour enough left to tire a child. Think what it means to housewives—day after day—year after year—to have your entire home spotlessly clean and sweet, purged of the disease germs that swarm in the dust.

Be sure and see this exhibit tonight or to-morrow. At the same time inspect the Fireless cooker, the latest production of a fireless stove. Also, the kitchen cabinet, so useful and handy in the house, which is on exhibition.

From The Roy Studio.

The Roy studio again occupies its regular space in the main building with a large exhibit of unusual interest. All that is new, all that is good, and belongs to legitimate modern photography is represented therein. There is a noticeable absence of what may be termed "freak photography." It has always been the endeavour of this studio to make portraits that will live, that will become more valuable as the years pass by, that will not simply attract favourable comment at the time they are produced. A glance at this collection would convince the most sceptical that in this they have succeeded. The ease of position and expression, the innocence of the childish faces portrayed with the strength and virility in the men's portraits are truly remarkable. Prominent in the exhibit are numerous out-of-town faces, demonstrating the wide reputation this firm has won. The large three-length life-size photograph of the late Col. J. Z. Rogers is one of the finest pieces modern photography is capable of producing.

Peterborough beauty spots, (and they are many) are well represented. It would be hard to find a more appropriate Christmas or Wedding gift than one of these views suitably framed.

The effect of the whole exhibit is certainly a convincing argument of the quality of work produced by this old established firm, who have been awarded so many prizes for their exhibits.

Fine Piano Display by the City Music Company.

The enterprising members of the City Music Company, whose warerooms are located in the Market building, next to the Arcade, monopolised one of the central sections of the main building, where the crowds mostly congregated. This handsome display was an object of much admiration by visitors. It consisted of several instruments from the factories of such reputable makers as Newcombes, Evans Bros., Sherlock-Manning, and Haines Bros., each of whom are so well represented in this section by the City Music Company.

Special interest was centred in one of the Newcombe pianos which was a fac-simile of the instrument which won the highest award and medal at the great Jamestown Exposition last year.

The interior view of this musical gem showed the heavy cast iron plate with composite metal bar and the Howard patent tension rods, which contribute so much to the musical excellence of this style. A beautiful sample of a player-piano was also a conspicuous feature of this exhibit, in which modern mechanism had produced remarkable results.

Mr. Thos. Walmsley, Superintendent of Sales was in charge of this exhibit. He was assisted by Mr. Rose and other members of the local firm. The booth was artistically decorated and showed skill and good taste.

Louis Mendel's Photographic Gems.

The Fine Arts section had a unique exhibit of photography from the studio of Mr. Louis Mendil, George St. His work and his style represent results that have been largely influenced by his recent visits to Germany and the United States, where he had the privilege of coming in contact with some of the ablest professionals of the world. The sketches and full prints shown in this exhibit were particularly admired, because of the new process which is aid to be known only by a few gifted photographers. A gum print, by Mr. Mendel, was also a new process seen by him while in Europe. A rare photo printed on Japanese paper, quite novel in its effects and giving to the silk drapery a realistic appearance, was another of the gems of this collection. The sepia prints are in various sizes and were framed in Circassian walnut, rosewood, oak, and gold. In the children's pictures the posing is simple and natural. A head sketch in a long panel frame is shown, in which the coloured effect, after Harrison Fisher, is very fine.

LOOK OUT FOR PNEUMONIA

Your system is in a run-down condition. You catch cold. You think it will soon pass off. It doesn't. You neglect taking any special care of yourself. Bronchitis develops and then comes pneumonia and a fight for life. A fight which is too often unsuccessful. Why not take every cold seriously and cure it promptly by using Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

NEWS FROM THE RAILROAD TOWN

Examiner Special.

Havelock, Sept. 14.—Havelock is to have a box alley. Mr. Parkins of Uxbridge, was in town on Wednesday making arrangements for the installation of one at once. He already has such a venture in Lindsay and Uxbridge, and believes that Havelock will be a good place for such form of amusement. He has rented the building between the stores of And. MANCHESTER L. O. L.

Local Orange Lodge Making Great Progress.

Orange Sentinel: The Sentinel had a visit on Saturday from Bro. N. A. Howard Moore, of Peterborough, who gave us an excellent report of the progress made by Manchester L. O. L. No. 50 in that city. A most satisfactory increase in membership is recorded, this, nothwithstanding the fact that unlike most lodges No. 50 goes considerably beyond the Grand Lodge limit for the cost of the degrees. It has been proved in the case of this lodge that increasing the cost of membership improves the quality. Another feature of the lodge is that it owns all the regalia that is needed. No member is allowed to purchase any from out of his own pocket. The lodge assumes the entire burden. The energetic young Master of the lodge is Newton Hopkins, a worthy successor to W. H. G. Armstrong, who resigned the office to become Grand Organiser in Saskatchewan. This lodge has a Presbyterian minister for a member, and expects to add to its numbers other Protestant ministers before very long.

JUBILANT HARVEST FESTIVAL SERVICES AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

"The joy in harvest" was the key note of the Harvest Festival services at St. John's last night, expressed visibly in the beautiful and abundant decorative trophies of field and garden and parterre that brightened the sacred building in every part; and more especially in the jubilant and joyful service the harvest hymns and the excellent and appropriate sermon delivered by Rev. J. H. Tenney, rector of St. Philip's, Toronto.

There was a large attendance of worshippers chiefly women. The church was very handsomely decorated with fruit flowers and vegetables, tastefully and effectively disposed, giving a brightening and inspiring aspect. The pulpit was garbed in trailing festoons of vines and flowers, the deep recesses of the windows were banked with flowers and fruits and a large floral cross placed in the organ screen was a conspicuous and effective feature.

The service which was choral, was taken by the Rector and Rev. Dr. Langfeldt. The hymns, the anthem, and special prayers and thanksgivings were attuned to the occasion. An unusually large choir contributed in a very excellent way its share to the service.

The sermon was brief and breathed patriotism and gratitude and was timely and appropriate. The text was selected from Deuteronomy VIII. 10: "When thou hast eaten and art full, then shalt thou bless the Lord thy God for the good land he has given thee." This was a tribute of gratitude from the venerable leader of the Israelites and of thankfulness for the land which had been given his people. Applied to this country this sentiment shows what uncounted blessings we enjoy, justifying the exclamation of the Bishop of London, "It's a glorious thing to be alive," especially in Canada so richly endowed with the conditions that make for material comfort and happiness. If the Jews were so loyal and patriotic to their little country, sixty by one hundred and forty miles in area, then Canada, a country which extends 4,000 miles and in which it required an express train seven days at full speed to cover the distance from sea to sea was a more glorious country and one to be proud of. It was a land where seed time and harvest never failed. To show what we had to be thankful for it was pointed out that in Peterborough with 17,000 people it cost $5,000 for one day's food and maintenance, a million and a half dollars a year. Apply this to the cities, towns, villages and country of seven millions and we should see what bounty Divine Providence bestowed in order to feed the people of this happy country. We reaped from one hundred to one hundred and forty million bushels this year and when our available soil was brought under plough we would be able to reap a crop that would give five bushels of wheat to every man, woman and child on the earth. Was there another country like this, when we considered in addition to its material aspects, its laws, its liberties, its educational religious and social advantages? What country could more fittingly take into its mouth the words of the text. It was suggested that there was a danger that we might forget as the children of Israel had done the Source from which all blessings came—should neglect the higher things. Our blessings should arouse our gratitude and kindle our devotion to the bountiful Giver of all things. The preacher closed by impressing the duty of gratitude and all that involved; then we could realize the beauty of the 23rd Psalm—"The Lord is my Shepherd; I shall not want."

The services throughout were, speaking humanly, highly successful. The liberal offertory was devoted to Home and Foreign Missions.

THE WORLD WILL MOVE ALONG JUST THE SAME

No man is absolutely necessary, or even very important. If I did quit nothing would happen. This world is full of men ready to take the place of any one. The fellow who takes hold where I leave off will go right ahead. Nothing will happen if I let go. Trains will run just the same, dividends will be earned as before; so it is with every man.

I have worked hard because I like the doing of things.

Grasp an idea and work it out to a successful conclusion. This is about all there is in life for any of us.

People seem to take more stock in a man who talks than a man who acts. But this is a day devoted to isms and it will pass.

I have always been too busy to think much about myself. The doctors are beginning to tell me that the other fellow ought to have a chance to do something.

Every tide has its rise and fall and one would be living in a fool's paradise not to take the ebb into consideration in figuring out his future requirements.

The first law of our civilisation is the co-operation of all individuals to improve the conditions of life.

To achieve what the world calls success, a man must attend strictly to business and keep a little in advance of the times.

There are two things that menace the prosperity of this country—idle money and idle labor. The one is as mischievous as the other.

"Pull can never carry a man far. It is hard work and application that count.

We have had monkey dinners and the idle and foolish vaporings and route of society. Now is the time for less champagne and truffles and more roast beef and milk.

Matrimony is not essentially a business proposition. In fact, it never should be regarded as such. But nevertheless marriage often plays an important part in the race for what is commonly called success.

Success is the accomplishment of any one task as well or better than the same task can be accomplished by another.

To the young man who would be a success in life I would give these hints: Always be courteous, always be friendly, and do the best you can under all circumstances. When you marry choose a good woman, a co-operative woman, one who will interest herself in whatever work it may be incumbent upon you to do.

In choosing man, I don't notice the cut of their clothes so much as the shape of their heads.

The more prosperity there is the more quickly we have to develop the means to take advantage of this prosperity.

An automobile is the greatest doctor and drug store in the world. It gives one air, makes him forget, exhilarates him. I wish they were cheaper, so the man of moderate means could be provided with this way of getting well.

I have often wondered whether it was worth while—this thing of placing one's whole nerves and physical force into works of such huge enterprises. I have longed for the shade, rest and comfort. But there is something in man that makes him want to go on, to finish what he has started.

The people have the get-rich-quick bacillus. It's a fearful disease. It's the only menace to this country.

I truly believe that if wives were to take more interest in their husband's affairs we would have a happier world.

What sensible man doesn't believe in God? Religion saves and advances civilisation.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

The Burgomaster

"The Burgomaster" cannot be said to possess the advantage of novelty and yet Pixley's lines seem to lose none of their humour and Luder's libretto none of its jingly tunefulness as the years go on. The comic opera served as a magnet which drew a very large audience to the Grand Opera House last night and also as the cause d'etre of the satisfaction that was bubbling over in the crowd as it dispersed.

The performance given last night was a most praiseworthy one, although two favourites who were seen here last year were not with the company. Last year Gus. Weinberg who had previously played here in the "Gingerbread Man," was cast as the Burgomaster while dainty Ruth White who had been seen at the Grand in "The Tenderfoot" had the role of "Willie Van Astorbilt." Last night's production however introduced another favourite comedian in the person of Harry Hermsen who played the title role of the "Royal Chef," here two years ago. As the Burgomaster last night he was irresistibly funny and there was not a dull moment when he was on the stage. He was ably assisted by Euphemie Lockhart as "Willie" and by the splendid support of an excellent cast of principals and chorus.

Being by Luder, the score abounds in tuneful music and the merit of the melody was enhanced by the fine singing of the entire company. Among the song hits were "We're Civilized Now," by the Indian chorus, "Just Keep Cool," by the Burgomaster, "I Wish I had a Girl," by "Willie," "I Love You," by "Ruth," and the ever popular "Tale of the Kangaroo," and a catchy "kid" song by Sylvia Frank.

The production thoroughly pleased the large audience and can be recommended as a most pleasant way of whiling away two hours and one half.

THE PRIZE WINNERS

In Skating Contest at Auditorium Roller Rink.

The prize skating contest at the Auditorium Roller Rink last night proved decidedly interesting and the competition was enjoyed by spectators and skaters alike. The first prize, an umbrella, was captured by Miss Guerin while Mr. Revoir was awarded the second prize, also an umbrella. There was a very large attendance. The judges were Messrs. Lord and Glover.

WEDDING BELLS

KELLY—TOOLEY.

Chandos, Sept 14th.—This morning, at St. Mary's Church, Elizabeth Alice, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Kelly, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony, to Francis Michael Gooley, son of Mrs. Mary Gooley, of Raymond, Washington State. The bride was assisted by her sister, Miss Florence Kelly, while the groom was supported by his cousin, Mr. Ed. Gooley. The ceremony was performed by Rev. V. G. McFadden, of Peterborough, before the eight-oclock mass. The church was well filled with the numerous relatives and friends of the young couple, showing the high estimation in which they are both held in this community.

McCLENNAN-ALLAN.

A pretty wedding was solemnised at the home of the bride's aprents, Mr. and Mrs. R Moore, 113 Osgoode St., yesterday, when their only daughter, Laura Isabel Allan, was united in marriage to Walter Danesbrook McClennan of the topographical surveys branch, department of interior, Rev. J. H .Turnbull, of Bank street Presbyterian church, performing the ceremony.

The bride, who was given away by her stepfather, entered the drawing-room, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms, gladioli, asters and smilax, to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, played by James A. Smith, organist of Bank street church. She looked most charming in a handsome princess gown of cream messaline silk, over taffeta, and wore the customary veil and orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses. Her only ornament was a necklace of pearls, with pearl pendant, the gift of the groom. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid consisted of a brooch set with pearls, and to the groomsman a pearl and utrquoise stick pin.

The bride was attended by Miss Edith M. McClennan, sister of the groom, who wore a French voile gown and carried pink roses. Mr. Wm. F. Allan, a brother of the bride, was the best man.

Following the ceremony a recherche luncheon was served in the spacious dining room. The tables were beautifully bedecked with white blossoms and smilax, and about 50 guests were present. The popular young couple left to spend the honeymoon trip via G. T. R. for Montreal and Quebec and including a trip up the Saguenay The bride's travelling costume was navy blue broadcloth, with picture hat of black moire silk and velvet, with white plumes. Among the numerous beautiful gifts received was a handsome cabinet of silver presented by the aBnk street church choir, a handsome brass mantel clock and cut glass vase from the staff of the topographical surveys office, and a full set of aluminum kitchen ware from the "Queen's bunch." Among the guests present were some from Montreal, Peterboro, Cumberland, Vars, etc. On return to Ottawa, Mr. and Mrs. McClennan will take up residence at 57 Strathcona avenue.—Ottawa Citisen.

ACCOMMODATION FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

The National Sanitarium Association have completed further building extensions at Muskoka, adding forty beds to their present accommodation, bringing the total available beds in the Muskoka homes up to 250. In affiliation with the Muskoka institutions are the Toronto Free Hospital for Consumptives, and King Edward Sanitarium for Consumptives. These institutions are situated about five miles from Toronto, in a delightful position near the Humber. Here further building has been going on, bringing the accommodation in these homes up to 150. In other words, within the Muskoka and the Toronto institutions, there are now 400 beds. In Muskoka, patients in the incipient stages of Tuberculosis are accepted, and in the Toronto institutions, those in the advanced and far advanced stages of disease. Patients are accepted from any part of the province, and with these additional beds there is now no waiting list. Patients are accepted promptly on completion of application papers. Information pertaining to any of these institutions may be obtained by writing to J. S. Robertson, Executive Secretary, 347 King St., West, Toronto, Ont.

Marvellously Complete Style Exposition of the New Tailored Suits For Autumn
A Splendid Exploitation of the New Modes

We have accomplished the seemingly impossible. To create a showing of magnificent garments, each reflecting the new style trends and yet distinct and different from the common herd, is a task worthy of any store--but we have done it.

The woman whose form is graced by one of our suits has the satisfaction of knowing that she is wearing the best garment the world produces. Here is the Parisian garment of the day, adapted to the needs of the Canadian woman, sparkling with brilliancy and originality.

Hall suits are exquisitely tailored made of the finest materials and represent Fashion's last mode in garments.

In every line they reveal themselves to be masterpieces in the way of ready-to-don garments. Entrancingly beautiful suits at alluring pricings. If you admire garments that are different and which couple with a charm making a most temptingly low price, visit the greatest style display of suits this city has ever seen.

Jaunty Tailored Suits—$18.00

Beautiful Fall Styles

¶ There is a touch and go to these Women's Suits that appeals to women. These Suits, while they are not over-trimmed, have just enough to take off the stern tailored appearance, yet the rich tailored effect is not lost. Note:

We have one line of all wool Venetians in solid colours: navy, green, and black, strictly man-tailored but with a touch of relief in self-covered buttons in two rows at back at waist line of coat, as well as down the front. The slash pocket also adds tone. The coat is lined throughout with a fine brocaded lining. The skirt is plain tailored, with button trimming.

The other line is made of Invisible Striped Cheviot, (all wool), in shades of navy blue, also black. Coat is neatly tailored, natty 1909-10 cut, trimmed with self, in "Mayon Age" effect, finished with jet buttons. The skirt is in the pleated panel style. Altogether these are excellent Suits, at our special price—

THE WEDDING SCENE.

Julian Edwards' Best Comic Opera The Gay Musician" Grand Opera House, Wednesday Evening, Sept. 22. Plan Opens Monday Morning.

Through the efforts of Manager A. J. Small, who controls the theatrical field in Canada, he has induced Manager John P. Slocum of New York to present the successful comic opera, "The Gay Musician," by the noted composer, Julian Edwards, for a short tour of the principal Canadian cities during the annual dates of the Fair weeks. Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa will have the opportunity of "hearing the charming music of "The Gay Musician," during the Fair weeks of the respective cities and thousands of visitors who will visit the fairs will be delighted to learn that they will have the chance of listening to one of the most successful musical compositions of the day, through the energy of Managers Small and Slocum.

In addition to the cities mentioned Manager Small has arranged with Manager Slocum for the presentation of "The Gay Musician," at some principal points in Canada, including Kingston, Peterborough, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Brantford, London and St. Thomas.

Following the preliminary tour of Canada, Manager Slocum will present "The Gay Musician" for a period of thirty-five weeks in the United States in principal cities only. The demand of local managers in the United States to secure an engagement of "The Gay Musician" was so pronounced, that Manager Slocum was compelled to refuse the requests to present the famous comic opera in any other than the large cities and the fact that the noted composition is to be heard in many Canadian cities is a tribute to the untiring energy of Manager Small, the Nestor of Canadian theatricals.

Julian Edwards, the famous composer, is dear to the hearts of all Canadians, for not only is he a loyal subject of His Majesty, King Edward, but he has followed closely the lines laid down by Gilbert and Sullivan and his constant aim is to give lovers of music the best and cleanest in amusements; a principle that Manager John P. Slocum has also followed for many years.

The engagement of "The Gay Musician in this city will be on Wednesday, September 22nd.

Latest "Sensations" In Hats As Seen In Millinery Shops

Peterborough Women Have the Latest Creations From New York and Paris in the Leading Business Houses in This City—Millinery Displays are "Classy"

WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS

September has ushered in the fair season of Autumn. The summer has almost spent itself and the days gradually growing shorter announce the approach of winter. The summer girl has begun to think of storing away the pretty rainment for several months has been her pride and the decree of fashion has been once more announced as to what she shall wear during the fall. The millinery connoisseur has kept a gentle touch on Dame Fashion's pulse and can safely guide pretty femininity in how to meet her sweet smiles. It is one of the unwritten laws that a woman must submit to that indefinable something that is known as "the style" and from its demands there is practically no escape.

Peterborough's centres of fashion have made their annual debut with the season's latest ideas from Paris and New York, the homes of the newest modes. The millinery departments of the leading stores which cater to women's vanity have had very successful fall openings and the prospects are already bright. Different stores offer different models although there are several styles that are common to all. It may be stated that the ladies of this city will find many beautiful and chic hats if they have not yet inspected the offerings with a view to deciding what they will wear this fall. The leading houses realize the necessity of trusting this part of their business to ladies who are thoroughly conversant with the newest styles and the large stores in New York have been visited with the result that the prettiest creations now being generally worn have been brought home It is not necessary to go out of town to secure the daintiest shapes, the new colours and in fact everything that gives distinction to a hat, one of the most important parts of a ladies attire.

Richard Hall & Son

At the up-to-date and modern department store of Richard Hall & Son, the reporter found a beautiful array of new goods in every line. The decorations for the fall opening had been carried out on an extensive and elaborate scale, the result being that everywhere the eye could look, the newest things from the great centres of fashions were displayed to advantage.

Probably the millinery showroom was the Mecca for the ladies of Peterborough yesterday. In both the millinery and ready-to-wear rooms new green Wilton rugs made by the Brinton Carpet Company of this city had been placed on the floors. The windows were prettily hung with green curtains. The rooms had been redecorated in gold. In the millinery room one wall showcase was draped with a deep shade of rose satin and it contained black picture hats. Another one was done in Wisterie satin and showed hats of the same shade. A third one looked very pretty draped in green, showing immense hats of various shades.

One popular hat this season is the large brim black hat with facing of rose tissue, black lynx crown, huge bunch of roses to blend with facing.

The toque russe is made in a handsome combination of velvet and rich sealskin. The crown is highly draped in folds of velvet, showing a rich tone of Gainsborough blue. Some of the new designs in shapes are the Sarasen, Henri II., Marie Antoinette, and Mephisto Hat. Some of the new colours are pea-soup green, tomato, Corbeau, Gainsborough, raisin, aranis garanise, blue and wisteria.

In the ready-to-wear department Messrs. Hall & Son are showing some smart tailored suits of New York and Paris designs in the newest shades. On these they have the exclusive sale, carrying only one of each kind and local ladies purchasing here may rest assured that no one else will have a suit like this. They are also showing something extremely exquisite in dress goods which Mr. Dickson Hall brought with him from Paris. Bengaline silk in soft new evening shades and cashmere de soie will be very popular for evening gowns this coming season. Other novelties shown are the Egyptian veil, the price of which is regulated by the amount of silver on it, the velvet elastic jet belt, and the large jet hat pins.

At the Golden Lion Store

Here too was an effusion of pretty headgear in all the newest and up-to-date designs. A large assortment is shown and the young ladies in the Millinery department were kept busy in trying hats on the large numbers of women who called. The large hats that have been such favourites in the past two seasons will be again much worn this fall and winter.

Those fond of the immense ones will find some particularly pretty ones at Robert Fair's store. However the hats of smaller dimensions will be more popular this year. Some extremely neat and natty ones are shown. The window displays at this store are attracting much attention. The artistic arrangement of them has been the subject of much favourable comment, reflecting great credit on the good taste of the window dresser.

At Miss Allin's

Miss Allin's pretty showroom on George street was a busy place yesterday afternoon. "It is the most successful opening I have ever held," Miss Allin stated and one would think so judging from the immense throng of ladies that called. Miss Allin disposed of a large number of her pattern hats on her opening day. She showed some extremely unique and pretty styles, one being a large hat with a rolling rim, a crown of white corded silk with a facing of black velvet and trimmings of black fox fur and ospreys. Miss Allin also has a nice line of smaller hats which she says, will be much worn this season.

Cressman's Showing

Cressman's formal opening was held on Tuesday and was marked by large crowds who came to look and remained to admire. The attendance every afternoon since then has been most encouraging and the sales have been reported better than was expected. Experts in hat fashions have charge of the hat department and a very attractive display is to be seen. Among the many ideas there are some of striking character that are being extensively worn.

The French Pattern hat, large in shape, caught up jauntily at one side, and a huge drape crown of white chiffon, finished with a pair of handsome white wings. The Grey Beaver, Russian Turban and Amethyst pressed beaver should be asked for.

The predominating colours are the darker tones of purple, rose, green, including amethyst which is a leader, Wisteria, old Rose, faded old Rose, Ashes of Rose, aeroplane blue and others. Cressman's millinery salon is tastefully decorated with brown beech branches and natural plants which with the bright colours of the roots, effects a brilliant scene. Mr. J. C. Edwards, the window dresser, has successfully designed several pretty schemes that in the centre windows are proving very attractive.

At Miss McGivern's

Miss McGivern has imported directly from Paris and New York and has an offering of ideas in hats that will compare with anything to be found in Peterborough. When the musical comedy "Havana" made its appearance in New York last season, it was a pronounced hit from the first night. One of the principal musical numbers was, "Hello People! People Hello." The chorus was daintily costumed but the fetching sailor that was worn caught the audience at once and was admired for its simplicity and taste. One of the newspapers referring to it said, "There is class to that hat," and that is all that need be said. The milliners took it up and it is now one of the leading fall styles. It is known as the Hello people sailor and is made of felt or velvet in any colour. It is particularly charming on some girls and is becoming to any of the fair sex. Miss McGivern is probably the only milliner in the city showing this hat. A colour that is strictly new is the Maple Sugar Brown. The dashing Gainsborough hat with handsome trimmings is shown in this store and the mushroom and turban in various effects are also leaders. The willow feather is new and Rhine stone buckles are in favour. Ladies will discover all these new ideas and many others by a visit to the store.

At J. C. Turnbull's.

The gaily-decorated millinery department of the J. C. Turnbull & Co. store was thronged yesterday afternoon for the annual fall opening. Beaver hats are very stylish and the tri-corn and entrancing Cavalier hats are a la mode. Ostrich feathers, as usual, are popular, as also sequins and jets.

Summing up the reporter's visits, the shades that are fashionable in hats are those of a rich sombre colour, the fiary, bright effects having been aparently tabooed for this season. In shapes there are not a few that are stylish and are selected because they are becoming to women of different figures and features.

LAKEFIELD FAIR—The Annual Exhibition of the Lakefield Agricultural Society will be held in the Society's Grounds at Lakefield, on Tuesday and Wednesday, September 28th and 29th The Directors have made quite a number of improvements during the past season, a fine new Grand Stand having been erected, also a Judge's stand, and an inner ring for Judging Horses and Cattle in. They are expecting a splendid exhibition this year. Prize Lists, entry forms, &c may be obtained from the Secretary, W. Sherin, Lakefield, or any of he Officers or Directors. 4d-54-1w-37

BOWLING LICENSE WAS GRANTED

Havelock is getting more like New York every day. The village Council has decided to grant a license for a bowling alley. Some time ago a pool room was to be opened, but the village fathers turned a deaf ear. "No chance" they said, "we'll have none of it. The thin edge of the wedge shall not be entered without us knowing about it." The Havelock paper in reporting the Council meeting, refers as follows:

The most interesting event of the evening was the granting of a license for a bowling alley to Mr. Parkin, of Lindsay, who conducts alleys in Uxbridge and his home town .In view of the fact that the majority of the present Council held strong condemnatory views on such amusements as pool or billiard tables last year and refused to grant a license to a reputable citizen who had invested his all in town property, on any terms whatever, the granting of a license came as a great surprise to those present, for any reasonable man can not but admit that the amusements are exactly similar and no amount of moralising can change the facts of the case. However, we must congratulate the members of the Council on their change of heart on their action of allowing some one to cater to the young men in some form of harmless amusement and pastime. Mr. Parkin gets his license and a by-law will be passed fixing the fee for the first two alleys at $15 each and each subsequent alley he may put in, at $10. The age limit for players was set at sixteen years and the hours of business from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m.

HURT IN RUNAWAY

Father and Son at Auburn Were Both Injured.

Mr. William Bell, of Auburn and his son Arthur are both on crutches as a result of injuries received in a runaway accident a few days ago. They were driving home from the city about five o'clock and the wagon was stopped and the lines dropped in order to get out, when the horse became frightened and ran away. Both men were thrown out, the son receiving an injured foot and the father had a leg severely injured. Both were unable to walk without the aid of a crutch, but are expected around again shortly.

OBITUARY

KATHARINE O'BRIEN

The death occurred this morning at her late residence on lot 3, concession 5, Douro of Miss Katharine O'Brien, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Brien. The deceased passed away after an illness of several months. She was thirty years of age and was well known and highly respected by all who knew her. The news of her death will be received with the profoundest regret. Her parents, five brothers and four sisters are left to mourn her loss. The brothers are Messrs. Augustus, Francis, Michael, John, William and Martin, all of Douro, and her sisters are Mrs. P. Shanahan of Prescott, Mrs. Fred Hyde of Rochester, N.Y., and Miss Nettie at home.

The funeral will take place on Sunday morning at nine o'clock to St. Joseph's Church and thence to St. Joseph's Cemetery.

REASON WITH CHILDREN

From Farm and Dairy.

There are so many ways in which to correct children, and there are so so many things to correct, that the wise mother must be constant in her endeavor to not only teach the child that he must do this or that, but why he must do it.

Children are so queer in their reasoning powers and so apt at application, that a reason once given why a child must not slam the door, or upset a glass of milk, will only lessen the "no, no, don't do that," which seems to comprise many a mother's sole conversation with her child, but it will instil into the growing mind the law of kindness and incidentally of good manners. Too often the determined mother fortifies herself with the resolve to make Tommy learn to mind, if it kills her. And if she persists in this method, she will do much towards it.

My neighbor has a little boy four years old, one of whose duties it is to bring in small sticks of lightwood from the cellar. His mother had a caller and naturally he came around to hear them talk and forgot the wood.

"Charlie, get that wood. Do you hear? Mind me this minute," and the child dragged his heavy feet away while tears rolled down his cheeks.

"How nice it is," the caller said pleasantly," that Charlie in such a big boy, four years old, that he can help his mamma by bringing up wood."

The effect was wonderful. The child straightened up like a young soldier, held his basket firmly and marched away to fill the woodbox, his face beaming with pride.

Reason with your little ones; help them to grow by showing them the why and wherefore, and stimulate their pride by doing things well.

A RUN ON KING STREET

Delivery Horse Cuts Up a Little Caper This Afternoon.

About 11 o'clock this morning J. C. Sulivan's delivery horse became frightened at something, while standing at a house in Reid street, near Charlotte, and ran away. It ran down Reid and east on King, till it came in contact with a tree, which held it fast till the driver caught it. No damage was done other than upsetting a basket of peaches and some other contents of the vehicle.

BRITISH SEEK OUR TENNIS GOAT

ENGLAND'S INTERNATIONAL TENNIS TEAM.

These three English tennis crack-a-jacks, now in this country, will play the pick of the American net artists to decide whether an American or an English team shall journey to Australia to meet the holders of the Davis Cup, emblematic of the world's tennis championship. They will play at the Merion Cricket Club, Haverford, Pa.

Hot Apple Pie Beat Evans Out Of Amateur Golf Title

ROBT. E. GARDNER.

CHANDLER EGAN.

Chicago, Sept. 15.—Chandler Egan, twice national amateur golf champion, ate himself out of a third title in the last national event.

Egan fought his way through a classy field to the finals with Robert E. Gardner, despite an attack of acute indigestion which seized him in the semi-finals.

Following the semi-final wth 'Chick' Evans, Egan fainted in the club house and was under the care of a physician the night before the finals. If ever a man was unfit for a severe battle, that man was Egan, but the Harvard wonder went in on his nerve, and, as long as his strength permitted him to overcome the inroads made by the indigestion, he held Gardner even.

It was a large wedge of hot apple pie that put Egan out of the running. Shortly after going south with this American delicacy he was seized with the attack which caused his break down.

Egan's condition does not detract from the performance of the winner for Gardner's play was simply phenomenal, and it is doubtful if Egan could have defeated him had he been at his best.

Gardner outdrove Egan on nearly every hole, after the first round; his iron shots were cleaner and as a rule were placed better, and he had Egan fighting for his life on the greens. Gardner holed three long putts, one being at least 40 feet, and he had veterans like Walter Travis gazing at him open-mouthed.

"ANGEL" SPEAS FROM PORTLAND

Portland, Ore., Sept. 16. — Bill "Angel" Speas goes from Portland to the American League next spring as a Nap recruit, and the coast fans say he will burn 'em up around the big circle, just as he did in Arkon, and as he has been doing here.

Base ball scouts who have watched Speas, declare he is a better man right now than any of the Nap regulars, and being but 22, with a head of normal size, he is willing and able to learn all the tricks supposed to form an essential part of a big leaguer's schooling.

JACK CORKERY IS OUT WITH ARGOS

Manager Wright introduced another stranger to the gang last night in Jack Corkery, of Peterborough, who played such a star game for Ottawa College at left half last fall. Corkery as a sprinter has been known to break the speed limit on the field, and was responsible for those splendid runs for King Clancy's team. Argos had a turn out of numerous aspirants last night, though no hard work was indulged in on account of glass scattered here and there.—Toronto Telegram.

Golf

WAS DISQUALIFIED

Walter G., the well-known race horse that is supposed to be a "ringer" was disqualified in the free-for-all race at Belleville fair yesterday, and as a result the race did not come off. It will be remembered that Walter G. got into the same trouble at Peterborough last fall where he won a race but did not receive any money, and was expelled from the track. He is owned by Dayfoe, of Campbellford.—Lindsay Warder.

AN ATTRACTIVE RINK

New Roller Rink Very Popular Since Opening

The new Brock Street Roller Rink is proving a great attraction for the young people of the city. Each evening, since the opening large numbers have enjoyed the pleasant pastime of roller skating. The spacious floor is an excellent one and the presence of the band each night adds greatly to the pleasure. CUCUMBERS BY THE BARREL

Ed., Farm and Dairy,—Here is how we make sure of the family supply of cucumbers, rain or no rain, as may be seen in the illustration, on this page. Take an empty salt barrel, bore some holes around near the bottom and set it about three inches in the ground near the well or other supply of water. Of course the ground should be rich. Then fill the barrel with well rotted manure and plant the seeds a foot or two from the barrel.

In very dry weather put from two to four pails of water in the barrel every night; it will surprise you to see them grow. This is my second years' experience with this method and it has given excellent results.—John Jackson, Lincoln Co., Ont.

FIALA, HERO OF ARCTIC SEAS, TELLS HOW PEARY AND COOK KNEW ABSOLUTELY WHEN THEY REACHED THE NORTH POLE

Intrepid Explorer Writes Special Article for The Evening Examiner and Explains How Brooklynites, Without Clocks or Stars to Guide Them, Knew They Were There.

(Editorial announcement: The Daily Examiner has obtained from Anthony Fiala, the noted Arctic explorer, the following exclusive article, written expressly for its readers, explaining for the first time how Dr. Cook and Commander Peary knew they were at the North Pole, after reaching it. Mr. Fiala, himself a scientist and explorer, has written this remarkable story, so that persons unacquainted with scientific terms can readily understand it. —Editor the Daily Examiner.)

(By Anthony Fiala.)

(Photographer and cartographer, Baldwin-Ziegler expedition, 1901-2, commander-in-chief Baldwin-Ziegler expedition, 1903-5, when he reached 82 degrees 4 minutes north; author of "Fighting the Polar Ice." In 1905 he was rescued in the north, after desperate experiences, by Wm. Champ, secretary to Wm. Ziegler.)

Since the return of Dr. Cook and Commander Peary from the most northern point of the earth, the question has often come up—"How would an explorer know when he has reached the north pole? Would he know by his compass?"

The compass is not used in determining the position of the geographical North Pole. While the discoverer of the magnetic Pole could prove his position by the vertical swing of his dip compass needle, the magnetized steel bar pointing directly down toward the centre of the magnetic North Pole, the discoverer of the north geographical pole would have to prove his discovery by the sun, if the time was summer, or by the stars, if, perchance, he should drift with his ship over the pole during the darkness of an arctic night.

At the geographical north pole the compass points south toward the magnetic Pole nearly 1,400 miles away.

An explorer travelling toward the northern axis of the earth finds the sun an excellent guide for position. The sun hangs low in the sky and revolves like the hands of a great 24-hour clock. At the midnight hour the sun is lowest and directly north, while the noon hour is marked by its most southern limit. At 6 o'clock in the morning it is east, and at the same hour in the evening (or 18 o'clock astronomical time), it is west. Twice in 24 hours the sun is on the meridian of the observer, and observations for latitude can be taken at midnight as well as at noon.

The nearer the explorer approaches the pole, the higher the sun is in the north and the lower it drops toward the south, until at the pole—the point of revolution of the earth—the sun travels around the horizon at an equal altitude, for east and west will have passed away, and every point on the horizon will be south. In reality the axis of the earth is pointing directly at the sun.

FIALA.

The observer standing on the great shaft of the earth's motion slowly turns with it once in 24 hours, giving the apparent motion to the sun. The method of taking latitude is a very simple one.

It consists in measuring the height of the sun above the observer's horizon. In lower latitudes the captain of a ship waits until the sun has reached its highest point, proving to him that it is on his meridan or due south; then he measures its distance or altitude above his horizon, which, latitude or position on the earth by a simple calculation, gives him the north of the equator and south of the Pole.

Below the North Pole and within the polar circle there is always a time when the sun is highest in its circle around the earth—at noon time.

But when the explorer has reached a place where it will be impossible for him to tell when it is noon, or when he finds that the sun has ceased to rise and fall then he has reached the North Pole.

He has attained 90 degrees north latitude. At this position it is noon constantly until the darkness of winter brings the midnight hour.

The sun circles around his horizon in great parallel circles, illuminating a noon time which is about six months long. It makes its first appearance above the horizon in the month of March—just the fiery little tip of its upper edge. Each day it shows more of its face, gradually making its way in great spirals above the horizon, until on June 21 it reaches its highest point (though still only a few degrees above the horizon.)

This maximum altitude attained, it begins its descent once more, slowly circling its way down until in the latter part of September its face disappears. There is a short period of twilight and then comes the blackness of the polar night, relieved only by the fires of aurora and by the faint twinkle of the stars—when storms are absent—save for a few days monthly, when the moon brightens the frozen area by the beams of her borrowed light.

The explorer reaching 90 degrees north in the summer could make sure of his position by taking a number of observations several hours apart, all around the horizon. A resulting latitude of 90 degrees from each and all observations would prove that he was at the North Pole.

Dr. Cook's stay of two days at the Pole was undoubtedly for the purpose of securing this round of observations.

The lightest instrument that can be carried for measuring the altitude of the heavenly bodies is a sextant—the instrument usually used at sea—for it can be held in the hand for taking a "snapshot" while the ship is tossed about in rough water. On the ice fields the visible horizon cannot be depended upon on account of the rough ice. So if the sextant is used an artificial horizon is carried.

In warm latitudes a bowl of mercury serves, but in the cold of the north mercury freezes, so the explorer is obliged to use a glass horizon, the reflecting surface of which has to be carefully levelled before he makes an observation. A careless levelling of this glass would result in a faulty observation and latitude, though in a perfect round of observations for 24 hous or more the error would rectify itself.

So the explorer who would desire accurate record of his position at the North Pole should stay at that point long enough to secure a 24-hour record of observations at least. If, instead of a sextant and artificial horizon, a small theodolite or surveyor's transit were used, the same principles would apply, because the theodolite has to be levelled before an observation.

Mr. Bailey Writes Re Paying to Enter Riverside Park.

Peterborough, Sept. 14, 1909

Sir,—It was not so much paying to enter the grounds, which I should have done and did without objection, but it was being received at the gate in such a mercenary spirit, in fact it was rude. I should not have liked my dog to be in the dressing rooms and the high jump showed those in charge were quite unprepared, to say the least.

Yours,
W. A. BAILEY.

"You did not expect their arrival?"

"Oh, no, sir! Had they written beforehand at this season, when I generally expect to be honored by your presence, I should have answered that the house was full or closed or any excuse which occurred to me to keep strangers away. But none have ever before arrived so late in the year, and I was taken all unawares when my son, Alois, drove them up last night. He did not know you had arrived, as the papers spoke so positively of your visit to the baths, and I could not send travelers away. You have bidden me not to do so once they are in the house. But these ladies are here but for a day or two more on their way to Kronburg for a visit, and I thought"—

"You did quite right, Frau Yorvan. Has my messenger come up with letters?"

"Yes, your—yes, sir. Just now also a telegram was brought by another messenger, who came and left in a great hurry."

The chamois hunter shrugged his shoulders and sighed an impatient sigh. "It's too much to expect that I should be left in peace for a single day, even here," he muttered as he went toward the stairs.

To reach Frau Yorvan's best sitting room (selfishly occupied, according to one opinion, by four men absent all day on a mountain) he was obliged to pass by a door through which issued unusual sounds. So unusual were they that the emperor paused.

Some one was striking the preliminary chords of a volkslied of his favorite instrument, a Rhaetian variation of the zither. As he lingered, listening, a voice began to sing. Ah, what a voice!

Softly seductive it was as the cooing of a dove in the spring to its mate, pure as the purling of a brook among meadow flowers, rich as the deep notes of a nightingale in his passion for the noon. And, for the song, it was the heartbreaking cry of a young Rhaetian peasant who, lying near death in a strange land, longs for one ray of sunrise light on the bare mountain tops of the homeland more earnestly than for his first sight of an unknown heaven.

The man outside the door did not move until the voice was still. He knew well, though he could not see, who the singer had been. It was impossible for the plump lady at the window or the thin lady with the glasses to own a voice like that. It was the girl's. She only of the trio could so exhale her soul in the very perfume of sound, for to his fancy it was like hearing the fragrance of a rose breathed aloud. "I have heard an angel," he said to himself, but in reality he had heard Princess Virginia of Baumenburg-Drippe showing off her very prettiest accomplishment in the childish hope that the man she loved might hear.

Leopold of Rhaetia had heard many golden voices—golden in more senses of the word than one—but never before, it seemed to him, a voice which so stirred his spirit with pain that was bittersweet, pleasure as blinding as pain and a vague yearning for something beautiful which he had never known.

If he had been asked what that something was he could not, if he would, have told, for a man cannot explain that part of himself which he has never even tried to understand.

Before he had moved many paces from the door the lovely voice, no longer plaintive, but swelling to brilliant triumph, broke into the national anthem of Rhaetia—warlike, inspiring as the "Marseillaise," but wider, calling her sons to face death singing in the defense.

"She's an English girl, yet she sings our Rhaetian music as no Rhaetian woman I have ever heard can sing it," he told himself, slowly passing on to his own door. "She is a new type to me. I don't think there can be many like her. A pity that she is not a princess or else—that Leopold, the emperor, and Leo, the chamois hunter, are not two men. Still, the chamois hunter of Rhaetia would be no match for Miss Mowbray of London, so the weights would balance in the scales as unevenly as now."

He gave a sigh and a smile that lifted his eyebrows. Then he opened the door of his sitting room to forget among certain documents which urged the importance of an immediate return to duty the difference between Leopold and Leo, the difference between women and a woman.

"Goodby to our mountains tomorrow morning," he said to his three chosen companions. "Hey for work and Kronburg!"

She was going to Kronburg in a few days, according to Frau Yorvan. But Kronburg was not Allehelligen, and Leopold, the emperor, was not at his palace in the way of meeting tourists or even "explorers."

"She'll never know to whom she gave her ring," he thought, with the dense innocence of a man who has studied all books save women's looks. "And I'll never know who gives her a plain gold one for the finger on which she once wore this."

But in the next room, divided from him by a single wall, sat Princess Virginia of Baumenburg-Drippe.

"When we meet again at Kronburg he mustn't dream that I knew all the time," she was saying to herself. "That would spoil everything—just at first. Yet, oh, some day how I should love to confess all—all! Only I couldn't possibly confess except to a man who would excuse or perhaps even approve because he had learned to love me well. And what shall I do, how shall I bear my life now I've seen him, if that day should never come?"

CHAPTER SIX.

LETTERS of introduction for Lady Mowbray and her daughter to influential and interesting persons attached to the Rhaetian court were necessarily a part of the wonderful plan concocted in the English garden, though they were among the details thought out afterward.

The widow of the hereditary Grand Duke of Baumenburg-Drippe was reported in the journals of various countries to be traveling with the Princess Virginia and a small suit through Canada and the United States, and, fortunately for the success of the innocent plot, the grand duchess had spent so many years of seclusion in England and had even in her youth met so few Rhaetians that there was little fear of detection. Her objections to Virginia's scheme for winning a lover instead of thanking heaven quietly for a mere husband were based on other grounds, but Virginia had overcome them, and eventually the grand duchess had proved not only docile, but positively fertile in expedient.

The choosing of the borrowed flag under which to sail had at first been a difficulty. It was pointed out by a friend taken into their confidence, a lady whose husband had been ambassador to Rhaetia, that a real name and a name of some dignity must be adopted if proper introductions were to be given. And it was the grand duchess who suggested the name of Mowbray on the plea that she had in a way the right to annex it.

The mother of the late Duke of Northmoreland had been a Miss Mowbray, and there were still several eminently respectable, inconspicuous Mowbray cousins. Among these cousins was a certain Lady Mowbray, widow of a baron of that ilk and possessing a daughter some years older and innumerable degrees plainer than the Princess Virginia.

To this Lady Mowbray the grand duchess had gone out of her way to be kind in Germany long years ago, when she was a very grand personage indeed and Lady Mowbray comparatively a nobody. The humble connection had expressed herself as unspeakably grateful, and the two had kept up a friendship ever since. Therefore when the difficulty of realism in a name presented itself the grand duchess thought of Lady Mowbray and Miss Helen Mowbray. They were about to leave England for India, but had not yet left, and the widow of the baron was flattered as well as amused by the romantic confidence reposed in her by the widow of the grand duke. She was delighted to lend her name and her daughter's name, and who could blame the lady if her mind rushed forward to the time when she should have earned gratitude from the young empress of Rhaetia? For of course she had no doubt of the way in which the adventure would end.

As for the wife of the late British ambassador to the Rhaetian court, she was not sentimental and therefore was not quite as comfortably sure of the sequel. As far as concerned her own part in the plot, however, she felt safe enough, for, though she was after a fashion deceiving her old acquaintances at Kronburg, she was not foisting adventuresses upon them. On the contrary, she was giving them a chance of entertaining angels unawares by sending them letters to ladies who were in reality the Grand Duchess of Baumenburg-Drippe and the Princess Virginia.

The four mysterious gentlemen left Allehelligen the day after Virginia's encounter with the chamois hunter. But the Mowbrays lingered on. The adventure had begun so gloriously that the girl feared an anticlimax for the next step. Though she longed for the second meeting, she dreaded it as well and put off the chance of it from day to day. The stay of the Mowbrays at Allehelligen lengthened into a week, and when they left at last it was only just in time for the great festivities at Kronburg which were to celebrate the emperor's thirty-first birthday, an event enhanced in national importance by the fact that the eighth anniversary of his coronation would fall on the same date.

On the morning of the journey the grand duchess had neuralgia and was frankly cross.

"I don't see, after all, what you've accomplished so far by this mad freak which has dragged us across Europe," she said fretfully in the train which they had taken at a town twenty miles from Allehelligen. "We've perched on a mountain top, like the ark on Ararat, for a week, freezing. The adventure you had there is only a complication. What have we to show for our trouble—unless incipient rheumatism?"

Virginia had nothing to show for it, at least nothing that she meant to show, even to her mother, but in a little scented bag of silk which lay next her heart was folded a bit of blotting paper. If you looked at its reflection in a mirror you saw written twice over in a firm individual hand the name "Helen Mowbray."

The princess had found it on a table in the best sitting room after Frau Yorvan had made that room ready for its new occupants. Therefore she loved Allehelligen; therefore she thought with redoubled satisfaction of her visit there.

To learn her full name he must have thought it worth while to make inquiries. It had lingered in his thoughts or he would not have scrawled it twice on some bit of paper—since destroyed, no doubt—in a moment of idle dreaming.

Through most of her life Virginia had known the lack of money, but she would not have exchanged a thousand pounds for the contents of that little bag.

Hohenlangenwald is the name of the house from which the rulers of Rhaetia sprang. Therefore everything in the beautiful city of Kronburg which can take the name of Hohenlangenwald has taken it, and it was at the Hohenlangenwald hotel that a suit of rooms had been engaged for Lady Mowbray.

The travelers broke the long journey at Melinabad, and Virginia's study of trains had timed their arrival in Kronburg for the morning of the birthday eve, early enough for the first ceremony of the festivities, the unveiling by the emperor of a statue of Rhaetia in the Leopoldplatz, directly in front of the Hohenlangenwald hotel.

Virginia looked forward to seeing the emperor from her own windows, as, according to her calculation, there was an hour to spare, but at the station they were told by the driver of the carriage sent to meet them that, the crowd in the streets being already very great, he feared it would be a tedious undertaking to get through. Some of the thoroughfares were closed for traffic. He would have to go by a roundabout way and in any case could not reach the main entrance of the hotel. At best he would have to deposit his passengers and their luggage at a side entrance in a narrow street.

As the carriage started, from far away came a burst of martial music—a military band playing the national air which the chamois hunter had heard a girl sing behind a closed door at Allehelligen.

The shops were all shut, would be shut until the day after tomorrow, but their windows were unshuttered and gayly decorated to add to the brightness of the scene. Strange old shops displayed the marvelous chased silver, the jeweled weapons and gorgeous embroideries from the far eastern provinces of Rhaetia. Splendid new shops rivaled the best of the Rue de la Paix in Paris. Gray mediaeval buildings made wonderful backgrounds for drapery of crimson and blue and garlands of blazing flowers. Modern buildings of purple red porphyry and the famous honey yellow marble of Rhaetia fluttered with flags, and above all, in the heart of the town, between old and new, rose the Castle Rock. Virginia's pulses beat as she saw the home of Leopold for the first time, and she was proud of its picturesqueness, its riches and grandeur, as if she had some right in it too.

Ancient narrow streets and wide new streets were alike arbors of evergreen and brilliant blossoms. Prosperous citizens in their best, inhabitants of the poorer quarters and stalwart peasants from the country elbowed and pushed each other good naturedly as they streamed toward the Leopoldplatz. Handsome people they were, the girl thought, her heart warming to them and to her it seemed that the very air tingled with expectation. She believed that she could feel the magnetic thrill in it even if she were blind and deaf and could hear or see nothing of the excitement.

"We must be in time! We shall be in time!" she said to herself. "I shall lean out from my windows and see him."

But at the hotel, which they did finally reach, the girl had to bear a keen disappointment. With many apologies the landlord explained that he had done his very best for Lady Mowbray's party when he received their letter a fortnight before and that he had allotted them a good suit, with balconies overlooking the river at the back of the house—quite a Venetian effect, as her ladyship would find. But as to rooms at the front—impossible! All had been engaged fully six weeks in advance. One American millionaire was paying a thousand gulden solely for an hour's use of a small balcony, today for the unveiling and again tomorrow for the street procession. Virginia was pale with disappointment. "Then I'll go down into the crowd and take my chance of seeing something," she said to her mother when they had been shown into handsome rooms satisfactory in everything but situation. "I must hurry or there'll be no hope."

"My dear child, impossible for you to do such a thing!" exclaimed the grand duchess. "I can't think of allowing it. Fancy what a crush there will be—all sorts of creatures trampling on each other for places. Besides, you could see nothing."

"Oh, mother," pleaded the princess in her softest, sweetest voice, the voice she kept for extreme emergencies of cajoling, "I couldn't bear to stay shut up here while that music plays and the crowds shout themselves hoarse for my emperor. Besides, it's the most curious thing—I feel as if a voice kept calling to me that I must be there. Miss Portman and I'll take care of each other. You will let me go, won't you?"

Of course the grand duchess yielded, her one stipulation being that the two should keep close to the hotel, and the princess urged her reluctant companion away without waiting to hear her mother's last counsels.

Their rooms were on the first floor, and the girl turned eagerly down the broad flight of marble stairs, Miss Portman following dutifully upon her heels.

They could not get out by way of the front door, for people had paid for standing room there and would not yield an inch, even for an instant, while the two or three steps below and the broad pavement in front were as closely blocked.

Matters began to look hopeless, but Virginia would not be daunted. They tried the side entrance and found it free, the street into which it led being comparatively empty, but just beyond, where it ran into the great open square of the Leopoldplatz, there was a solid wall of sightseers.

"We might as well go back," said Miss Portman, who had none of the princess' keenness for the undertaking. She was tired after the journey and for herself would rather have had a cup of tea than see fifty emperors unveil as many statues by celebrated sculptors.

"Oh, no!" cried Virginia. "We'll get to the front somehow sooner or later, even if we're taken off our feet. Look at that man just ahead of us. He doesn't mean to turn back. He's not a nice man, but he's terribly determined. Let's keep close to him and see what he means to do; then maybe we shall be able to do it as well."

Miss Portman glanced at the person indicated by a nod of the princess' head. Undismayed by the mass of human beings that blocked the Leopoldplatz a few yards ahead, he walked rapidly along without the least hesitation. He had the air of knowing exactly what he wanted to do and how to do it. Even Miss Portman, who had no imagination, saw this by his back. The set of the head on the shoulders was singularly determined, and the walk revealed a consciousness of importance accounted for perhaps by the gray and crimson uniform which might be that of some official order. On the sleek black head was a large cocked hat, adorned with an eagle's feather, fastened in place by a gaudy jewel, and this hat was pulled down very far over the face.

"Perhaps he knows that they'll let him through," said Miss Portman. "He seems to be a dignitary of some sort. We can't do better, if you're determined to go on, than keep near him."

"He has the air of being ready to die," whispered Virginia, for they were close to the man now.

"How can you tell? We haven't seen his face," replied the other in the same cautious tone.

"No. But look at the back of his neck and his ears."

Miss Portman looked and gave a little shiver. She would never have thought of observing it if her attention had not been called by the princess. But it was true. The back of the man's neck and his ears were of a ghastly yellow white.

"Horrid!" she ejaculated. "He's probably dying of some contagious disease. Do let's get away from him."

"No, no," said Virginia. "He's our only hope. They're going to let him pass through. Listen."

Miss Portman listened, but as she understood only such words of Rhaetian as she had picked up in the last few weeks she could merely surmise that he was ordering the crowd out of his way because he had a special message from the lord chancellor to the burgomaster.

The human wall opened. The man darted through, and Miss Portman was dragged after him by the princess. So close to him had they kept that they might easily be supposed to be under his escort, and, in any case, they passed before there was time to dispute their right of way.

"It must be the secretary of Herr Koffman, the new burgomaster," Virginia heard one man say to another, "and those ladies are with him."

On and on through the crowd passed the man in gray and crimson, oblivious to the two women who were using him. There was something about that disagreeable back of his which proclaimed him a man of but one idea at a time. Close to the front line of spectators, however, there came a check.

"We can't do better."

People were vexed at the audacity of the girl and the elderly woman and would have pushed them back, but at the critical second the blue and silver uniformed band of Rhaetia's crack regiment, the Imperial Life guards, struck up an air which told that the emperor was coming. Promptly the small group concerned forgot its grievance in excitement, crowding together so that Virginia was pressed to the front, and only Miss Portman was pushed ruthlessly into the background.

The poor lady raised a feeble protest in English which nobody heeded unless it were the man who had inadvertently acted as pioneer. At her shrill outburst he turned quickly, as if startled by the sudden cry, and Virginia was so close to him that her chin almost touched his shoulder. For the first time she had a glimpse of his face, which matched the yellow wax of his neck in pallor.

The girl shrank away from him involuntarily. "What a death's head," she thought—"a sly, wicked face and awful eyes! He looked frightened. I wonder why."

Assured that the sharp cry did not concern him, the man turned to the front again, and, having obtained his object—a place in the foremost rank of the crowd, with one incidentally for the princess—he proceeded to take from his breast a roll of parchment tied with narrow ribbon and sealed with a large red seal. As he drew it out and rearranged his coat his hand trembled. It, too, was yellow white. The fellow seemed to have no blood in him.

Virginia, standing now shoulder to shoulder with the man in gray and crimson, had just time to feel a stirring of dislike and perhaps curiosity when a great cheer arose from thousands of throats. The square rang with a roar of loyal acclamation. Men waved tall hats, soft hats and green peasant hats with feathers. Beautifully dressed women grouped on the high decorated balconies waved handkerchiefs or scattered roses from gilded baskets. Women in gorgeous costumes from faroff provinces held up half frightened, half laughing children, and then a white figure on a white charger came riding into the square under the triumphal arch wreathed with flags and flowers.

Under the glittering helmet of steel, with its gold eagle, the dark face was clear cut as a cameo, and the eyes were bright with a proud light. To the crowd he was the emperor, a fine, popular, brilliant young man, who ruled his country better than it had been ruled yet by one of his house and, above all, provided many a pleasing spectacle for the people, but to Virginia he was far more—an ideal Sir Galahad or a St. George strong and brave to slay all dragon wrongs which might threaten his wide land.

"What if he should never love me?" was the one sharp thought which pierced her pride of him.

The people were proud, too, as he sat there controlling the white war horse, with its gold and silver trappings, the crusted jewels of many orders sparkling on his breast, while he saluted his subjects in his soldier's way.

For a moment there was a pause, save for a shouting, which rose and rose again. Then he alighted, whereupon important looking men with ribbons and decorations came forward, bowing, to receive the emperor. The ceremony of unveiling the statue of Rhaetia was about to begin.

To reach the great crimson draped platform on which he was to stand the emperor must pass within a few yards of Virginia. His gaze flashed over the gay crowd. What if it should rest upon her? The girl's heart was in her throat. She could feel it beating there, and for a moment the tall white figure was lost in a mist which dimmed her eyes.

She had forgotten how she came to this place of vantage, forgotten the pale man in gray and red to whom she owed her good fortune, but suddenly, while her heart was at its loudest and the mist before her eyes at its thickest, she grew conscious again of his existence, poignantly conscious of his close presence. So near her he stood that a quick start, a gathering of his muscles for a spring, shot like an electric message through her own body.

The mist was burnt up in the flame of a strange enlightenment, a clarity of vision which showed not only the hero of the day, the throng and the wax white man beside her, but something which was in the soul of that man as well.

"He is going to kill the emperor!"

It was as if a voice spoke the words in her ear. She knew now why she had struggled to win this place, why she had succeeded, what she had to do or die in failing to do.

Leopold was not half a dozen yards away and was coming nearer. No one but Virginia suspected evil. She alone had felt the thrill of a murderer's nerves, the tense spring of his muscles. She alone guessed what the roll of parchment hid.

"Now—now!" the voice seemed to whisper again, and she had no fear.

While the crowd shouted wildly for "Unser Leo!" a man in gray and red leaped, catlike, at the white figure that advanced. Something sharp and bright flashed out from a roll of parchment, catching the sun in a streak of steely light.

Leopold saw, but not in time to swerve. The crowd shrieked, rushed forward too late, and the blade would have drunk his life had not the girl who had felt all, seen all, struck up the arm before it fell.

The rest was darkness for her. She knew only that she was sobbing and that the great square, with its crowded balconies, its ropes of green, its waving flags, seemed to collapse upon her and blot her out.

It was Leopold who caught her as she swayed, and while the people surged around the thwarted murderer the emperor sprang up the steps of the great crimson platform with the girl against his heart.

It was her blood that stained the pure white of his uniform, the blood from her arm, wounded in his defense. And, holding her up, he stood dominating the crowd.

Down there at the foot of the steps the man in gray and red was like a spent fox among the hounds, and Leopold's people in the fury of their rage would have torn him in pieces as the hounds tear the fox despite the cordon of police that gathered round him, but the voice of the emperor bade his subjects fall back.

"My people shall not be assassins!" he cried to them. "Let the law deal with the madman. It is my will. Look at me alive and unhurt. Now give your cheers for the lady who has saved my life, and the ceremonies shall go on."

Three cheers had he said? They gave three times three and bade fair to split the skies with shouts for the emperor. While women laughed and wept and all eyes were upon that noble pair on the red platform something limp and gray was hurried out of sight and off to prison. On a signal the national anthem began. The voices of the people joined the brass instruments. All Kronburg was singing or asking "Who is she?" of the girl at the emperor's side.

CHAPTER SEVEN

IT is those in the thick of battle who can afterward tell least about it, and to the princess those five minutes'—moments the most tremendous, the most vital of her life—were afterward in memory like a dream.

She had seen that a man was ghastly pale; she had caught a gleam of fear in his eye; she had felt a tigerish quiver run through his frame as the crowd pressed him against her. Instinct—and love—had told her the rest and taught her how to act.

Vaguely she recalled later that she had thrown herself forward and struck up the knife. An impression of that knife as the light gleamed on it along was clear. Sickening, she had thought of the dull sound it would make in falling, of the blood that would spout from a rent in the white coat among the jeweled orders. She had thought, as one thinks in dying, of existence in a world empty of Leopold, and she had known that unless he could be saved her one wish was to go out of the world with him.

More than this she had not thought or known. What she did was done scarcely by her own volition, and she seemed to wake with a start at last, to hear herself sobbing and to feel the throb, throb, of a hot pain in her arm.

A hundred hands—not quick enough to save, yet quick enough to follow the lead given by her—had fought to seize the man in gray and stop a second blow. They had borne him away, while, as for Virginia, her work done, she forgot everything and every one but Leopold.

Reviving, she had heard him speak to the crowd and told herself dreamily that were she dying his voice could bring her back if he called. She even listened to each word that rang out like a cathedral bell above the babel. Still he held her, and when the cheers came she scarcely understood that they were for her as well as for Leopold, the emperor. Afterward, the necessity for public action over, he bent his head close enough to whisper. "Thank you," and then for Virginia every syllable was clear.

"You are the bravest woman alive," he said. "I had to keep them from killing the ruffian, but now I can speak to you alone. I thank you for what you did with my whole heart, and I pray heaven you're not seriously hurt."

"No, not hurt and very happy," the princess answered, hardly knowing what she said. She felt like a soul released from its body, floating in blue ether. What could it matter if that body ached or bled? Leopold was safe, and she had saved him.

He pointed to her sleeve. "The knife struck you. Your arm's bleeding, and the wound must be seen immediately by my own surgeon. Would that I could go with you myself, but duty keeps me here. You understand that. Baron von Lyndal and his wife will at once take you home, wherever you may be staying. They"—

"But I would rather stop and see the rest," said Virginia. "I'm quite well now, not even weak, and I can go down to my friend"—

"If you're able to stop, it must be here with me," answered Leopold. "After the service you have done for me and for the country it is your place."

The ladies of the court, who, with their husbands, had been waiting to congratulate Leopold, crowded round the girl as the emperor turned to them with a look and gesture of invitation. A seat was given her, and the arm in its blood stained sleeve was hastily bound up. She was the heroine of the day, dividing honors with its hero.

There was scarcely a grande dame

"Let the law deal with the madman."

among the brilliant assemblage on the emperor's platform to whom Lady Mowbray and her daughter had not a letter of introduction from their invaluable friend. But no one knew at this moment of any title to their recognition possessed by the girl other than the right she had earned by her splendid deed. All smiled on her through grateful tears, though there were some who would have given their ten fingers to have stepped into her place.

Thus Virginia sat through the ceremonies, careless that thousands of eyes were on her face, thinking only of one pair of eyes, which spared a glance for her now and then, hardly seeing the statue of Rhaetia, whose glorious marble womanhood unveiled roused a storm of enthusiasm from the crowd, hearing only the short, stirring speech made by Leopold.

When everything was over and the people had no excuse to linger save to see the emperor ride away and the great personages disperse, Leopold turned again to Virginia.

All the world was listening, of course; all the world was watching, too, and, no matter what his inclination might have been, his words could be but few.

Once more he thanked and praised her for her courage, her presence of mind; thanked her for remaining as if she had been granting a favor to him and asked her where she was staying in Kronburg, as he promised himself the honor of sending to inquire for her health that evening.

His desire would be to call at once in person, he added; but, owing to the programme arranged for this day and several days to follow, not only each hour, but each moment, would be officially occupied. These birthday festivities were troublesome, but duty must be done, and then, Leopold repeated, when he had Miss Mowbray's name and address, the court surgeon and physician would be commanded to attend upon her without delay.

With these words and a chivalrous courtesy at parting, the emperor was gone, Baron von Lyndal, grand master of ceremonies, and his baroness having been told off to take care of Miss Mowbray.

In another mood it would have pricked Virginia's sense of humor to see Baroness von Lyndal's almost shocked surprise at discovering her to be the daughter of that Lady Mowbray whom she was asked to meet. Luckily all the letters of introduction had reached their destinations, it merely remaining, according to the etiquette in Rhaetia, for Lady Mowbray to announce her arrival in Kronburg by sending cards to the recipients. But Virginia had no heart for laughter now.

She had been on the point of forgetting until reminded by a dig from the spur of necessity that she was only a masquerader acting her borrowed part in a pageant. For the first time since she had hopefully taken it up that part became detestable. She would have given almost anything to throw it off and be herself, for nothing less than clear sincerity seemed worthy of this day and the event which crowned it.

Nevertheless, in the vulgar language of proverb which no well brought up princess should ever stoop to use, she had made her own bed, and she must lie in it. It would not do for her suddenly to give out to the world of Kronburg that she was not, after all, Miss Mowbray, but Princess Virginia of Baumenburg-Drippe. That would not be fair to the grand duchess, who had yielded to her wishes, nor fair to her own plans. Above all, it would not be fair to the emperor, handicapped as he now was by a debt of gratitude. No; Miss Mowbray she was, and Miss Mowbray she must for the present remain.

Naturally the grand duchess fainted when her daughter was brought back

with ominous red stains upon the gray background of her traveling dress. But the wound was neither deep nor dangerous. The court surgeon was as consoling as he was complimentary, and by the time that messengers from the palace had arrived with inquiries from the emperor and invitations to the emperor's ball the mother of the heroine could dispense with her sal volatile.

She had fortunately much to think of. There was the important question of dress for the ball tomorrow night; there was the still more pressing question of the newspapers, which must not be allowed to publish the borrowed name of Mowbray lest complications should arise, and there were the questions to be asked of Virginia: How had she felt? How had she dared? How had the emperor looked, and what had the emperor said?

If it had been natural for the grand duchess to faint it was equally natural that she should not faint twice. She began to believe, after all, that Providence smiled upon Virginia and her adventure, and she wondered whether the princess' white satin embroidered with seed pearls or the silver spangled blue tulle would be more becoming to wear to the ball.

JIMMY'S OPPORTUNITY.

A Very Important Conversation That Settled Matters.

By HARRIET LUMMIS SMITH.
[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Jimmy Fitzgerald was downcast. Everybody was against him, he told himself, and in that sweeping generalization he included even Carroll. For if it had not been for Carroll's connivance, her tame submission to the maneuvers of interfering relatives, the words which had trembled on his lips for three dragging months would have been spoken long ago.

From the standpoint of a disinterested spectator Jimmy was ready to admire the cleverness which so far had circumvented him. "Good team work," he denominated it. The ingenious air with which Grandmother Reynolds would appear to claim Carroll's assistance in regard to a dropped stitch in her knitting just when Jimmy was bringing matters to a climax and Carroll was turning a most becoming pink was only equaled by the childlike innocence with which Carroll's small brother would rush bawling into the library with a bloody handkerchief held to his nose, interrupting an eloquent outbreak beginning "Since the first hour I saw you"—

In Jimmy's estimation this was all the harder to bear because he was so perfectly eligible. Character and prospects alike were beyond question. The most serious accusation that could be brought against the match was that both of them were young. Carroll's sister, Marie, was of the opinion that an engagement would be absurd, and Jimmy thought he knew why. If George Freeman, Marie's latest admirer, had been as eager to propose as Jimmy was, the latter young man felt positive that no obstacles would be put in his way.

With a duplicity foreign to his usually frank nature, Jimmy lost no opportunity of expressing to Freeman the admiration with which Marie inspired him. If the older sister were once engaged or, better still, married, Jimmy believed there would be hope for him.

Meanwhile the family opposition showed itself in a system of espionage which kept Jimmy's great avowal unspoken. If he suggested a walk, either Mrs. Reynolds declared that Carroll's cold would not permit her to venture out or Marie invited herself to accompany them; if the theater, a chaperon was necessary. Whole souled co-operation on Carroll's part would have relieved the situation, but the girl knew so well what Jimmy wanted that her modesty shrank from giving him anything but the most negative assistance. Accordingly Jimmy decided that she, too, was against him and gave himself up to thoughts of unutterable gloom.

He called one afternoon wearing an expression of grim determination which, if he had known it, put the conspirators on their guard. He was ushered into the family living room, and Mrs. Reynolds entertained him till Carroll came down. Jimmy made a few inane comments on the weather, his eyes devouring the pretty girlish figure seated demurely in the opposite corner.

"It's too fine a day for the house," said Jimmy. "Suppose we take a little walk."

"Really, Carroll, dear," said Mrs Reynolds before Carroll could reply, "it won't do for you to leave the house. Mrs. Baker is likely to want you any moment. We have a dressmaker here, Mr. Fitzgerald," she continued, turning to Jimmy with her most charming smile.

"Can't we sit on the piazza?" suggested Jimmy. Carroll agreed to the suggestion. But, as it proved, her small brother, Bob, was in possession of the hammock, and he remained for two hours, enlivening the occasion by describing the exploits of the ball team.

An ear splitting whistle in the rear of the house relieved them at length of Bob's company. Without delay Jimmy plunged into the subject uppermost in his mind.

"Carroll, there's something I want to say to you"—

"Carroll, Mrs. Baker is ready for you," said Marie's voice behind the parlor shutters. That she had been waiting there, biding her time, Jimmy could not doubt. Then the gate clicked, and Mr. Reynolds came up the walk. He settled himself in the chair Carroll had vacated, and he and Jimmy talked politics till dinner time.

The young man refused an invitation to remain to dinner. He went away with a lowering brow and a heavy heart. But at half past 9 that evening the telephone bell rang, interrupting a game of bridge going on in the den. Carroll, who was nearest to the insistent instrument, pushed back her chair and went to answer the summons.

"Hello—hello! Oh, yes, this is Carroll." She turned a pretty, flushed face toward the three at the card table. "Please don't talk for a minute. I can't hear."

The next minute she heard very distinctly, for the room had become absolutely still, and the voice at the other end of the wire was clear and penetrating.

"This is Jimmy, Carroll. There's something I've been trying to say to you for three months. And I'm going to say it now."

"Why, I don't see"—

"Well, it doesn't matter whether you see or not. Just listen. Ever since I met you on Phil Reynolds' yacht a year ago I've loved you—from the very first hour."

"Oh, hush!"

"I'm not going to hush. I think about you every minute while I'm awake. Also dream about you when I'm asleep. I'm not any good any more, and I shan't be till I find out whether you care for me or not. And if you don't I'm going to the Philippines or somewhere."

"Don't talk so loud."

"I don't care who hears me. I've kept it to myself just as long as I can. Carroll, darling, can't you care for me a little?"

"Sh! Come tomorrow."

"I'll come tomorrow fast enough if you tell me what I want to hear. Haven't I been coming day after day for months without getting a chance to tell you that I love the very ground you walk on? And now I've got it I'm going to wait till you say yes or no. If you can't love me I might as well"—

Abruptly the voice ceased. Carroll waited expectantly. Then a terrible suspicion flashed through her mind which in a moment had becomes a certainty. Tremulously she accused the operator, "You've cut me off."

"What number do you want?" replied that young woman.

"Oh, I don't know. I haven't any idea. Oh, why did you cut me off just then?"

The trio at the card table were staring at her strangely. "How absurdly you are acting, Carroll," exclaimed Marie sharply. "Come and finish the game."

"Yes, come and finish the game, Carroll," said her father. "The other matter can be settled another time, I hope."

"We've got 'em on the run, Miss Carroll," chuckled George Freeman, who happened to be Carroll's partner.

Slowly the girl moved toward her place. What would Jimmy think? Perhaps he would believe that she had deliberately hung up the receiver, preferring this way of giving him his answer. And he had spoken of the Philippines. She grew a little dizzy and groped for her chair.

Just at that moment the telephone rang again, and Carroll bounded toward it, her agility in surprising contrast to her late uncertainty and feebleness.

"Hello! Hello!"

"Hello, Jimmy. I will. I mean I do."

A long pause. "I suppose it's too late for me to come up this evening," suggested Jimmy tentatively.

"Of course not. Only hurry." She hung up the receiver and turned a radiant face. Again Marie looked suspicious.

"That must have been a very important conversation," she said scathingly. "I hope it's settled now."

Carroll answered her with a dignity in which there was no suggestion of the downtrodden younger sister.

"It is," she replied. "Jimmy and I are engaged."

His Rivals.

In Turkey it often happens that marriages are arranged affairs—arranged by the parents of the man and the woman. Such was the case, says Demetra Vaka in Haremlik, with Halil Bey and his bride. They had never seen each other, and at first it did not look as if the match would be a good one, since the lady was buried deep in German philosophies, in which the gentleman had little interest.

By the time I had parted from Halil Bey's fiancee I was so filled up with high ideals that I kept thinking, "Poor Halil Bey!"

The next morning I found Halil Bey in the garden, very impatient to hear all about his fiancee.

"Tell me," he cried out as soon as we had shaken hands, "is she beautiful?"

"Very," I answered, "but, my poor boy, she is crazy over Kant and Schopenhauer."

"Who are they?" he bellowed, thunder in his voice and fire in his eyes. "Tell me quick, and I will draw every drop of blood from their veins."

"I have no doubt," I said, "that in a fist to fist encounter you would have the best of them, but they are both dead and gone, and only their miserable books are left to fight against."

"Oh," he laughed, "is that all? I think I can take care of that."

As events turned out, he did.

The Restful Life.

"We must live rhythmically if we would live healthfully," writes Grace Dawson in "How to Rest and Be Rested." "To live rhythmically we must not always strain tense nerves and muscles. We must learn to relax, that we may know how to economize our nervous and muscular power, so that some part of us will always be resting while another is at work. This is living by the law of rhythm. It is the secret of working tirelessly, resting restfully, resisting disease, throwing off morbid feelings, of living healthfully and feeling zest and enjoyment in our lives."

We are living unrhythmically "when we lie awake in the night with harassed, with anxious, worrying thoughts; when we rush to the station in great anxiety and reach it in such good time that we catch the train before the one we went for; whenever we get a feeling of being 'rushed' or 'driven' or 'tied to time.'"

Seaweed For Vegetables.

The Earl of Orford, who recently celebrated his 55th birthday, had an experience during his boyhood days which he would scarcely like repeated. He joined the navy as a middy, and at 14 he was shipwrecked in the trooper Majera, and spent three terrible months with his comrades on a desolate island, living on sea-fowls' eggs and seaweed, and such vegetation as the place afforded.

Pears' Shopkeeping Ancestors.

The family fortunes of the Marquess of Ripon and the Dukes of Northumberland had a common source. The Robinsons were successful haberdashers in the City of London, and when they had made a handsome competency they sold the business to a family named Smithson, whose descendant and representative, the fine artistocratic-looking Sir Hugh Smithson, married the heiress of the Percys, Lady Elizabeth Seymour, and assumed the surname of Percy in lieu of his own more plebeian patronymic, and was eventually created Duke of Northumberland.

New Lake Vessels.

A further consignment of new ships for trade on the Canadian lakes is shortly expected in the Dominion from England. One of the boats that are being built by a Dundee firm is to be on the same lines as the Kinmount of the Montreal Transportation Co. The Mapleton has been built for the Merchants' Mutual Line, and has already left for Canada in charge of Mr. A. E. Matthews. The Canadian lake trade has increased to such dimensions during the past two years that it has been found necessary to provide facilities for shipment and transport on a much larger scale.

State Lines.

A forestry list credits California with 125 different species of trees.

New Jersey gets $8,000,000 a year from its oyster beds, but could get $40,000,000 from the same source if the available tide land was properly seeded and cultivated.

New York state has taken a practical way of encouraging forestry. During the past planting season more than 1,000,000 seedlings were distributed at cost throughout the state for planting.

Church Work.

More than 200 organized Methodist Episcopal churches are located in the city of Chicago.

In 1794 there was one Baptist in this country to each ninety-four of population where now the proportion is one to seventeen.

PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR

Builder of the Great Wall of China.

To superstitious notions Chin added the lust of luxury, his life being a blaze of oriental magnificence. He built a wonderful palace, which has been described in the Imperial History as having certain gorgeous annexes attached at intervals, the whole extending over a distance of a hundred miles. In consequence of his life of luxury perhaps he became more and more a prey to superstition, and it may be that because of this he completed the Great wall. At any rate, history records that he was informed by prophecy that in time he would be overwhelmed and destroyed by outside enemies. So he mobilized an army of 300,000 men to work on the Great wall and if necessary to fight in its behalf. Chin's design evidently was to inclose his massive empire in a rampart which should have the shape of a horseshoe, with the heel calks at the ocean shore. He did not plan to parallel the coast with a wall, doubtless considering that seaside an ample protection to a country vast and densely populated. The wall is not for modern use. It is an ancient fossil, the largest fossil on the earth. But fossils are useful and truthful. It is a dividing line between two civilizations and between two eras. In space it cut off the herdsmen of the north from the tillers of the south.—William Edgar Geil in Harper's.

Why She Was Glad.

A young Louisville man who was out west not long ago has returned, telling a yarn which he admits is not at his own expense, but which he declares to be about one of the most interesting experiences of even his checkered career.

"I was walking along the street in a western town," he said, "when suddenly across the way I saw a Louisville girl whom I recognized immediately. She saw me, too, and I expected her to bow rather coolly and distantly, as had been her wont back home. I was considerably astonished, therefore, when she dashed across the street, seized me with both hands and fairly bubbled over in her delight. I was so surprised, in fact, that I commented on it.

"'I'm glad to see you, too,' I said when I had managed to extricate myself from her exuberant greeting 'but, to tell you the truth, I hadn't expected to see you so excited over my appearance. You always treated me rather a la iceberg at home, you know. What has caused your change o heart?'

"She was nonplused for only a moment and then explained. 'Mr. Smith I've been away from home so long that I'd be glad to see even a dog i he came from Kentucky.'

"I let it go at that."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Notoriety Seeker.

Time Saved.

"This," began the agent, "is a great time saving device"—

"You've come to the wrong house," interrupted the snappy woman at the door. "Try that woman next door."

"Ah! You think it would interest her?"

"Wouldn't be surprised. She's a crank on saving time. To my certain knowledge she was twenty-five years old ten years ago, but she's been so saving of her time that she claims to be only twenty-seven now."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Lopped It Off.

Towne—Has he sent you a check for your services? Browne—Yes, but it isn't for the amount I expected, although I sent him a bill. Towne—Your writing's bad. Maybe he didn't decipher the amount. Browne—I'm afraid he did de-cipher it. I wrote $100 very plainly, and he sent $10.

The Tempter.

"Yes, sir, I belongs to de army of de unemployed."

"Want a week's work?"

"No. I couldn't desert from de army."

"Then just pretend you're on a furlough."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Point of View.

"You sang off the key!" exclaimed the musical director reproachfully.

"Sir!" replied the young but haughty soprano. "What you mean to say is that your orchestra occasionally failed to harmonize with my voice."—Exchange.

Good Tree, Poor Crop.

"I suppose you know of my family tree?" said Baron Fucash.

"Yep," answered Mr. Cumrox. "It may have been a good tree, all right, but it looks to me as if the crop was a failure."—Washington Star.

An Exquisite Evening Wrap

This gorgeous coat is as beautiful and decorative as it is useless so far as protection against cold is concerned.

It is made of heavy, coarse silk net, braided with white silk cord in intricate and elaborate design. It falls straight and full from the shoulders, and to add to the quantity of material used it has angel sleeves.

And its cost? That must be an extravagant sum. Even if one were to make it one's self, its cost would still be beyond the average woman's purse.

But then we're glad some of us can wear such a coat, and the photograph may give those of us who have thinner purses an idea or two for an evening coat for ourselves. It could be developed in less expensive material, you know.

THE MAN WHO GIVES UP HIS SEAT

A Little Masculine Protest Against Feminine Manners.

"I use my judgment in giving my seat to a woman in the cars," said a Harlemite the other day. "I put common sense ahead of cheap gallantry on parade," he went on in order to square himself at the start. "Inconsiderate women and ill-mannered men should be treated alike, they should not be encouraged.

"Women crowd into overcrowded cars regardless of the discomfort they cause to those already aboard, and, knowing they will get a seat, somehow, no matter how many get stepped on or lose their balance in making way. Why should these women not wait for a car that is not crowded? Moving on is not a matter of life and death either to them or the hoggish men who jam themselves into the first car that comes along. Usually an unfilled car is right behind, and, if not that, why, then, the next. At most the wait is only a few minutes.

"The woman who gets a man's seat may be going only a few blocks, most frequently she is, and there she hops off lightly, not thinking, or probably not caring, that the man who gave her his seat is going to the end of the line, and that he has lost out now and will probably stand up all the way.

"I say this is a question of common sense, not one of parlour manners. In nine cases out of ten the surrender of a seat in an overcrowded car is wrong, not only because of the inconvenience it causes in excess of the benefit bestowed, but because it makes women thoughtless of the right way and makes them forget what is good road manners, due from both men and women."

A FOOL THERE WAS---

A fool there was, and he made his prayer—
(Even as you and I)
To a rag and a bone and a hank of hair—
We called her the woman who did not care
But the fool he called her his lady fair—
(Even as you and I)

Oh, the years we waste and the tears we waste—
And the work of our head and hand
Belong to the woman who did not know—
And now we know that she never could know—
And did not understand.

Oft quoted, of course, these verses of Kipling, but never so aptly as in this case of young Ortis Hamilton, former Adjutant-General of Oregon, clever, only thirty-six years old, with a national reputation, a charming wife and two dainty children, and Florence Moore, a woman of many years pasts, vital, of a striking animal beauty and—the real vampire of the poem.

Not long ago Ortis Hamilton had everything almost a man could wish for. Now he is in disgrace, his honours torn from him, a shortage of $100,000 in his accounts, his home gone, his wife and children gone, too. All of it—honour and trust and everything—has been transmuted into gems and gold for Mrs. Moore.

And the woman laughs!

There never was a brighter future than that which seemed to be in store for Ortis Hamilton, when some eight years later he became Adjutant-General of the State's National Guard and went to Washington to look after the funds of the citizen soldiery of the State. He came from one of the best families of the West—the Colfaxes, and a high career was predicted for him.

"The squarest man in the State," they said of him. "And one of the brightest," they added.

Suddenly there came to Washington Florence Moore. She was the reverse of everything Mrs. Hamilton was. For the latter's delicate beauty, Florence Moore had a highly coloured, animal attractiveness. As "Nora Hamilton" she had stirred the city of Arleta, in Oregon, until forced from it. Her father had been an old-time partner of former State Treasurer Carlile, but the money he had left her at his death was soon spent, and "Jim" Moore, as she was known, set out to make her way alone.

Ortis Hamilton was the last man in the West that friends would have expected to fall into the toils, yet fall he did, at the first beck of Mrs. Moore's finger.

It then began to dawn upon the officers of the Oregon National Guard that their leader had changed indeed! His own private resources were not enough, it was known, to provide Mrs. Moore with the things she had. Checks and money orders came to her daily, and she would ride about to the stores flaunting bank notes of large denominations. An investigation was begun. It showed that the Guard's accounts had been tampered with greatly. In ever increasing amount the shortages were unearthed. Ortis Hamilton was discharged from his office, his epaulettes torn from him and he himself placed under arrest.

"The woman got it all," said his brother officers, and sent to find her.

It was easy enough. Mrs. Moore did not hide. In the face of all the check stubs and other papers showing she had received the money, she denied it and laughed.

"Oh, I guess his family will get him out," she said.

She seemed to enjoy the situation greatly.

Hamilton will have his trial in October. In the meantime he is in a cell. The fool was stripped of his foolish hide—
(Even as you and I)
Which she might have seen when she threw him aside—
But it isn't on record the lady tried So some of him lived but the most of him died—
(Even as you and I)

GENERALLY SPEAKING

The business and professional men of Peterborough cannot be accused of a too generous encouragement of athletic sports, although the munificence of Mrs. Nicholls and the public spiritedness of the owners of Riverside Park have given the public access to two splendid recreation fields. Two or three gentlemen have presented Challenge Cups for sports, but with these few shining exceptions what has the Peterborough public ever done towards fostering athletics in Peterborough? The moral and material encouragement which are both embodied in attendance at games, help ever so much towards quickening the enthusiasm of athletes. Even at the baseball matches, avowedly the popular Canadian pastime, neither the field nor the grandstand have ever been inconveniently crowded. There are certain people who have conscientious objections to sport. They cling to the Puritanical idea that it is a sin to be happy themselves, or to help others to be happy. There may be one or two of this genus in this city, but it seems to us that it is really a case of "stark insensibility" on the part of the older members of the population. They are so immersed in their own affairs that they will not spare the time to attend games of any description. This is not as it should be. Looked at from a material standpoint, athletic sports advertise a place quite as much as its industries do, and they are really quite as essential to its welfare. Looked at from a moral standpoint, they are one of the greatest agencies for inculcating spirit of fair play and engendering manly ideas in youthful minds that can possibly be conceived.

The longer one looks at the action of the Provincial Legislature in granting the school books contract to the T. Eaton Company, the more undignified it appears. It is almost inconceivable that a Ministry of an important province, or of any province, could so surrender itself to the voice of the charmer as to enter into such a puerile undertaking. If the T. Eaton Co. had been a publishing firm, pure and simple, engaged in a straightforward contest against other publishing firms, there would have been little dissatisfaction with the award. But there is room for protest, and very grave protest, against the use the Company is making of its contract in the way of using the books as a scheme for advertising its commodities, at the expense of the public. The books belong to the Ontario Government. They are paid for by the Government, and ipso facto cease to be the property of the T Eaton Co. Why should they be allowed to use them as advertising mediums? There is a term known to literary men as "sinking in poetry." This transaction seems to us to be a case of sinking in statesmanship, to which a remark once made by a friend of ours, on the occasion of a wife deserting her husband, seems to be very applicable: "Yes, sirree," he remarked, with tremendous energy, "it's scanderlous! downright disgustin'! in fact, it's—it's perfectly redicklus!"

* * * *

It is encouraging to note that there are fewer attempts nowadays on the part of the churches to raise money by extraneous methods in order to supply their financial needs. We all know that the Pie Social, the Picnic, the Bazaar, and the Lottery, are all conceived in a spirit of Christian friendliness, but whether they conduce to a corresponding amount of Christian piety is open to question. Where, for instance, does the benefit enure to the souls of the young, or, for that matter, to their bodies, by allowing them an unlimited gorge at 25 cents, or so, a head? We have seen youngsters at church teas, who have eaten so much that they have swelled visibly before our eyes. They would never dream of doing such a thing at home, but a church tea is, for some occult reason, looked upon by many of them as a splendid chance to cut loose from the conventionalities of civilized society. Some churches have gone so far as to give their little festivities facetious titles. One, we remember well, was advertized in a paper as a Lazarus Pie Social. Lazarus has a nice, joyful, cleanly, prosperous ring about it. Possibly that is why it was chosen.

In the matter of bazaars and lotteries, not much need be said. They carry their own condemnation. We never think twice of expressing our opinions when we feel that this or that merchant has overcharged us on any goods that we have purchased, but we are supposed to grin and bear the imposition cheerfully, where such fraud is practised on behalf of the church. In the matter of lotteries it would, we imagine, puzzle the most expert casuist to prove that a method which comes under the ban of the civil law, as gambling, should become a legal and dignified process when engaged in on behalf of a church. Adventitious aids are not needed for any church. If a church cannot prosper on the good-will and proper feeling of its people, it has no claim to existence. It deserves to die.

ROSY-CHEEKED BABIES.

Nothing in the world is such a comfort and joy as a healthy, rosy-cheeked, happy baby. But the price of Baby's health is constant vigilance on the part of the mother. The ills of baby-hood come suddenly and the wise mother will always be in a position to treat them at once. No other medicine can take the place of Baby Own Tablets in relieving and curing the ills of babyhood and childhood, and there is no other medicine as safe. Mrs. Wm. Viggers, Perretton, Ont., says: "My baby was troubled with his stomach and was very cross while getting his teeth, and did not sleep well at night. I gave him Baby's Own Tablets with the best of results. He is now one of the best natured babies one could wish." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CO-OPERATION AND EDUCATION

From Farm and Dairy.

Prof. F. C. Elford, Macdonald College, Que.

Wherever in Canada co-operative circles have been tried the results have been satisfactory.

At Fergus, Ontario, Messrs. Armstrong Bros., were keeping a feed store, handling a few chickens of doubtful quality brought in by their customers. They commenced a campaign of education that has resulted in a yearly output of thousands of dollars. Wholesale dealers who buy their product say it is of superior and uniform quality and they can afford to pay a price that will net the farmer much more than if each handled his own.

At Holmesville, Ontario, prior to the establishment of a Poultry Station by the Dominion Government, the limited quantity of poultry marketed was not first class. The breeds were unsuitable and little attention was paid to that department. Through the work of the station and the co-operative work that has followed, there is to-day a good class of poultry kept on the farms and the station sent to Montreal last year, from a very limited territory several thousand dollars' worth of dressed poultry and is shipping eggs during the entire year. The education and the co-operation has almost created a department of the farm there into an important industry.

At Petit Brule, Que. is a small co-operative circle managed by the salesman of the cheese factory, which is shipping eggs to Montreal. The members of the circle are getting a bonus for taking care of their eggs, which is a decided benefit to themselves and the trade.

There are other instances which might be mentioned, but the cases are isolated and act entirely separate of one another, but show that co-operation is an advantage and can be carried on among the farmers of Canada.

EDUCATION A FORERUNNER.

A study of these shows also that before there is much co-operation there must be considerable education. In the case of Holmesville the education was done through the assistance of the Government from their Poultry Station. At Fergus, the Messrs. Armstrong Bros., did the educating work themselves. They say that the work should not be borne by private individuals as there is no guarantee that as soon as the educational work is far enough advanced other firms will not step in and reap the benefit, as has been their experience. Mr. Armstrong thinks that the Government should assist such co-operation the same way that they assist cheese and butter factories.

At any rate before we can expect to have a uniform system of co-operation even to a small extent a campaign of education will be necessary. For this purpose the Poultry Producers' Association of Eastern Canada has been formed and through it the Dominion Government will assist in this campaign of co-operative effort.

PREPARING POULTRY FOR THE MARKET

From Farm and Dairy.

In proportion to the quantity of poultry offered for sale in the past, altogether too large an amount has been poorly dressed and equally poorly fleshed. This condition of affairs is due simply through lack of knowing the best methods of handling and preparing birds. Therefore, farmers and others who are raising poultry would do well to kindly note very carefully the following instructions.

TIME TO FATTEN.

The most profitable age to fatten poultry is between three and four months old, though birds of almost any age may be fatted. The idea is to have them plump and well fleshed.

FATTENING CRATES.

Chickens for fattening should be placed in crates. These crates are generally made six feet long, 16 inches wide and 20 inches high divided into three compartments, each compartment holding four birds. Set the crates on stands four feet from the ground. Each crate may carry a light "V" shaped trough two and a half inches deep. The bottom of the trough is four inches above the bottom of the crate, and upper side edge two inches from the crate.

FOOD.

A very palatable and effective ration may be made of two parts ground oats and one part corn; or, equal parts of ground oats, ground corn, and ground buckwheat or two parts flour, two parts ground barley and one part wheat bran, mixed with skim milk, sour milk or butter milk to a thin porridge. A quantity of meat meal, beef scraps and grain should be mixed with the mash on alternate days.

On the first day mix some Epsom Salts in the drinking water, and for a couple of days feed lightly, the food being given twice daily, and after the birds have eaten what they require, troughs should be removed or cleaned. Quantities of fresh water must be supplied constantly, and also grit two or three times per week.

MARKET REQUIREMENTS.

In fattening chickens the object should be to conform, as nearly as possible, to market requirements. The breast, in shape, should be long and broad, giving the bird a plump appearance. Short legs, indicating the low, blocky type, are a good feature. The leg should form as small a proportion of the weight as possible, because the meat is largely composed of sinew and therefore inferior. About four pounds is the preferred weight of dressed fatted chickens, and as the gain in live weight made by birds ranges from one to two pounds a bird during the fattening period, it is never difficult to calculate the amount of work necessary.

FASTING.

A mistake which results in the spoiling of many promising birds is killing them when their crops are full. Green spots of decomposition on the flesh can invariably be traced to the fact that the birds were not fasted. Birds must fast for at least 24 hours, preferably 36 before killing, so as to completely empty their crops and intestines. This is a point about which one cannot be too particular. Next week we shall deal with killing, plucking, plumping and packing.

LAKEFIELD FAIR—The annual Exhibition of the Lakefield Agricultural Society will be held in the Society's Grounds at Lakefield, on Tuesday and Wednesday, September 28th and 29th. The Directors have made quite a number of improvements during the past season, a fine new Grand Stand having been erected, also a Judge's stand, and an inner ring for Judging Horses and Cattle in. They are expecting a splendid exhibition this year. Prize Lists, entry forms, &c may be obtained from the Secretary, W. Sherin, Lakefield, or any of the Officers or Directors. 4d-64-1w-37

POINTERS.

From Farm and Dairy.

In lieu of a dust bath, sifted coal ashes are preferable to wood ashes because they do not contain so much potash.

If your egg supply is falling off, probably it is because your hens are not getting as much ground bone as they need. Bone makes eggs.

Be a poultryman, if only a back-yard fancier. Did you ever stop to think how much money there could be made in the back yard? Some one try it and see.

Just because you have not quite as good a hen-house as the neighbor has is no reason for neglecting it. It often happens that the house which looks the best from the road is not the best from the inside view.

There is a constant demand for breeding and exhibition stock, and fortunate is the poultryman who can supply, in a degree, this want. There are no fixed prices for fancy stock and eggs, and he who can furnish the best will obtain the best returns.

In raising poultry for the market the profit lies in hatching early, pushing the chickens forward as rapidly as possible and marketing them as soon as possible. The cost of food for poultry is less and the dividends on investments are more frequent and also larger than in most other stock.

There never was a time when careful selection failed to give good results and especially when extra care and attention is given to the selection of the male. Usually between a little extra care and a little neglect lies all the difference between the flock of hens that lay in winter and the flock that does not.

There can be no fixed method of feeding or breeding fowls. Success comes from right methods, and these methods must be learned in the school of common sense application. I contend that every poultryman should stand upon his own ground and work out his own methods of keeping poultry successfully, but in this he may be greatly helped by the experiences of others.

FAMOUS ASTRONOMER SAYS COOK'S DATES SHOW HE FELL 316 MILES SHORT OF THE POLE

Bases His Argument Upon the Statement by the Explorer That "April 7 Was Marked by the Swinging of the Midnight Sun Over the Northern Ice."

By John N. Stockwell, A.M., PH. D., Noted Astronomer and Author.

Dr. Cook, approaching the pole (marked "3") ,was going toward a place where the sun would be visible at midnight. He says he saw the midnight sun (marked "1" and "2") on April 7, and was at the point marked "4" 234 miles from the pole.

Prof. Stockwell says that the midnight sun was visible at that point on April 1, and that if Cook didn't see it until April 7, he must have been on that date at the point marked "5," 550 miles from the pole. In other words, that his reckoning is 316 miles in error.

When a man announces to the world that he has done some great thing, it is the province and duty of men of science to apply to his account of his deed all the tests provided by the learning of mankind.

In the matter of the north pole, science in many of her departments provided such tests. Astronomy is a branch of science that of right must be permitted to apply its tests to the data furnished by Dr. Cook, Lieut. Peary or any other man who may claim to have discovered the geographical pole.

I have taken the best information I could secure as to Dr. Cook's data, and I have undertaken an analysis of what his observations really show.

Annatoak is situated in 78 degrees, 37 minutes of north latitude, and is therefore 11 degrees 23 minutes or 790 miles from the north pole. The sun rose at this place on Feb. 19, 1908, after having been below its horizon during 116 days, or since the 24th of the preceding October. It was from this place that Dr. Cook started on his polar expedition at sunrise Feb. 19, 1908. He reports that on March 30 he was in latitude 84 degrees 47 minutes, which is 5 degrees 13 minutes or 362 miles from the pole.

On March 30, at midnight, the sun's declination was 4 degrees 0 minutes north of the equator, and if to this we add 35 minutes for refraction, we get the apparent declination of the sun equal to 4 degrees 35 minutes north, and its distance from the pole would be 85 degrees 25 minutes. If to this we add Cook's distance from the pole, or 5 degrees 13 minutes, we get 90 degrees 38 minutes for the zenith distance of the midnight sun in the latitude Cook claimed to be in at that time. The midnight sun would therefore be 38 minutes of a degree below his horizon, and would of course be visible. But the midnight sun was approaching Cook's horizon at the rate of 35 minutes daily and consequently must have reached it on March 31 or April 1 at the latest.

But Dr. Cook tells us that the night of April 7 was "made notable by the swinging of the midnight sun over the northern ice," as it marked the beginning of the six months of summer at that place. Now, if Cook was in the latitude he claims to have been in, he must have had a midnight sun as early as April 1. But we have no reason to doubt Cook's statement that April 7 showed him his first midnight sun, as so simple an observation as seeing the sun itself would require neither instruments nor skill in using them, and could as well be made by an untutored Eskimo as by the most intelligent white man. Therefore we will accept April 7 as the date of Cook's first midnight sun, and inquire what conclusions may be legitimately deduced from it.

On April 7, at midnight, the sun's declination may be taken as north 7 degrees 4 minutes, and to this must be added the sun's semi-diameter, 16 minutes, and refraction, 35 minutes, making the declination 7 degrees 55 minutes, in order that the whole sun might appear above the horizon. If, then, the sun was in the horizon of some place at midnight, the place must be as far from the pole as the sun was from the equator, and consequently the polar distance must be equal to 7 degrees 55 minutes, or its latitude must be 82 degrees 5 minutes. Dr. Cook gives his latitude at the same time as 86 degrees 38 minutes. There is therefore, a discrepancy amounting to 4 degrees 33 minutes in his latitude to be accounted for in some way, and this discrepancy is equivalent to a linear distance of 316 miles in the place of the observer.

If Dr. Cook's latitude on April 7 was only 82 degrees 5 minutes, he was then 550 miles from the pole, and in order to reach it on April 21, he must have travelled 39 miles daily.

In his journey towards the pole after April 7, nothing is related of special interest except the extreme precision with which he gives his latitude as determned by his sextant, namely, 89 degrees 59 minutes 46 seconds, which would give his distance from the pole equal to 1,400 feet, or only 80 feet more than a quarter of a mile. It is perhaps superfluous to add that no portable transit instrument or sextant would be capable of giving that degree of precision, even by a long series of observations.

In conclusion, it appears that Dr. Cook's observations show that he was really 550 miles from the pole when he claims to have been only 214 miles from that point. His observations therefore show a discrepancy of 316 miles.

The conclusions arrived at in this paper are based upon the assumption that the newspaper reports giving April 7 as the date of midnight sunrise are correct.

France Has Set Fashion America Should Follow

By Cynthia Grey.

Paris has declared war on the murderously long hat pins that women are wearing with their large hats. It seems that in France, as well as in our own country, women go about the streets with hats bristling on all sides with these long slender swords. Accidents galore have resulted on that side of the Atlantic and this.

Over there the police have taken up the matter since the Paris press began its crusade, and they have reported more than 50 accidents in 10 weeks due to these abominable hat pins.

In America the press has remained silent, save in the occasional news story of an accident. It's time our press was getting busy.

A close observer on crowded city cars will notice how women dodge to keep out of the way of hat pins. Even men keep their eyes wide open. With my own eyes I saw a tiny, defenseless baby, held in its mother's arms on a loaded street car, receive a scratch across its face—it might have been its eye—and I wished for the courage of Everett True, or Carrie Nation.

Why will women be so foolish? Why can't they wear pins just long enough? Hat pins need only go through the crown to hold perfectly, and yet women jab these long pins clear through and allow them to stick out on the other side—a menace to all who venture near.

Don't Use Strong Perfumes

Says Cynthia Grey.

It cannot be denied that the odour of cleanliness produced by a liberal use of soap and water is more pleasing to those of fastidious tastes than the redolence of strong perfumes. But, who can say a word against the almost imperceptible odour of a good sachet?

To me the faint fragrance of sandalwood is very restful and refreshing. Since my early childhood days when I wore a short chain of carved sandalwood beads, I have cherished a devotion to that scent.

It is said on authority, and I believe it, that perfumes affect the nerves. Some soothe, some irritate, according to the individual temperament. It is when your headaches that you can choose the particular scent that is best suited to you.

An envelope of some good sachet in your shirt waist box, one in the drawer where you keep your veils, gloves and handkerchiefs, one in your hat box and in chiffonier drawers where underwear is kept will perfume your belongings sufficiently. If you have a weakness for strong perfumes, swear off and try my plan. I'm sure you will be pleased, and it is safe to say your friends who are averse to strong perfumes will welcome the change.

FOSTER'S WEATHER PREDICTIONS

Washington, D.C., Sept. 18.—Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbance to cross continent 16 to 20, warm wave 15 to 19, cool wave 18 to 22. This disturbance was expected to follow very low temperatures and the average temperature of week centring on 18 to be unusually low with killing frosts, further south than usual. Next disturbance will reach Pacific slope about 21, great central valleys 23, eastern states 25. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about 24, great central valleys 26, eastern states 28.

The special features of this disturbance will be a great rise in temperature, followed by more frosts and an electrical storm at some now unknown hour during the period of Sept. 21 to 25, inclusive. Following this storm period the temperatures will not go as low as preceding it. Severe storms are expected during last days of September. Next bulletin will give general forecasts of October crop weather.

While the Department of Agriculture gives fairly reliable monthly reports on crop conditions they will not be able to give full details of the damage to corn by the August drouth before October 10. Not more than half a corn crop has been produced east of the Alleghanies and in West Virginia and in Pensylvania west of the Alleghanies and the deficiency must be supplied by shipping corn from the great central valleys.

Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, Oklahoma, and southern Illinois suffered greatly from the August drouth, and these being great corn producers the damage necessarily cuts the corn crop of 1909 materially. It is too early to determine the value of corn and the best policy will be not to sell.

The weather crop of 1909 has been overestimated for purposes of speculation. All kinds of old grain are unusually scarce and immense quantities of the new crops will be required to fill up the empty places. I advise farmers to go slow about selling. There is luck in leisure, the old saying has it, and this is a good time to wait. Everything favours higher prices for grain.

Mars is all the all absorbing topic in astronomy, while the North Pole holds all attention in geography. But there is much of practical and useful may be found in the passage of the earth between Mars and the sun on September 24. It will not be a close conjunction, but I confidently expect some effects to be realized.

Surgeon's Opinion OF KNIFE FOR PILES

Operating often a fad—The modern way of curing piles is with DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Sir Henry C. Burdett, K.C.B., of London, England, in a recent address, said, "What we want are surgeons, who with wisdom to be conservative have courage to protest against the growing tendency to put a knife into everybody on the smallest possible pretext."

Too many doctors have a desire to use the knife at every opportunity. The rewards to them are rich, but think of the suffering of body and mind, the enormous expense and the risk of life itself. An operation should be the last resort, for in spite of glowing promises the results are often very disappointing.

Many a sufferer from piles has been cured by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment, after operations have failed. Hundreds of thousands have escaped operations by using this treatment first and thereby obtaining cure.

Mr. Arthur Lepine, school teacher, Granite Hill, Muskoka, Ont., writes:

"For two years I suffered from bleeding piles and lost each day about half a cup of blood. I went to the Ottawa General Hospital to be operated on and was under the influence of chloroform for one hour. For about two months I was better but my old trouble returned and again I lost much blood. One of my doctors told me I would have to undergo another operation, but I would not consent.

"My father, proprietor of the Richelieu Hotel, Ottawa, advised me to use Dr. Chase's Ointment, and two boxes cured me. I did not lose any blood after beginning this treatment, and believe the cure is a permanent one. I gratefully recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as the best treatment in the world for bleeding piles." 60 cents a box at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

CHOKED BY TEETH

One Witness at the Inquest into Death of Edward Keating Gives This Explanation Last Night.

STUCK IN HIS THROAT.

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—At the coroner's inquest to-night on the death of Edward Keating of Belleville, the victim of the airship accident at the Exhibition grounds here yesterday, evidence was given showing that when Keating received the electric shock in grasping the framework of the airship his false teeth became dislodged and stuck in his throat. One of the electricians who gave evidence, declared that the other two men who also grasped the airship received equally severe, if not more severe shocks, but were not killed. One witness gave it as his opinion that Mr. Keating's death was due not so much to the electric current, as to the fact that the false teeth chooked him. The jury adjourned without bringing in a verdict.

RENDERED UNTO CAESAR

Ottawa, Sept. 17.—One of the largest amounts received in years by the Government in the form of conscience money is acknowledged to-day by the Finance Department. An anonymous donor has sent to the Finance Minister for the Dominion Treasury the sum of $2,000 enclosed in a letter, stating that the amount rightfully belongs to the Dominion.

A CANADIAN GIRL NOW WITH "THE GAY MUSICIAN"

A young Canadian girl, who is rapidly coming to the front on the stage is Emily Hopper, formerly of Toronto, who is now a member of John P. Slocum's company, presenting Julian Edwards' most charming comic opera "The Gay Musician," which will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday evening, Sept. 22.

Emily Hopper is considered one of the most beautiful girls with "The Gay Musician" company. She was educated in the Convent of Loretta Academy, and gave early promise of possessing a beautiful voice. In a beauty contest held in Toronto a few years ago, the young singer was awarded the gold medal, defeating more than two hundred competitors.

She went on the stage four years ago when she was thirteen years old, and played the role of "The Pajama Girl" in the comedy of that name, through the entire Canadian circuit.

Last season, Miss Hooper was a feature of the musical comedy, "The Time, Place and The Girl," and it was during a performance of that play that Manager Slocum saw the ability of the young actress and engaged her for this season with "The Gay Musician."

EVERYTHING ORDERLY

Large Crowds in the City Behaved Well —No Police Court.

Chief Rossel reported nothing doing in the police court this morning. There was not a single case resulting from the great influx of people to the city yesterday. The crowds were orderly and behaved themselves well. Few men were seen at Exhibition Park the worse of liquor and generally law and order was kept.

SPRAINED HIS WRIST

Mr. Thos. Minicola Met With Accident Yesterday.

Mr. Thos. Minicola had the misfortune to badly sprain his right wrist yesterday afternoon. He was unloading fruit in front of their store on Hunter street, when the horse gave a little start. This jolted the waggon, and Mr. Minicola fell out on to the pavement, his whole weight bearing on his hand. His wrist was badly sprained. Dr. Galwain attended the injured man.

PARTY OF UNITED STATES INVESTORS.

Advice was received at headquarters of the Passenger Department, Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, here to-day, that 130 investors from the United States passed through Winnipeg by special train composed of four sleepers, baggage, and dining cars yesterday, en route to Scott, Sask., on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific, and the Tramping Lake district. The party is in charge of the Luce Land Company.

OVER NINE THOUSAND PEOPLE SAW THE PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL YESTERDAY ATTENDANCE BREAKS THE PREVIOUS RECORDS

Crowd in Afternoon Was Over 6000, While 3200 Attended the Evening Performance — Better Exhibits and Entertainment Than Ever Before.

FAIR A GRAND SUCCESS

Over nine thousand people saw the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition yesterday.

No wonder the directors are jubilant, is it? Such a tremendous crowd and such delightful weather after their weeks of preparation, comes as a most pleasant realization of their dreams, and they are more than satisfied with the results achieved.

The receipts from the sale of tickets during the day amounted to $1,840, $1,200 of which was taken in the afternoon, and the balance at the evening performance. The figures mean that over 6,000 people filed through the gates in the afternoon, and about 3,200 in the evening. When the number of exhibitors and others, for whom there is no admission charge, is considered, there is no exaggeration in saying that there were ten thousand people on the grounds during the day. The crowd included many visitors from out-of-town points. Every incoming train up to noon was crowded with Fair visitors, and hundreds drove in, some coming many miles. The local people turned out splendidly, and the result was a tremendous crowd that kept the ticket selling staff busy, indeed. The street cars were black with people, every car going south until 4 o'clock being packed. The weather man was with the Fair this time. He has evidently felt remorseful at the way in which he used the Exhibition in other years and so this time he gave out the very best he had in stock, bright, sunshiny weather, with a refreshing breeze, without a hint of chill in it. There should be another big crowd this afternoon, and a correspondingly big surplus for the directors.

The exhibits in every class, with the possible exception of cattle, are of the best. In some lines all previous records were badly shattered. There is a specially fine showing in horses, carriage horses, and roadsters being especially fine. These classes were judged on the track in front of the grandstand and were greatly admired by the crowd. The swine exhibits were away ahead of anything seen here in years, and the same can be said of the poultry showing, and in fact the exhibits and the Fair generally were never better.

The Horse Races

Horse Racing is always a popular feature of the Peterborough Fair but this year this department has scored a success far greater than the fondest expectations of the directors and they had looked forward to the races in an optimistic vein, too. When it is said that the racing yesterday afternoon was the finest ever seen at the Peterborough Industrial, it requires only the testimony of those who were present to show that that statement is not in the least exaggerated. Never in the history of the Association have there been larger fields and never have the races been better conducted or the crowd more pleased over the events.

There were seven starters in the 2.40 class and an even half dozen in the 2.22 class and the two events furnished a grand afternoon's sport which the crowd thoroughly appreciated. The spectators also approved of the work of the starter Dr. Sinclair of Cannington who made a decided hit by the manner in which he handled the large fields. He was business all through and made the drivers stand around in a manner that thoroughly pleased the crowds. He succeeded in getting some splendid starts and his work was thoroughly satisfactory.

One teamster, Bennie Dunsford behind Queen's Bourbon was fined $5 for persistently scoring down in front of the pole horse and several others came near suffering the same fate before the drivers came to realize that Dr. Sinclair meant business but when they did grasp his point there was no more trouble.

2.22 A Great Race

The race of the day was the 2.22 class in which Dr. Leach's grand old horse "Holland Boy" secured a most popular and to many an unexpected win, beating, among other good ones, the much fancied "Planet," the Toronto horse which has been gathering in the Gow Ganda all over the circuit recently. "Holland Boy's" performance is a wonderful one. The horse is twenty-four years of age and yet he beat a field of five good animals by stepping within a fraction of his own mark made years ago. The judges and other horsemen present state that his work yesterday was marvellous, a performance that is regarded as unique in the history of the turf. The crowd were all for "Holland Boy" and when he beat "Silver Tail" home by a scant nose in the final heat there was a

HAS NOTIFIED THE ATTORNEY GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT OF CASE

The Finding of Body at Springville Has Been Left in Hands of Provincial Authorities — Disappearance of Thos. Caffery Yet Unexplained.

NO CLUE TO IDENTITY

While nothing new has been brought to light to explain the identity of the person whose remains were found last Sunday in the woods near Kendry siding there have been theories voiced here and there to remove the shroud of mystery under which the unfortunate departed this life.

The strange disappearance of a young man named Thos. Caffrey, who boarded at an Aylmer street residence and who has not been seen or heard of by his former landlady since early in the Spring has likewise never been cleared up and by those acquainted with the case it is thought that there may be some connection with his disappearance the finding of the body.

Caffrey left his boarding house one morning taking none of his belongings with him and has never returned or sent any tidings of himself. He had been in ill health and was confined to the hospital. On coming out he secured employment digging for the City but was too weak to stand the labour and had to give it up. He was in arrears with his landlady and grew despondent although he never said anything suggesting that he intended to do away with himself.

Short in Stature

The description of the body that was found tallies in more respects than one with Caffrey's. He was not very tall, in fact would be considered undersized and when he left he would probably have had several dollars in his pockets. The persons with whom he had boarded state that after reading the account in the newspapers of the finding of the body that they were struck by the similarity and spoke of it to some of their neighbours. Caffrey disappeared this Spring whereas it is believed that the unknown met his death a year ago. However the former had been in poor health for some time and it is thought that decomposition during the intervening warm months would have been rapid.

An Examiner reporter in an interview with the Aylmer street people learned their opinions regarding the matter as stated above. Neither the husband or wife would state that they were convinced of the idea but they are still at a loss to find out what became of their boarder as his goods are still at the house and they are anxious to hear from him.

Coroner Gray instructed Attorney Wood to notify the Attorney General's department of the finding of the body and steps may be taken to clear up the mystery. The Coroner from the facts he has at hand is inclined to think that it is a case of murder.

The Poster of "the Gay Musician" Censored in Montreal by Chief of Police.

John P. Slocum, manager of "The Gay Musician" Comic Opera Company and the Chief of Police of Montreal are no longer friends, and all because the Montreal censor of morals objected to a poster of which Manager Slocum is especially proud.

If there is one thing Manager Slocum prides himself on it is the very refined character of his attraction, and everything pertaining to it.

In "The Gay Musician" there is a scene where a dainty dancer trips lightly to gay music around an old sailor. The sailor sits on the ground while the dance is in progress. The accompanying cut is an exact reproduction of the scene in question. The Chief of Police in Montreal, however, refused permission for the poster of the dance to be displayed.

Manager Slocum at once asked the opinion of leading citizens of Montreal, as well as many prominent women and not one said that there was the slightest suggestiveness about the poster; that the action of the Chief of Police was unwarranted. Thousands of photographs of the censored poster were distributed in Montreal by Manager Slocum and the Chief of Police was bantered right and left.

The poster is being displayed in this city alongside another poster, asking the public to express their opinion on the scene which the Chief of Police of Montreal declared was a danger to the morals of the city.

"The Gay Musician" is to play here at Grand Opera House, Wednesday, Sept. 22nd, and considerable interest is being displayed to see the Company as its reputation is well known here.

Lighthouse Keeper Reports Seeing the Craft Go Over and Then a Lone Indian Brings Word That He Was the Sole Occupant of Boat---May Have Been Two Accidents

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 17.—F. Eastman, lighthouse-keeper at Race Rocks, who arrived here this morning, reports seeing a Columbia River boat capsize and from eight to ten Indians drowned yesterday morning during a strong southwest squall. A Hesquooit Indian, who arrived at the local agency this morning, reported that he was alone in a Columbia River boat which capsized yesterday near Race Rocks. He believes the lightkeeper was confused by seeing bags of ballast which he had on the windward side of the boaot, but the lightkeeper is insistent that he saw the party drown, and says that his wife and assistant also witnessed the disaster. His report of the location of the disaster is different from that of the Indian, and the time is placed by him as 11 a.m., while the Indian states that he capsized after 12 o'clock.

The Bidding.

Mr. Watkin opened with 11¼ offer, Mr. Gillespie raised it to 11 7-16, but W. H. Cook made it 11½, and no one raised it. He called Killarney, Norwood, Westwood, Villiers, Ormonde. He then offered 11 7-16 for further selections, and called Daisy D., Warsaw, Warminster, Shearer, Oakdale.

Mr. Gillespie offered 11 7-16 for further selections, but Mr. Weir made it 11½, and called Keene, Central Smith, Cedardale, Lang.

Mr. Gillespie at 11 7-16, took Bensfort, Trewern, Cavanville, Fraserville, Selwyn, Myrtle, King Edward, Maple Leaf, Indian River.

W. H. Cook offered 11 7-16 for further selections; Mr. Gillespie bid 11 7-16 for the rest of the board and obtained Fleetwood, Shamrock, Stony Lake, Lakefield, Pine Grove, Young's Point, North Dummer.

The Board adjourned to meet two weeks from Wednesday, Sept. 22nd.

PAPER BOX SPECIALISTS

A Word Photograph of the Buffalo Business of the F. N. Burt Company.

The following are extracts from a booklet which was published a few months ago and circulated by the F. N. Burt Co., of Buffalo. These extracts are interesting in view of the business of this Company having been taken over by the F. N. Burt Company, Limited, of Ontario, whose preference shares are being offered for subscription by A. E. Ames & Co., Limited:

"We operate three factories, situated in three different sections of the city. Many consumers of large quantities of goods often divide their orders amongst two or three manufacturers for the sole purpose of insuring themselves against inconvenience and loss, which might be occasioned them should they place all their order with one manufacturer (operating one factory) should that manufacturer's factory meet with fire, flood, explosion or other disaster. Our equipment is very flexible, and should one of our plants meet with misfortune the other two could supply the immediate wants of our customers. We also have a large warehouse separated from our manufacturing plants."

"The placing of large orders with one manufacturer has many advantages provided the customer is sure that his source of supply will not be unexpectedly cut off through misfortune; and, we can give that assurance.

"We are specialists in the manufacture of paper boxes. Our specialty consists in devoting all of our energies towards the manufacture of the finer qualities of paper boxes in small sizes, such as those used for Drugs, Turkish Cigarettes, Perfumes, Soaps, Confectionery, Face Powder, Talcum Powder, Sachet Powder, Cartridges, Jewellery, Cleansing Powders, etc. In short, we desire orders for large quantities in small sizes of any kind of paper box and particularly for finer grades."

"We purchase in large quantities, and pay spot cash for it, thus securing the lowest possible price."

"Our employees are all trained and expert along our particular line of fine small work. The machinery and whole factory equipment is all bent in the same direction. Most of our machinery has been designed and built in our machine shops to meet the special needs of our particular line of work, and to execute it in the best and most economical manner. We have our own Machine Shops, Electric Light Plants, Carpenter and Steam Fitting Departments, and an up-to-date estimating and cost-keeping system."

"We have a large printing plant, and operate presses of the most approved type, executing the printing that decorates our boxes, and we are thus enabled to execute it when it is wanted, and in a suitable manner, which cannot be done by factories sub-letting the printing portion of orders."

"We have a complete folding box department and can manufacture any style of folding box; but, only solicit orders for large quantities in small sizes. Small orders or orders for large sizes are not desirable to us."

"We have practically no competitors. We stand alone as specialists in a particular branch of the paper box business. Many of our best friends and customers are themselves paper box manufseturers, who realize the advantage of being able to procure goods of us, sell them again, and make a profit, which goods they are not equipped to manufacture either economically or in a satisfactory manner."

"We don't manufacture or desire orders for large-sized, coarse, set-up boxes of any kind, as we are not equipped to manufacture them to advantage."

"Our production of goods within the scope of our work is the largest in the world. Our normal force of employees in the three plants is 3,000. We are thus prepared to handle large contracts in a satisfactory manner, which a small factory could not cope with. We are constantly enlarging, modifying and inventing new methods and machines for the betterment of the work."

"We confine ourselves to small sizes and small sizes made by automatic machinery so that transportation charges will not prohibit us from shipping long distances. We make the goods at a low price, sell them at a small margin of profit and pack them within a small space; hence, consumers can afford to pay transportation charges."

"With the advantages of ample facilities and capital; three factories; an equipment specially designed for the economical manufacture of the goods; and an earnest desire on our part to please our customers as to quality, service and price, we solicit your orders, provided they come within the scope of our work."

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY.

Passenger trains over the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway west, which have hitherto run only to Scott, Sask., are now running through to Wainwright, Alta., 100 miles further west and 766 miles west of Winnipeg. The regular passenger service is now within 115 miles west of Edmonton, and it is stated that through trains from Winnipeg to the Alberta capital will be in operation next month.

WITHOUT A TICKET

Old Man Making His Way to Lakefield to Enter House of Refuge Asked for Assistance—Had Been Lost in Toronto.

A STRANGE OCCURRENCE

Abner Colby, an old man past his four score years applied to F. W. Miller this morning for the price of a ticket to Lakefield where he wanted to enter the County House of Refuge. Colby appeared in the Toronto police court yesterday morning on no particular charge except that he seemed homeless and apparently a vagrant according to the evening papers' reports. He said he came from Lakefield and had been an inmate of the House of Refuge. He had taken a trip to Toronto to visit his son-in-law, Robert Elliott who had moved to the Exhibition city but was unable to locate them. The old man said he would return home and was dismissed but as he was leaving the court he was met by his daughter and her husband ad taken in charge.

He was given a ticket and arrived in Peterborough last night without the transportation for the rest of his journey. The old man had all his earthyl possessions in a peach basket which served as a valise and will probably get back to Lakefield without any difficulty.

MAN PLUNGED THROUGH WINDOW

To Save Little Boy From Horrible Death by Fire.

Special Wire to the Examiner.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 18.—Plunging through a plate glass window at 24 Napier street, Frank Cornish, 19 years old, rescued little four year old Jack Hyslop from a terrible death by fire. The child had been left alone in the house by its parents and awakening before their return home undertook to light a lamp which exploded and set fire to the house. Cornish's arms and hands were badly lacerated by the glass. Although only 19 years old and underaized Cornish has rescued half a dozen persons from drowning in the Don and has brought up a score of bodies from the same stream.

Grand Opera House, Wednesday evening, Sept. 22. Plan opens Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

Julian Edwards who wrote the music of "The Gay Musician," is also the composer of a musical comedy that has been already presented here, Dolly Varden. Lulu Glaser was the original Dolly and won a sterling reputation by her clever interpretation of the role besides her ability to sing. One of the best song numbers was "Dainty Dolly Varden," and the entire score was up to that standard. In The Gay Musician there are catchy, tuneful choruses and one song in particular. "Lovelight Beaming in Your Eyes," caught the favour of the New York first nighters and has since made a hit everywhere. It will be heard at the Grand on its presentation here.

THE CEMENT MERGER.

A good deal is heard respecting the amalgamation of the cement companies of the Dominion into one strong controlling corporation under the name of the Canada Cement Company. The matter has attracted large public attention, because of the magnitude of the trade and industrial interests involved. The new Company has been organized and an usually strong board of directors formed, including the most prominent and capable of the financial and industrial captains of the country, gentlemen of commading business ability, whose very names are a guarantee of an effective and enterprising management, that must bring about successful operation, and the profitable employment of the capital embarked in the great undertaking. As will be seen by reference to announcement in this issue of the Examiner, five million dollars' worth of shares of a hundred dollars each, are now offered for sale by the Royal Trust Company, the Royal Securities Corporation, Limited, and members of the various stock exchanges. In addition to the strong character of the directorate of the new company, there are other reasons why acquirement of the shares of the Canadian Cement Company should constitute a safe, stable, and profitable investment. Portland cement has become an indispensable article of staple and increasing demand. Canada is yet young and in the heyday of development. We have, in progress and in prospect, enormous public works in connection with railway building, navigation improvements, etc., etc., in which Portland cement enters as an indispensable element. Expanding occupation and settlement of new areas will create villages, towns and cities, and these are built of cement very largely. Thus there is certain a strong, permanent, and growing demand for Portland cement, demand being a prime condition of success in industrial or other operations. The amalgamation will furnish another element of success. It will very sensibly diminish the cost of production. Thus we have in the formation of the Canada Cement Company three powerful conditions of successful and profitable operation—strong direction by men skilled in finance and industry, strong and increasing demand, and diminished cost of production—conditions that amply justify the payment of seven per cent dividends upon its stock. The reader is referred for full information to announcement elsewhere in this issue.

BEAUTIFY THE CITY.

In the series of articles bearing upon this subject, published in this column on Saturdays, the effort has been made, perhaps with more honest intention than result, to set forth the general conditions demanded to secure a city beautiful such as Peterborough can, with a little civic and popular care and a combination on the part of both easily be made.

The suggestions ventured, if observed to any general extent, would procure a state of beauty of private premises, tree line, attarctiveness, and beauty of boulevard and street surface which would constitute an ensemble that would make Peterborough the most attractive city in Canada.

Two chief objects need to be accomplished—to arouse a spirit of interest and enthusiasm in the production of beauty and tidiness of premises and public places in the hearts of the civic representatives, and the owners or occupants of private premises. This being acomplished, the next object to be aimed at is the development of a Christian spirit in the minds of the public, who frequent the streets and public places of the city.

Our churches and Sunday schools affect to teach the ethics of Christianity. Religion has a dual incidence upon human lives, having to do with the relations of man to his Maker, and of man to his fellow man. Each of these relations involves and includes the other; man must be right in his Divine relations before he can be right with his fellows, and the man who bears his true relations to his fellow man must occupy his proper relation with the Father. The Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man—one and indivisible—are the sum and substance of the teaching and life of the Divine Man.

No man can be a Christian in the high and real, the practical sense of the term, who has not the most tender respect and solicitude for the rights, felings, and even legitimate fancies and foibles of his fellow man. The man or woman who overtly or even carelessly disregards the rights and feelings of a fellow citizen, who has planted a lawn unprotected by a fence, or laid down a boulevard, by trampling it down and making a footpath of it to save a lazy step or two, is not—cannot be—a Christian, because the highest law ever given, that governing the relation of man to man, has been violated—do unto others as ye would have others do unto you.

If preachers and teachers would do their duty in successfully indoctrinating those under their responsibility, with this spirit, laws, rules, prohibitions, and appeals would be unnecessary. The religion is selfish and vain which does not cause its possessor to do everything in his power to make others happy, and one potent form of doing this is to respect and, if need be, protect their rights and feelings.

We see a citzen build and plant a beautiful lawn, and a boulevard to correspond. And we also see people in hundreds, people who profess to be ladies and gentlemen and Christians, tramp across the corners and destroy what gives delight to the maker and to the decent public for whose pleasure such improvements largely exist.

Now, to make the city beautiful in every respect and keep it so, there must be taste created or existing taste excited to action, in the interests of public beautification, and there must be developed the fine and gracious feeling which will resent, as an outrage, any wanton or thoughtless action that would result in the destruction or impairment of created beauty of private premises or public places.

How shall these things be done? Preachers of the Gospel can do much; if not directly, at least, indirectly. They are the ambassadors of the Power that gave the untoiling lilies of the field, a splendor of beauty surpassing the glories of the greatest of men. What would then be unbecoming to his calling or incongruous with its high character in a minister, in the opening of spring, speaking to his flock from the sacred desk, and urging upon them, as a Christian duty, religious abstention from the destruction, by intent or thoughtlessness, of the beautiful boulevards blushing greenly under the first impulse of spring; in impressing upon his flock the truth that the golden rule can have no higher nor lovelier fulfilment that a thoughtful respect for the feelings and tastes of others.

Would it be any derogation from the dignity of teachers in our public and other schools to impress upon their pupils and enforce by example the duty of refraining from defacing and destroying boulevards and lawns at corners. Every advanced school has beautified school grounds, and in exciting in pupils a love for flowers it would be easy to urge upon them the thoughtfulness and self-denial that would insure the safety from injury and destruction of cultivated grass, wherever it grows, on a private lawn, or boulevard, or a public park.

We are improving in taste and a desire for the beautiful in Peterborough. A new generation is maturing every day with more refined ideals. Let us unite, whether as preachers and teachers or parents of culture and refinement of feling, to instil the ethics of beauty into the minds, hearts, and souls of our children, so that there will be universal enlistment in the ranks of the lovers and promoters of the beautiful.

Peterborough can be made one of the most beautiful cities in the Dominion. It is so, in spots, now. Let us all unite in the work of bringing about the achievement of this possibility. The work is growing; hasten it. Every year the competitors for prize lawns are increasing in number, and the rivalry is growing keener. We need the co-operation of every good citizen. He or she is no good citizen who will not do his or her share in promoting the best interests of Peterborough, in the way of making it beautiful, in fact as is in possibility.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. W. T. R. Preston, who spent some time in Japan as Canada's commissioner, stated in a recent lecture that Christian missions were making poor progress in that country. This may easily be if Christianity is to be judged by the practice of its precepts by assumed Christians. In Chicago a Chinaman, out of pure courtesy and kindness—such as Christ taught by example—offered a white woman the shelter of his umbrella during a rainstorm. He was fined $50 and costs for having dared to accost a white woman. When, under Christianity, such actions can be perpetuated in the name of justice, will the knowledge of them in China contribute to the success of the missions?

FORESTS AND TAXATION.

(Pulp and Paper Magazine.)

Forests owned and managed by municipalities or communes are no uncommon thing in Europe. Of late interest in this aspect of forestry is on the increase on this continent. An evidence of this fact was given by a meeting lately held in Cobourg, Ont., and attended by representative men of the counties of Northumberland and Durham.

The municipal forests of Europe frequently make a material reduction in the taxes of the municipality—in fact, sometimes wipe the taxes out altogether—by the revenue derived from those forests.

The object of the meeting referred to was to consider the matter of the united counties purchasing and reforesting a tract of land within their borders. This tract is some 15,000 acres in extent and forms the watershed between the streams flowing into Lake Ontario directly and those running into the Trent River. The soil is almost pure sand. A fine crop of pine originally covered the area, and after it was taken off the land was for some years farmed with fair success. But the fertility of the soil has steadily diminished and to-day not many farmers are left on the ridge. Many farms have been deserted and areas of "blow" sand have been formed, sand from which is in some cases drifting on, and covering up good soil on adjoining farms. The streams throughout the area, too, are torrents in spring-time, but in late summer and autumn their beds are almost dry—the usual result of cutting away the forests at the headwaters of streams.

Though almost useless for farming now, the land will grow fine timber. Originally it was covered with a fine growth of pine, and large stumps still remain to show the size the timber attained. Fine young timber may be seen at various places in the area. At one place in Durham county, moreover, a plantation of young white pine was made some four years ago and this has developed into a thrifty young crop of timber.

The land can, it is thought, be bought at an average price of five dolars per acre. If the land is bought at this figure and planted with pine at a cost for plants and planting, of ten dollars per acre, the cost per acre of the planted area would, at the end of sixty years amount to about a hundred and sixty-five dollars ($165). The figures given for plants and planting is a liberal one, and the final cost given (i.e., $165) would include adequate charges for management and protection, as well as an allowance for taxes at 17 mills on the dollar. (Money is assumed to be worth three and a half per cent. per annum.)

The pine timber standing on the acre of ground would be worth, even at prices now prevailing, six hundred dollars. In other words, not only would the investment repay the interest at three and a half per cent. per annum, but in addition, it would yield an amount equivalent to a yearly payment of about two and a quarter throughout the sixty years. Thus the yearly revenue would amount to almost half the amount paid in the first instance for the land.

Considerable work in the planting up of such lands has been done in France and Germany and much interest was shown at the meeting in the address of Dr. B. E. Fernow, dean of the faculty of forestry of the University of Toronto, who gave some interesting figures showing the profitable results that had been obtained. Other speakers at the meeting were Messrs. Thomas Southworth and James Lawler, president and secretary, respectively, of the Canadian Forestry Association, E. J. Zavitz, Forester of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, and others. The meeting passed resolutions favouring the reforestation of the lands in question and recommending that the council of the counties try to secure the co-operation of the provincial government. The matter will be further discussed at a series of meetings to be held during the autumn, to conclude with a meeting of representatives of the counties in December next.

In other parts of Ontario are found conditions very much the same as those in the district above referred to, and similar action in the direction of creating municipal forest reserves could be taken with advantage to these districts. In other parts of Canada there are large areas of waste land which could be similarly turned to account.

In the state of Pennsylvania, it may be noted, the legislature, at its last session, passed a bill empowering municipalities to acquire land for the purpose of forming such municipal forest reserves.

EXHIBITION BIG SUCCESS

spontaneous outbreak of cheering and Dr. Leach was kept busy shaking hands with those eager to congratulate him upon the victory of his horse.

The other starters in the 2.22 class were "Patterson," owned by E. W. Jones, Peterborough, "Lady Gothard" owned by Martin Connors, Peterborough; "Bourbon Brook," owned by W. H. Elmhirst, Keene; "Planet," by Jas. McDowell, Toronto; and "Silver Tail," by A. W. Collins, Sunderland.

Planet was picked by many as the good thing in this class, while Silver Tail was also fancied by a large number who knew the Collins' mare and what she could do. However the talent was at seat in picking.

Bourbon Took First

The first heat was captured by Bourbon Brook with Holland Boy a strong contender in the stretch but not quite able to get up. The old horse showed enough speed however to cause the crowd to change their minds about the ultimate outcome of the race. Planet was third and Patterson fourth. Martin Connors' Lady Gothard led to the half but failed to go the route and finished in fifth position.

Dr. Leach's grand old horse by a sensational drive down the stretch nosed out Planet, there was great excitement. The third heat was even more exciting, Holland Boy got a little the worst of the start and Silver Tail who had been performing badly in the first two heats shot to the front and was away in a good lead followed by Planet. Holland Boy was well back and it looked for a while as if he was out of the heat. Silver Tail and Planet were making the running in front and they fought it out among themselves to the three-quarter pole. Then the game old Holland Boy commenced his drive and drew up on the leaders. As they turned into the stretch Holland Boy swung to the outside and with a grand burst of speed flashed by Planet and closing in on Silver Tail with every step caught the Sunderland flyer a yard from the wire and beat her home by a nose. Planet was third.

A Great Finish

The final heat resolved itself into another duel between Holland Boy and Silver Tail and as before it looked like Silver Tail until the wire. Silver Tail went out in front at the start and stepping better than she had shown in any other heat opened a wide gap. "Silver Tail wins this," was heard on every side and it looked like it too, when, after passing the three-quarter pole, Holland Boy made his drive and getting up to the mare's flank, dropped back as if beaten off. However, when the horses swung around into the stretch it was seen that Holland Boy was far from being outside of the running. Out on the outside of the track he swept along eating up the distance that separated the two, drew up in even terms with Silver Tail a few feet from the wire and shot under first, a winner by a head amid the wildest enthusiasm.

The summary follows:—

Holland Boy, Dr. Leach, Peterborough	2	1	1	1
Bourbon Brook, W. and H. Elmhirst, Keene	1	3	5	5
Silver Tail, A. W. Collins, Sunderland	4	5	2	2
Planet, J. McDowell, Toronto	3	2	3	4
Patterson, E. W. Jones, Peterborough	4	4	4	3
Lady Gothard, M. Connors, Peterborough	5	6	6	6

Seven in the 2.40

Seven horses faced the starter in the 2.40 and had a lively race of it all the way although Lou Keswick made a clean up in straight heats. Considerable trouble was experienced in getting the bunch away in the first heat but after that there was little difficulty considering the size of the field.

The first heat was the best one of the three with Jennie Hal, the Sunderland mare doing the contending with Lou Keswick. Jennie went out in front at once and held the lead for most of the distance fighting off Lulu Chimes. However, the Keswick mare had something left in her for the stretch and she flashed by the leader in time to win comfortably.

The other two heats were fairly easy for Lou Keswick, the Lindsay mare having the speed of her field. Jennie Hal was the most serious contender against her. Following is the summary:—

Lou Keswick, A. J. Ashmore, Lindsay	1	1	1
Jennie Hal, A. W. Collins, Sunderland	2	2	2
Lulu Chimes, Thomas McIver, Peterborough	3	3	4
Sparkles, Dr. J. N. Johnston, Port Hope	4	5	3
Indiana Boy, Dr. Broad, Lindsay	5	4	5
Queen's Bourbon, W. Whitham, Peterborough	6	6	6
Herklan, N. Nicholls, Lakefield	7	7	dr.

First Heat of Dog Race

The first heat of the dog race was run off yesterday afternoon and provided a lot of fun especially during the attempts to start the canines before there was a general fight among the speedy ones.

Six canines of various and nondescript varieties were entered and the starters had their hands full. A false start sent three of the six away while an equal number were left at the post but finally the half dozen barking animals were started. The heat resulted in a very easy win for R. Stevenson's collie which simply galloped away from the rest of the field and won the half mile heat by 100 yards. Clare Stewart took second prize and the rest were nowhere. The race is being finished this afternoon. The carter's race also takes place to-day having been postponed on account of the long list of attractions.

The Platform Performance

The platform performance is one of the best that the Directors have ever secured and was greatly enjoyed by the big crowd yesterday afternoon. The seven Arab acrobats made a big hit in their tumbling and gymnastic performances giving two different acts that produced volleys of applause. Some really wonderful tumbling is done while the lady member of the troupe is a very clever contortionist.

The children especially enjoyed the entertainment provided by Mlle. Celina de Leo's trained animals which included eight dogs, a pony, a mule and two monkeys. Her wonderful control of her pets and their cleverness was greatly enjoyed by the audience. The dogs are especially good. One collie jumps on and off a pony going at full speed around the ring while two of the dogs turn back somersaults skilfully. The act is meritorious and the directors are to be congratulated upon securing such an attraction.

Brigade Make Fine Impression

Chief Howard and the Peterborough Fire Brigade gave a parade that was enjoyed not only by visitors but by citizens as well. All the vehicles were out including the chief's rig, chemical and hose waggon, second hose waggon ladder waggon and engine and they made an imposing procession as they filed past the grand stand and then turning at the end of the stretch swept past again at full speed with the gongs clanging and the steamer whistle tooting merrily. The men and equipment made a very favourable impression upon the crowd and it was a fine advertisement to exhibit to outside visitors to let them see how up-to-date the people of Peterborough are in regard to fire fighting facilities.

The 57th Band under the leadership of Mr. Gliddon enlivened the proceedings frequently by rendering a choice programme during the afternoon. Mr. Jos. Halpany, one of the bandsmen made a hit in his vocal solo "Don't Take Me Home," with band accompaniment.

The Night Entertainment

The night attendance surpassed all expectations and judging from the applause that greeted the performance, the crowd was well satisfied with the entertainment provided. And it was a crowd. Every available space in the Grand Stand was taken and all along the fence lining the space where the programme was being presented were throngs of people all striving to gain the best place from where the various acts could be seen with advantage Many persons came in the afternoon, availing themselves of the opportunity to secure their supper on the grounds and remained for the evening. Then those who were unable to go down in the afternoon were present, each south bound street car from seven o'clock until half-past eight was loaded.

The programme was carried out without a hitch, everything passing off satisfactorily to both the directors and the spectators. The grounds and main building were brilliantly illuminated, presenting a bright and attractive appearance. The full band of the 57th Regiment was present and under the leadership of Mr. Rupert Gliddon rendered a splendid concert which greatly enhanced the enjoyment of the evening. The events opened with the military display and tournament contributed by a detachment of the 24th Field Battery under Sergt. Major Fee. This feature was something of a novelty in the Peterborough Fair and apparently took well with the crowd. It consisted first in the parade of the Battery in front of the Grand Stand and the midnight alarm. The second part of the performance given by the Battery was bareback wrestling. This was interesting and exciting and so evenly matched were the contestants that it was declared a tie. The Tug-of-War with four men on horseback on each side furnished lots of excitement and was decidedly a most entertaining feature.

The Victoria Cross Race, enacting an engagement in which some of the soldiers who are injured are carried off by their fellow comrades was particularly well done as were all the acts and Sergt. Fee and his men are deserving of the greatest praise. thrilling acts ever given here. Mlle. Intervening the various military manoeuvres the Arab troupe of gymnasts gave their famous acrobatic performance including some of the most thrilling acts ever given here. Mlle. Celino de Leo's grand performing animals in their clever acting were received with great applause. Fire Chief Howard and the brigade also gave a splendid exhibition and Mr. Jos. Halpany delighted the large concourse with his comic songs.

EXHIBITION NOTICES.

There are so many meritorious special exhibits on the Fair grounds and in the main building that the reader will be interested in a further detailed description of a number of the most important displays.

New Novelties in Tents by J. J. Turner & Sons.

No visitor at this fair could have failed to be attracted by the striking tent exhibit of the ever-resourceful tent-makers, Messrs. J. J. Turner & Sons. Their exhibit was surmounted by attractive, red, white and blue banners, which floated in the breeze, and a unique kite advertisement which soared up into the sky and kept hovering over the vicinity of their display. Real interest was taken in the new tent novelties on exhibition, because of their practical usefulness and special advantages under varied circumstances. There was a splendid sample of a Collapsible Folding Tent, fitted up with three rooms—two bedrooms and sitting room. Regular doors and windows with screens were supplied for a thorough circulation of fresh air. No pegs or ropes to bother with. This tent is the same as received such marked attention at the Toronto Exposition. There was also shown a silk prospector's tent, with complete camping outfit, a hunting tent and camp equipment; a consumptive tent; and outdoor sleeping tents for home treatment of patients.

Along with the tents were displayed a varied collection of horse blankets and other goods "made in Peterborough," by Turner & Sons.

Grafton & Co.'s Hand-Made Clothing.

Ever since the Messrs. Grafton & Co. have been established in Peterborough their name has been an attraction at Peterborough's Fall Fairs, their displays have given them a prominence that has made their firm as familiar as household words in this city and county. This year their business was attractively emblazoned all over the fair grounds wherever the eye could reach. The story of their "high-grade, union-made clothing" was told in a varied manner, on attractive bulletins; and visitors could not fail to carry home with them lasting impressions of the good qualities of Grafton's clothing. It is conceded that the phenomenal success of the Peterborough branch store, managed by Mr. W. Conway, is due to the fact that the Grafton garments recommend themselves. Once a Grafton customer always a Grafton customer has been the experience of many of the patrons of this firm in this district. Mr. Conway is one of the most active of the Exhibition Directors.

White & Gillespie's Display.

This was an exhibit that directly appealed to the practical farmers, and was made up of a varied collection of farm and dairy needs which were of special interest to them. The favourite Simplex Cream Separator is shown in this exhibit and its superiority is being demonstrated by Mr. R. Peters, one of the expert salesmen for this county. It is worth repeating, because it has been found true, that the Simplex Link Blade Cream Separator possesses valuable improvements which no other separator has. The two most important of these are exclusively controlled by the makers of the Simplex, and are the Link-blade separating device and the self-balancing bowl. There was also a duplex make of the Wyandotte Cleaner and Cleanser, now so much used by dairymen and butter and cheese factories and with so much satisfaction. Samples of the International Stock Food are also shown, which is sold in Peterborough by White & Gillespie at their grocery store, 336 George street. There is also exhibited samples of the New Eureka Churn and the Eureka Root Pulper for cutting stock food, for both of which White & Gillespie are the live agents.

The circulation manager of Farm and Dairy and the Canadian Horticulturist had an office in the exhibit where sample copies of their popular publications were to be had. The attractive features of these publications was manifest by the number of enquirers regarding their special Exhibition offers.

International Stock Food.

As the sale of this improved stock food is constantly growing in Peterborough, a further reference to it will be of interest to those specially concerned. This specially prepared food is manufactured by the International Stock Food Company, Toronto and Minneapolis and has been sold in Peterborough for the past six years. much interest was being taken in it by farmers, stock breeders, dairymen, poultrymen and others. The following are the specialties: International Stock Food, Poultry Food, Worm Powder, Heave Cure, Colic Cure, Honey Tar Foot Remedy, Harness Soap, Silver Pine Healing Oil, Gall Cure, Pheno-Chloro, Absorbent, and Cough and Lung Cure. The company has a capital of $2,000,000. Its factory contains 17 acres of floor space, and is many times larger than any other stock food factory in the world. They employ over 4,000 people, and every one of their preparations is sold with a positive guarantee printed on each label, to refund the money in any case of failure, and their guarantee is as good as gold. As to the cheapness of feeding International Stock Food—the average feed for fattening hogs is two-thirds of one pound per month, which only costs ten cents per month. It is claimed that the average cost of this food for milch cows is only 17½ cents per month. For fattening steers, 17½ cents per month, and for calves 10 cents per month. The Medicated Poultry Food is said to give remarkable results. It prevents disease, cures chicken cholera, and greatly increases the egg production. All these specialties are on sale at the grocery store of the local agents, Messrs. White & Gillespie, No. 336 George street.

Lang & Maher, the "Daylight" Clothiers and Furnishers.

A cordial handshake from Mr. Jas. Lang and his cordial assistant, Mr. George Wesley was the way the Examiner representative was introduced to the attractive clothier's exhibit made by the firm of Lang & Maher. This was the sixth time this firm have made an exhibition of their Clothing at the Peterborough Fair.

On this occasion, they were "monarchs of all they surveyed," in the clothing line at the Industrial. The aspiring firm were out for business hot foot, and held the fort to the admiring gaze of record-breaking attendances of visitors in their own specially designed clothing building. Their exhibit represented a portable clothing store of unique design, with features that attracted everybody that passed that way. An inspection of the clothing displayed furnished a comprehensive knowledge of what is to be the correct thing in the new styles for men's, youths' and boys wear this season.

Inside the picturesque marquee were to be seen the latest in swagger fall overcoats. Two, especially, are worthy of mention, and are made by the T. D. people. The "Lieutenant Overcoat has a military front and collar, box-pleated sides, and slash patch pockets, made in a handsome pattern of heavy Scotch Tweed. The other is the "Admiral" Overcoat, with new strap collar and other features similar to the "Lieutenant." These two toppers ought to have a big pull with the young men of Peterborough. There was also shown samples of waterproof and Cravenette Overcoats. The new Fall Suits shown were made up in "Sovereign" and "Fit-rite" brands; which this firm have popularized in this section. The sacque coat, single or double breasted, will rule, the only change being a somewhat lower cut than is usual in fall and winter garments. Stripe effects are largely shown. If you have not seen the new season's overcoats and suits, drop into Lang & Maher's Peterborough store, Nos. 409-411 George street, and see the swell new comers, which they call the "Limit of Swaggerdom." You are always as welcome to look as to buy.

Barrie's Mammoth Exhibit of High-Class Furs.

What may be regarded as the most imposing display of furs ever exhibited in Peterborough was made by our enterprising furriers, Messrs. Thos. Barrie & Co., corner of George and Simcoe streets. The display occupied one quarter of the entire ground floor of the main building, where a constant stream of visitors viewed the exposition with admiration and surprise.

The marked features of the Barrie exhibit were the novelties shown in the designs, the thoroughness of the workmanship, nearly every article coming from the firm's own workroom, and the fine quality of fur used, which is guaranteed in the case of the beautiful and costly seal and Persian lamb and other high grade furs. There were some splendid samples of Curicule Pony Coats, ladies' fur-lined coats and lynx and other sets. Fancy neckwear in the newest ideas, large Empire muffs and square Imperial muffs with a profusion of Hampster, squirrel and muskrat furlinings. A beautiful mink coat was also shown valued at $800, in semi-box back style.

Several examples of men's fur coats show the range of quality and price and fur collars and several styles of fur caps.

Fur rugs were prominently displayed, forming an interesting feature of the exhibit to certain admirers.

Visitors can always inspect the complete and extensive stock of Barrie & Co., at their headquarters, George and Simcoe streets where furs at all prices are shown, and alterations and repairs made in quick time and good style. If the customer has to wait to be fitted for her new coat, there is every accommodation in prettily appointed waiting rooms.

The Aristocracy of Carpets.

The Brinton Carpet Co., of Peterborough have come into the field as exhibitors this year and make a very effective showing. They occupied a whole section of the main building in a sumptuous display of the products of their Peterborough factory, which proved a revelation to thousands of visitors. The experience of half a century's existence in Kidderminster, England, has been brought to the Canadian factory and was shown in their display in the main building. Many admiring comments have been made on the handsome display of soft, velvety carpets and rugs, the designs of which are of the highest excellence. Harmonious blending of colours, striking correctness of design, and the superior quality of workmanship shown, these are the qualities that catch and hold the visitor's eye as he passes the exhibit.

The showing was something new in high-class Axminster Wilton and Brussels goods. With the view of making suggestions to the public, some very helpful ideas are given in stencilled effects on curtains and fabrics for wall decorations, which harmonize with the carpets' colours, and appealed to the artistic home decorator.

The Brinton Carpets are handled in Peterborough by three of our principal carpet dealers, Messrs. Richard Hall & Son, R. Fair & Co., and A. W. Cressman. The factory here is undergoing a process of enlarging, and the mill at present is employing nearly three times as many employees as it did this time last year, which speaks strongly for the satisfaction their carpets are giving.

The new building which is being erected by this progressive firmis 58 by 64 feet. Its erection has been rendered necessary by the great increase in the business of the firm. Gooods are now being shipped to all parts of the Domoinion and repeat orders show that the quality of the manufacture merits the public confidence.

Mr. Wadely, the Company's superintendent was present and courteously answered enquiries and extended an invitation to all to visit the mills when opportunity occurred.

Splendid Sewing Machine Display

Mr. J. W. Stuart, the hustling manager of the local agency of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, made a large display, in one of the principal sections in the building. It was the cynosure of feminine eyes. Various types of these world-known machines were shown and some were in operation. A novel new machine is also shown in weather oak, or mission wood, which is much admired. A stocking darner and a linen mender were interesting features of this display. Mr. Stuart gave away hundreds of pretty fans and souvenir views of Canada with the firm's advertising thereon.

The "Empire" Cream Separator

Farmers and dairymen were much interested in the fine type of the Empire Cream Separator shown in the main building by Mr. Fred J. Doughty, the travelling representative. These separators are built in three styles, each one a high quality, efficient machine and are being advertised as "the quality line," of cream separators. Mr. Doughty has many sales to his credit in Peterborough County as well as throughout Eastern Canada. His local address is 508 Bolivar street.

And this is the reason the Empire machine
So easy to turn, so easy to clean;
That gets the dollars and gets them all
Winter or Springtime, Summer or Fall.

If you want cream or butter as rich as the gold they bring, address Fred Doughty.

Peterborough Business College.

Messrs. Spotton & McKone, proprietors of the Peterborough Business College, have a noticeable space in the main building, where they are making an exhibit and demonstration of the practical work of their institution. Both typewriters and the wonderful adding machine are shown, and the pupil demonstrates, while blindfolded, gthe touch typewriting taught in the school, which produces speedy work. The adding machine is a new feature in a business college, the Peterborough Business College being the first in Canada to add one of these expensive machines to its equipment. An investment of $425 is required to install one of these machines.

City Music Company Are It.

Music at the Fair is one of the pleasant features which everyone, of whatever temperament, can take an interest in. Of course, we mean pianos—and a "Nordheimer" at that with an "Evans Bros." in the chorus. The thousands who heard these magnificently toned instruments were well repaid, and Mr. Ruse and other members of the City Music Company deserve the hearty thanks of the directors as well as of the visitors, for the fine musical concerts which they gave during the days of the Fair. The representatives of the firm did themselves credit, not only by their courteous information, but by the skilful playing as well.

The instruments shown were beautiful types of their class. They were taken from the regular stock in the warerooms, 308 George street, and anyone can go and get the same styles of instruments any day.

MOUNT ROBSON.

Advices have been received at the Grand Trunk General offices that Mount Robson, the highest and hitherto unassailed peak of the Rockies has been conquered by a Canadian, the Rev. Geo. Kinney, Methodist Minister of Victoria. Mr. Kinney accomplished this remarkable feat unaided on August 13th, and has authentic proofs of the ascent. Mr. Kinney started three months ago to climb the mountain, and met with innumerable obstacles, but eventually reached the summit. Mt. Robson is on the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway in the Yellowhead Pass country. It is 13,700 feet high.

Professor Coleman, of Toronto University, has made two attempts to climb this mountain, one in 1907 and one in 1908, but was not successful at either time.

Little York Abandoned.

Toronto, Sept. 18.—An employes' special will be inaugurated on Monday next by the Grand Trunk to carry trainmen residing in East Toronto to and from Mimico.

A conference of the officials was held yesterday, and it was decided that owing to the suddenness of the move of the yards from Little York to Mimico it would only be fair to the men effected who have their homes in East Toronto to give them free and rapid transportation to and from their work.

It is understood that this will only be a temporary arrangement, and that the men will be asked to move to Mimico or Belleville wherever their work is located. It is quite probable that the majority of the men will be moved to Belleville, as it is proposed to make that city the main switching point.

Grand Trunk officials announce that East Toronto has been definitely abandoned.

Fruit Growers Conclude.

St. Catharines, Sept. 18.—Delegates to the American Pomological Convention concluded with a trip through the Niagara fruit district yesterday afternoon, visiting several farms near Queenston and on the lake and river road to and from old Niagara. To-day they will conclude by a visit to the Experimental Farm at Guelph.

Perjury Charge Fails.

Brockville, Sept. 18.—The prosecution failed in the remaining two charges of perjury preferred against Fred Howarth and Newell T. Service for swearing to alleged false affidavits by which the local option bylaw, passed in the Township of Escott last May, was quashed. The prisoners in their declaration had affirmed that Alex. Kirkwood had accompanied one Cornelius McAvor into the booth and showed him how to vote. Kirkwood swore that the statement was false, and the officers in charge of the poll upheld his story to the extent of saying he was not present at the time McAvor voted. The evidence was conflicting, the defence witnesses holding that Kirkwood did enter the poll with the voter and instructed him how to mark his ballot for the measure.

THE STYLE SHOW

of

AUTUMN'S AUTHORITATIVE FEMININE FASHIONS

An Invitation is Extended to All to Attend our Supreme Achievement in the Display of Fashion's Fairest Fancies.

Special Show Days—Thursday, Friday and Saturday

On each of the above days we invite the public to witness the inauguration of the Fall styles in the feminine wearables at this store. On this important occasion will be revealed the first glimpse of the correct and elegant in Women's and Misses' outer attire for the coming season. These days will be devoted to showing rather than to selling---although these new fashions will be found so alluring and beautiful that it will be hard to resist the desire for immediate ownership.

Radical Style Changes in Tailored Suits, Dresses, Skirts, Waists, Millinery, Dress Goods, Etc., are Featured in This Display.

The influence of the Moyen, Merovingian or "Middle Ages" period has proved an inspiration to fashion designers and is the dominant note in high class fashions in both Europe and America.

The salient features are shown in the lower waist line and the draping and trimmings at the hip.

In the garment to which we now invite your inspection, the new style features will be found in all their resplendent glory. Whatever is approved of Fashion is here.

Millinery Styles that Breathe Paris

Large Hats that set well down on the head and trimmed high are in great favour, but there is an immense diversity of shapes in the new styles. These we show are the most advanced fashion thought in Women's Headwear for the opening season. See them while they are exclusive. Some of the new shades are: Pea-soup Green, Chickory-cedar, Mouse-blue, Raisin and Chestnut Brown and Raven-blue.

Complete Fall Display of Dress Goods

To-morrow Marks the Initial Showing of the New Things for the Coming Season

To-morrow we will tear aside the veil and reveal the fabrics which are to hold front place in fashionable women's favour. It is the most correct delineation of Autumnal styles in dress materials in this vicinity. Nothing which would add to its attractiveness or to a more complete picturing of the new models has been omitted.

Tailored Suits of Superb Style

Two-piece suits are leading—see them in their new elegance and exclusiveness of style.

The New Jet Hat Pins

100 dozen of new Jet Hat-Pins, with 12-inch pin, 12 different styles to choose from—round, flat, oval and oblong styles, plain and diamond studded. This is one of the extreme novelties of the season.

Main Floor, 1st Aisle.

Separate Skirts are Smartly Stylish

Quite a variety of the new styles. The "Directoire" effect is especially noteworthy with its smart lines and dressy closed panel effect. The Moyen Age tendency of style is also exemplified in new skirt effect of which we show an unequalled assortment.

You'll find it desirable to inspect this showing. Many style ideas may be obtained. When you elect to buy, you'll also find decided advantages are presented by our prices.

Let Us Make Your Fall Costume

First-hand knowledge is always best. Modistes who spend weeks at the very fountain heads of fashion are better able to create original, stylish garments than are those whose information is derived from an ofttimes poorly illustrated fashion magazine.

We have unrivalled facilities for the making of modish garments—two well equipped dressmaking departments and a fashion service par excellence. Our two designers have just returned from Paris, and their information will be yours for the asking. Insure the correctness of the Fall Costume by having it made here.

Do You Wear Kabo Corsets?

The Kabo Corsets For This Season Are Working Wonders in Producing the Long Graceful Lines That Fashion Demands.

When you wonder how you are going to get the slender waist line with the small hips that are required by present fashions, buy a Kabo Corset, style No. 1000, and you'll find that it gives you the form you wish.

Smart Fancy Belts

You will find at our Belt counter an infinite variety of Women's Belts—some extreme novelties bought while our Buyer was in Paris. Dozens and dozens of stunning effects which no other store can show.

All Priced Very Reasonably.

Women's Smart Gloves

The proper new shades in street and evening Gloves for every occasion are here in abundant variety—gloves of Cashmere, Silk, Kid and Suede.

Better gloves cannot be bought in the Dominion at the prices we have marked them.

Beautiful Fancy Handkerchiefs of the Finest Linen

The collection of Handkerchiefs which our Buyer assembled when in Europe, embraces the very newest effects in fine embroidered linens, white linens, from the best looms in Ireland.

Many beautiful designs with embroidered corners for initial.

Your Home Cheerful ?

Here We are in September !

And near the end of it too—September, than comes October; that sounds cold, does it not ? October is usually one of the coldest, dreariest months of the year, at least it seems so, owing perhaps to the warm sunny days of September having so recently passed.

Are you preparing your home for this cold dreary weather ? Is your home cheerful, bright and attractive to you and your family ? The Wall Decorations certainly make the home more pleasant, especially when good judgment is executed, colour blending perfect and the whole furnishings of the room are harmonious. We specialize on Wall Papering of the better order, at prices most moderate. Choose your Wall Decorations and House Furnishings together without inconvenience in our large attractive department on the third floor. You are welcome to go through our stock without feeling under any obligation to us to make a purchase.

BRITISH TRAIN A SAFE PLACE

Only One Passenger in Every 70,000,000 People is Killed, According to Statistics.

A British railway train is the safest place on earth, as only one passenger in every 70,000,000 is killed, and one in every 2,300,000 injured. This deduction is based upon a careful survey of the Board of Trade report on railway accidents during the year 1907. Last year the number of fires in trains amounted to 170, but it should be explained that many of these were of the most trifling description. It is a significant fact that of the number of fires reported not a solitary one occurred either directly or indirectly through a lightning flash. It would appear that for some reason railway trains are practically immune from the disastrous effects which usually mark the track of a violent thunderstorm.

What is the explanation of this fact? In reply we are told, first, that the telegraph poles alongside the railway provide a measure of protection to passing trains. These poles are usually spaced three chains, or sixty six yards, apart, and on each pole is stapled a thick galvanized-iron wire, projecting about six inches above the pole roof and terminating five or six feet below ground. This earth wire, as it is technically known, tends primarily to prevent conduction between contiguous wires, but there can be no doubt that it also serves as a lightning conductor, and that, too, in a very efficient manner.

Further, it is contended that the pieces of ironwork scattered over the roof of a train constitute a conductor or act as a safeguard against the injurious effects of atmospheric electricity.—Railway Magazine.

ALASKA-YUKON-PACIFIC-EXPOSITION.

The Passenger Department of the Grand Trunk Railway System are in receipt of advice from Seattle that the attendance on Seattle Day at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition broke all records and that over 12,000 people visited the Grand Trunk pavilion on that day.

TIME NOTHING AT THE POLE

A Man Sitting There Would be in All Twenty-four Hours at Once.

At the North Pole time is nothing, and if one were residing at the North Pole it would be unnecessary to wind one's watch. You are always at 12 o'clock and can't go out of the hotel without walking south. All times of day meet at the Pole, as the meeting-place of all the meridians. A man sitting with the invisible mathematical point right under him would be in all twenty-four hours at once. Or a twenty-four-hour watch placed on the Pole could be made to point to the correct time in every part of the world. There used to be something of an approximation to this in the extreme north of Norway, where the degrees of longitude squeeze in, until recent days. Captains of Norwegian casting schooners will tell you how inconvenient it was to change between the time of Holland at Bergen and that of Crete at the North Cape, while correct local time became indispensable.—London Chronicle.

EXHIBITION BUG

Being the Story of How a Husband Was Reminded of His Dilatory Rising.

A woman and her husband arrived late at the Exhibition grounds last night and had to be contented with crowding close to the platform. It wmas just after the Arabian acrobats had done their turn and the curtain had gone up for a vocal solo. The wife with her keener natural "rubbering" powers descried a large beetle on the platform only a few feet away. She failed to recognize it and turned to her husband for information.

"What's that crawling thing there, dear?" she asked. "Why that's an exhibition bed bug." These husbands generally think themselves clever but in this case the wife retaliated.

"Reach out and get it dear, before it crawls away. We'll bring it home and put it in the bed. It may help to route you out earlier in the mornings." Then the band played "No Wedding Bells for Me."

PLEASED WITH EXHIBITS

Mr. G. G. Publow one of the officials who possesses a thorough knowledge of the conditions of Canada's dairy industry and is a competent judge of cheese and butter is the authority for the statement that the quality of the butter exhibits at the Peterborough Fair is the equal to any he has seen in Ontario. He was delighted by the excellence of this exhibit and to prominent dairymen of this section he stated the butter was unexcelled. The cheese exhibit is also a splendid one and has been of particular interest to the many farmers who have passed through the building. The Cavanville factory won first prize for ordinary cooled cheese and Shearer for cool-cured cheese.

CUBS PLAN FAR AHEAD

By Sip Wright

I know that many people wonder how the Cubs manage to finish up there or thereabouts every year, when other teams are fighting tooth and nail to pull them down.

Well, I'll give you a little example of the way the champions plan things in advance, and then the reason will be more apparent.

The team was sitting around the hotel lobby in Pittsburg. The Pirates had taken the game that day. The champions weren't discussing what had happened, but were planning for the next day, or for any day in the future.

"Did you ever notice, said Jimmy Archer, "that when a fellow is walked he takes a couple of steps off the bag just as soon as he reaches it? He never expects a throw. Well, how about pegging just as soon as the fellow takes the first step off the sack? I used to get them that way in the minors, but I've never seen it worked up here."

"Try it the first time you see an opportunity," said Frank Chance. I'll watch for it."

"There's another I want you to watch out for," said Big Jeff Overall to Archer. "Take a man on third and one on second and I field the ball. The man on second is always way up there, thinking the play will be made on the man at third. Now its only 10 or 15 feet to the second base runner, and I'm going to play him and then go after the other fellow. You be sure to hug the plate and get my throw."

That's the way they do it. And men who have travelled with them every day during the playing season for two or three years, tell me they keep up this sort of talk daily. Every possible way of turning a trick on the opposition is figured down to the last notch during these fanning bees. The result pays, apparently, for three pennants have already been won, and the team is closing on Pittsburg mighty fast right now.

Ends Life With Razor.

Woodstock, Sept. 18.—Wm. Sutherland, an westeemed citizen, committed suicide in Lindsay's Grove, just south of the city limits, yesterday by cutting his throat with a razor.

The deceased left his home on Francis street about 8 o'clock yesterday morning, telling his folks that he was going for a stroll. As he did not return, his family became anxious and friends were sent in all directions. About three o'clock Mrs. Goodall, a neighbor, found Sutherland under a tree with a gash in his throat. She notified Chief Thompson and he and the coroner proceeded to the spot. Sutherland was quite dead. He was about 55 years of age, had been in poor health for some time and was out of work.

Fire at Metcalfe.

Metcalfe, Ont., Sept. 18.—About 11.30 Thursday night fire started in the stables of James Simpson, and spread to Simpson's general store, the postoffice and Simpson's dwelling and Weaver's bakery.

London Grant Cancelled.

Ottawa, Sept. 18.—The Canada Gazette gives notice of a cancellation of a reservation of 92,000 acres of land to the Peace River Colonization & Land Development Co.

Under the terms of an order-in-council of July 27, 1900, it was required that the company would place 1,200 settlers on homesteads within the tract. Fifty were to be located within three years after the survey, and 100 within each succeeding five years. Four years later conditions were changed, the company being given twenty years in which to locate the settlers, who were to be given free homesteads.

The company having failed to comply with the conditions of the lease the Minister of the Interior decided that it would be in the public interest to cancel the grant.

$2,000 Refund of Conscience Money.

Ottawa, Sept. 18.—The groanings of an uneasy conscience has resulted in a considerable addition to the Federal exchequer.

The Minister of Finance yesterday acknowledge the receipt of $2,000 "conscience" money.

Queer Ending to Strike.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 18.—The second strike of workmen employed at the plant of the Pressed Steel Car Co., which was declared Monday, was brought to an abrupt end yesterday.

The climax was remarkable. Having notified the foreigners that they intended to march into the mill carrying the Stars and Stripes, 2,000 American workmen who were not favorable to the strike, assembled early and cheering enthusiastically started toward the plant. On the way 1,500 Croatians and 600 Italians joined them. When the gates were reached 1,000 Slavs, Russians and Poles, who had threatened trouble if the men attempted to enter the works, also fell into line.

Army Balloon a Success.

Montlucon, France, Sept. 18.—The fall manoeuvres of the French army, in which 60,000 men are engaged, are attracting particular attention on account of the work of the dirigible balloon Republique. Although the field of operation is hilly and wooded, the Republique ascertained and disclosed to the defenders the plan of the enemy's campaign, and prevented them from falling into a skilful trap.

Beresford In New York.

New York, Sept. 18.—Admiral Lord Charles Beresford was the guest of honor yesterday at a luncheon given at the Lawyers' Club under the auspices of the Pilgrims of the United States. In a brief address Lord Beresford took occasion to refer to the European situation. He remarked that as far as Great Britain was concerned the situation looked somewhat "red ahead."

He added that in view of this situation, there was nothing else to do but for the nation to come forward with a great scheme of Imperial defence.

"What we want," continued the admiral, "is that we shall hold what we have. Supremacy at sea means life or death for the British Empire."

Sterling Bank in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Sept. 18.—The presence in the city of F. W. Broughall of the Sterling Bank, Toronto, has given rise to a report that the bank will open offices here. It is also stated that negotiations for a site are under way.

Brakeman Killed.

Guelph, Ont., Sept. 18.—Harry Parker, a brakeman on the Grand Trunk, was run over by a shunting train near Moorefield, and his body almost cut in two just below the waist line.

Sold Liquor to Miners.

Brockville, Sept. 18.—A local barkeeper was fined $10 and costs yesterday in the police court for selling liquor to miners, who testified against him.

Montreal, Sept. 18.—The Canadian Clubs' Organization was completed yesterday when W. H. D. Muller of Montreal, was elected president; C. R. McCullough, Hamilton, vice-president; with J. D. Mitchell, Winnipeg, Mayor Chisholm, Halifax, and C. F. Wade, Vancouver, as members of the executive.

Robinson's Trial Monday.

Sudbury, Sept. 18.—James Robinson, Mrs. Robinson and Tommy, their son, will receive their trial in Sudbury at the coming fall assizes, which opens Monday, Sept. 20, at 1 p.m. James Robinson will probably be charged with three separate charges of incest.

They Favour The Woman

After Hearing Testimony of Witnesses Jurors In Harvey Scott Murder Case Bring In a Verdict Calling the Shooting Justifiable Homicide —Woman Suffered by Old Man's Ill-Temper, Says Son.

London, Ont., Sept. 18.—"That Harvey Scott came to his death on the 12th day of September, 1909, by a shot fired from a revolver in the hands of Mrs. Wesley Scott in justifiable defence."

The above was the verdict of the coroner's jury which met at Thorndale to enquire into the cause of the death of the late Harvey Scott, who was shot on Monday morning last.

The hall was crowded to the doors. At first it was the intention to use a smaller hall, but many were present who could not be accommodated by the smaller one, and a collection was taken up in the crowd to pay for the larger place.

Wesley Scott, the husband of the woman now under arrest on a charge of murder, gave some of the most important evidence. His father owned the house in which he lived. He worked on the farm and received a salary of $120 per year. He ate his meals at his father's house, while his wife was left to get her own. This state of affairs has existed for years, he said.

To a question as to whether or not his wife's meals were sometimes pretty scant, he said that he was not there to see.

"Father was a man of very violent temper," said the witness. Many times he had abused the witness' wife, threatening to strike her. He used vile language, so vile, the witness said, that it could not have been worse. He knew that his father had made improper proposals to his wife, as she had complained to him. His wife was much afraid of him, and he was, too, as on many occasions he had ran away when his father was after him.

The day before the shooting the old man hit him with a pail and then went to hit him with a club, but he ran away and the old man threw the club after him. He showed the jury marks where his father had struck him.

On different occasions he said his father had come down to his place with a gun and fired at his dog and chickens.

Mrs. Harvey Scott, widow of the deceased, told of hearing Mrs. Wesley Scott and her husband quarreling shortly before the shooting.

"I did not pay much attention to them as I did not want to be mixed up in their quarrels," she said.

She later went to the son's house, some time after the shot was fired. She asked "who did this?" and the reply she received was, "I did it. He is out of the road, and I'll be out of the road, too. You can all have your money now."

Joseph Vining, a neighbor and the first to know anything of the shooting, said that he was called by Mrs. Wesley Scott. She was on the road. She told him to go to the house and he would see what was the matter. This was in answer to his query of what was the matter.

Local Option at Brantford.

Brantford, Sept. 18.—Representing the Citizen's League, Henry Yeigh, W. G. Ranton, Rev. F. J. Maxwell yesterday petitioned the City Council asking for the submission of a local option bylaw at the next municipal elections. The bylaw will receive the necessary readings Monday next, as the aldermen—11 to 4—were elected on the league ticket.

For a clumsy forgery, Albert Taylor, aged 19, was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison here yesterday. He had a check for $4.50 and added the numeral "1," securing $14.50 at the Bank of Hamilton.

Frost Kills Corn.

Chatham, Sept. 18.—The recent heavy frosts have done immense damage to the corn in Kent.

Out through the Townships of Howard and Orford, the corn has all been dried up and in many of the fields not a green leaf is to be seen.

In some parts of the county the corn has matured, and is being cut, but in the majority of cases the corn had not yet matured. As corn is the principle feed for the Kent County hogs the early frost is a most serious misfortune.

Canadian Service to Mexico.

Ottawa, Sept. 18.—The contract between the Government and the Elder-Dempster Steamship Co. for a mail and freight service between Canada and Cuba and Mexico has expired, but it will be renewed.

Meanwhile an application is now before the Government for an all-the-year round service between St. John, N.B., and the West Indies and Mexico. The present line runs from Montreal in summer and Halifax in winter.

Effects of Imperial Preference.

Washington, D.C., Sept. 18.—The imports from the United States into New Zealand fell off nearly 48 per cent., during the first quarter of 1909 as compared with the first quarter of 1908, attributable almost entirely to the action of the preferential tariff.

Dynamited Safe.

Neasho Falls, Kansas, Sept. 18.—Three robbers yesterday dynamited the safe of the Neasho Falls state bank and escaped with $3,000 in cash. The robbers exchanged shots with the city marshal.

Veteran Pilot Retires.

Kingston, Sept 18.—Owing to ill-health, Capt. James Allen, veteran pilot on the River St. Lawrence, has retired. He has been sailing for 54 years.

Girl Cremated In Prairie Fire.

Melita, Man., Sept. 18.—A prairie fire, which started near the farm of W. A. McKinney Thursday night, on the Lander-Broomhill extension, resulted in the death of Miss Alpha McKinney, aged 18, who is supposed to have been overcome by the smoke. Neighbors found the charred body. Her father is away in Iowa attending his mother's funeral.

Are Becoming Frightened

Dread of Brooklyn Man's Ability to Establish His Contention Is Driving Peary Arctic Club to Attack John Bradley, and No Expense Is Spared to Dig Up Stories of His Dealings In the Past.

New York, Sept. 18.—The exploiters of the Commander Peary news, which has so frankly and openly characterized Dr. Cook's assertion that he had discovered the north pole as a lie, and that Peary could prove it, are beginning to fear that Peary's proof will not be forthcoming.

Then too, they take due cognizance of the dignified manner in which Dr. Cook has received such reports.

Their discomfort is apparent in several ways. Their agents throughout the country have been ordered to search the records and wire anything that would tend to show that E. R. Bradley, Cook's backer, was a former gambler, or was run out of Fort Worth, Texas, and ruled off or barred from racing his horses on several American tracks. They are also endeavoring to show that Bradley advanced ten thousand dollars to equip and provide for the expedition on a "gamble" that he would realize a quarter of a million dollars on Cook's lecture tour.

These, with other facts, the Metropolitan Press learns, are being collected for a grand attack on Dr. Cook, and his backer. The object is obviously apparent.

Nor is despair alone depicted in this quarter. The Peary Arctic Club, of which Peary is a member, have taken steps to organize a reception for the explorer, and many of their members are said to be opposed to the stand that Peary has taken. They do not believe he can disprove Cook's claims.

Little Son Gives Clue.

Nanaimo, B.C., Sept. 18.—"I know who killed my papa, and I know who my next papa will be," was the reply made by the six-year-old son of the murdered man, Gus Carlson, when told that his father was dead.

This, together with information secured during an interview of several hours' by Sergeant Murray, of the provincial police, with Annie Hoult, a sister of Mrs. Carlson, was the cause yesterday morning of Constables Keen and Cassidy driving to South Wellington, a suburb of this city, and returning with a man named Holmes, aged 20. He at one time boarded with the Carlson family, but who was ejected from the house by Carlson, who threatened to kill him if he caught him on the premises again.

Holmes will probably be charged with murder, and Mrs. Carlson with being his accomplice. Mrs. Carlson is weak physically, and could not possibly have herself carried out the murder.

Postal Employe Pardoned.

Kingston, Sept. 18.—Bishop of Ottawa, a former postoffice employe, released from penitentiary after serving six months of a three years' term for opening letters, was pardoned because of the discrepancy in terms given others for like offences.

In Ottawa, another offender was sentenced to only three months in jail by Magistrate O'Keefe, who, it seems, was away when young Bishop was sent up by another magistrate. An employe in Lindsay for a somewhat similar offence was in jail only an hour.

It was considered that Bishop had been too severely punished altogether, as compared to the punishment given others, and the Justice Department decided to free him.

Woman Caught Burglar.

Vancouver, Sept. 17.—Coming home from a shopping trip with her arms loaded with bundles, Miss Nelson opened her front door to see a pair of stockinged feet attempting to hide from view. Without the least hesitation the woman dropped her packages and grappled with the man, who struggled desperately to get free. She proved the stronger and finally marched her prisoner out to the sidewalk, where she hailed a passing man.

"Hold this man till I call the police," said the woman.

"Anything to accommodate you, madame," replied the man, but just what transpired between the man and his captive is unknown. When the lady returned after informing the police, both were gone.

False Teeth Proved Fatal.

Ottawa, Sept. 18.—At the inquest on the body of Edward Keating, who was supposed to have been electrocuted at the fair grounds Thursday in endeavoring to pull down the Nassr airship, which had become entangled in electric wires, it developed that Keating could have been revived had he not swallowed an upper set of false teeth.

Nassr's assistant, who was resuscitated, received a heavier voltage than did Keating.

Irish Bill Passes.

London, Sept. 18.—The Irish Land Bill which was introduced in Parliament on March 30 by Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, passed through its final stage in the House of Commons yesterday by a vote of 174 to 51.

The House of Lords probably will pass the measure after modifying the clauses regarding compulsory acquisition of land.

Mortgage bonds and debentures of the railroads of the U. S. and Canada, Mexico and the Argentine, as well as the funds of all foreign Governments were included in the list of securities in which the trustees of estates purchased from life tenants under the Irish land bill may be hereafter invest this purchase money.

Why Rosebery Left Liberals.

London, Sept. 18.—In a preface which ex-Premier Lord Rosebery has written in a pamphlet reproducing his Glasgow speech, he declares that it is untrue that he left the Liberal party. On the contrary, the Liberal party left him and went ahead with alarming velocity and made a new brand for the party at every general election.

The Premier Wants A Fight

British Premier Addresses Remarkable Demonstration In Birmingham —Women Threw Toy Bombs and Wield Axes During the Proceedings—Several Persons Hurt— A Few of Them Are Arrested.

Birmingham, Sept. 19.—Mr. Asquith, the Premier, last night addressed a great budget demonstration here. He declared that the House of Lords was impotent in finance, and that the Liberals were eager for a fight should the House of Lords venture to reject the budget.

The meeting was remarkable because of the frenzied behavior of the suffragettes, who threw top bombs and wielded axes during the proceedings. Two of the women climbed to the roof of a building adjacent to Bingley Hall, where the meeting was held, and loosened tiles and bricks with axes and pelted the police below. Several persons were hurt. The suffragettes threw missiles which smashed windows in the train in which Premier Asquith was departing from the city after the meeting. Several of them were arrested.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The abdication of the King of Greece is regarded as inevitable.

Sixty thousand men are engaged in the fall manoeuvres of the French army.

Bishop McCloskey of Kentucky, the oldest Catholic bishop in the United States, is dead.

Mansell Reese was killed and another man badly injured by the fall of part of a mine roof at Coal Creek.

Dr. J. Mark Baldwin, formerly of Toronto University, has been appointed head of the Mexican National University, with practical supervision of the national system of education.

The Attorney-General of Quebec has ordered an investigation into the death of Joseph Siloux of St. Andre Argentine, Que., who was shot dead while in company with one Sallerman.

Coroner Scott and the police are trying to discover the identity of the person who threw a shoe-box containing the body of a murdered baby from a train near Niagara University on Thursday afternoon.

Several Methodist district meetings have passed resolutions regretting the granting of a charter to the Metropolitan Racing Association, and calling for an amendment to the criminal code governing race-track gambling.

A tree only five inches thick, blown across the Great Northern tracks on one of the switchbacks on the Granby Mine Hill, near Phoenix, B.C., caused an accident Thursday night which resulted in the instant death of Roderick Olsen, aged 22, fireman, and the death, after a few hours' suffering, of Engineer John Lobner, aged 25.

CUT HEAD OFF CORPSE.

Frank Anthony of Toronto Arrested on Mutilation Charge.

Toronto, Sept. 18.—Charged with mutilating the body of his son-in-law, Frank Anthony, of 543 West Adelaide street, an employe of the Gurney Foundry Co., was yesterday arrested by Provincial Constable Hughes of Orangeville, and taken to that town on the 4.45 C.P.R. train.

The warrant was issued by James Pattullo, police magistrate of Orangeville.

The circumstances which led to Anthony's arrest arose from the result of a trial in Orangeville last spring At the assizes Jeremiah Morrison, proprietor of the Dufferin House, who had for his counsel H. L. Drayton, K.C., of Toronto, was sued for damages by Mrs. Wm. Gray for the death of her husband, which she alleged was due to severe treatment at the hands of the hotelkeeper. The jury rendered a verdict in favor of the defendant.

Evidence in the case was given by Drs. James and T. H. Henny, who performed the postmortem on the body of Wm. Gray, and after the trial the remains were interred.

Anthony states that a couple of days after the trial he obtained an order from Thomas Stevenson, J.P., to exhume the body and for the purpose of obtaining expert evidence so that Mrs. Gray might appeal against the verdict of the jury had the head brought to Toronto for examination. The wound, which Mrs. Gray alleges to have caused his death, was inflicted on the head. Gray died last fall, months after he had received the alleged injury.

The head is still in Toronto and the trunk in the grave at Orangeville.

Whiskey Under Strength.

Guelph, Sept. 18.—Despite the fact that they swore that their Imperial whiskey was as it had been sold to them when sealed, and that it had not been changed or adulterated in any way, and despite the fact that their story was believed by the court, J. Zinger of Four Corners, and W. W. Beitz, of the Imperial Hotel, were yesterday fined $10 and costs each for selling whiskey not up to the standard of the label on the bottle of 22 under proof.

The whiskey was analyzed at 24 under proof, or better than the best barrel goods. According to the law, Magistrate Saunders said he was absolutely precluded from giving any other verdict.

"The law is a hardship on you, I believe," said his worship, "but I can do nothing but convict. I would like to see steps taken to have the law changed. The certificate of the analysis is absolute evidence, under the law, and apparently your only protection would be to test the whiskey before selling it."

Two Stratford Runaways.

Stratford, Sept. 18.—Two Stratford boys, Russell Stewart and Roy Pitcher, aged 15 and 12 respectively, ran away from home Thursday. It is thought their objective point may have been Toronto, where the police have been communicated with.

U. S. Treasurer Resigns.

Washington, Sept. 18.—United States Treasurer Charles H. Treat has resigned from that office to take effect in October.

J. S. IRVIN, Ottawa, Managing Director The International Portland Cement Company, Limited.
HONOURABLE W. C. EDWARDS, Ottawa, Senator, Director of Canadian Bank of Commerce, Director of Toronto General Trusts Corporation.
W. D. MATTHEWS, Toronto, Vice-President The Dominion Bank; Director of Canadian Pacific Railway.
R. W. KELLY, New York, President of The Vulcan Portland Cement Company, Limited.
HONOURABLE ROBERT MACKAY, Montreal, Senator, Director of Canadian Pacific Railway; Director of Bank of Montreal.
W. R. WARREN, New York, Director of The Vulcan Portland Cement Company, Limited; Shawinigan Water and Power Company, Limited.
W. H. E. BRAVENDER, Calgary, Vice-President of Alberta Portland Cement Company, Limited.
E. M. YOUNG, Allentown, Penn., Vice-President of the Lehigh Portland Cement Company.
HONOURABLE GEORGE A. COX, Toronto, Senator, Director Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company; Canadian Bank of Commerce
W. M. AITKEN, Montreal, Director Montreal Trust Company.
CHARLES H. CAHAN, Montreal, President Western Canada Power Company, Limited.

The Canada Cement Company, Limited, is a new Company which has been incorporated for the purpose of taking over the undertakings and businesses of the following Companies, now doing business in Canada, as manufacturers of Portland Cement and like products, viz. :—

The Lakefield Portland Cement Company, Montreal, Quebec.
The Lakefield Portland Cement Company, Lakefield, Ontario.
The Owen Sound Portland Cement Company, Limited, Shallow Lake, Ontario.
The Alberta Portland Cement Company, Limited, Calgary, Alberta.
The Belleville Portland Cement Company, Limited, Belleville, Ontario.
The International Portland Cement Company, Limited, Hull, Quebec.
The Vulcan Portland Cement Company, Limited, Montreal, Quebec.
The Lehigh Portland Cement Company, Limited, Belleville, Ontario.
The Canadian Portland Cement Company, Limited, Marlbank, Ontario.
The Canadian Portland Cement Company, Limited, Port Colborne, Ontario.

The Canada Cement Company, Limited, by means of contracts already made, proposes to acquire control of a majority of the shares of the capital stock of the following companies :—

The Western Canada Cement and Coal Company, Limited, Exshaw, Alberta, and
The Eastern Canada Portland Cement Company, Limited, Quebec.

The plants, which will be owned or controlled by the new Company, are believed to be among the best constructed and most efficiently equipped on this continent; and, under a competent central management, not only will a uniform standard of quality be secured in the combined product, but an equable standard of prices may be maintained throughout the whole country. These plants will have a total capacity in excess of 4,500,000 barrels of Portland cement per annum.

ESTIMATED EARNINGS :

The following may be regarded as a conservative estimate of the earnings of the Company :—

NET EARNINGS :

The estimated annual net earnings of the Company, based on the quantities of cement being sold, during the present year, by the companies comprised in the merger, and on the costs of manufacture, under existing conditions amount to $1,900,000

FIXED CHARGES :

Interest on $5,000,000 of First Mortgage Bonds, at six per cent. per annum	$ 300,000
Sinking Fund payment on bonds, two per cent. per annum	100,000
Preferential Dividend of 7 per cent. per annum on $10,500,000 Prefence Shares	735,000
		$1,135,000
Leaving available for dividends on Ordinary Shares of the Company		$ 765,000

THE CANADIAN MARKET FOR PORTLAND CEMENT

The demand for Portland Cement in Canada has increased remarkably during the last five years. In 1904 the total consumption of Portland Cement in the Dominion was 1,694,988 barrels, of which 784,630 barrels were imported. In 1908 the consumption, notwithstanding the general industrial depression was 3,134,338 barrels, and no less than 3,495,961 barrels were manufactured in Canada. Existing trade conditions indicate that the consumption during 1909 will largely exceed that of 1908.

The increase is not abnormal, nor due to merely local causes. In the year 1888, it is estimated that less than 200,000 barrels of cement were manufactured on the North American continent; and the enormous growth of the business is shown by the fact that in 1908 approximately 55,000,000 barrels were there produced. The manufacture of Portland Cement commenced in Canada in 1888, but until 1904 the importations into Canada of the foreign product exceeded the Canadian production.

The report of John McLeish, B.A., chief of the Division of Mineral Resources and Statistics of the Department of Mines, Canada, on the production of cement in Canada during the calendar year 1908, furnishes the following comparative statement :—

Calendar Year.	Canadian.		Foreign.	Total.
	Manufactured.	Consumed.	Imported into Canada.	Consumed in Canada.
	Barrels.	Barrels.	Barrels.	Barrels.
1904	908,990	910,358	784,630	1,694,988
1905	1,541,568	1,346,548	917,558	2,264,106
1906	2,152,562	2,119,764	666,931	2,785,695
1908	3,495,961	2,665,289	469,849	3,134,338

Great as has been the development of the Portland Cement industry in Canada since 1904, it is only reasonable to assume that this growth will be largely exceeded in the immediate future, and for many years to come. The enormous public works in progress and in contemplation, including Railways, Canals, Bridges, Harbour Improvements, Piers, Wharves, Piles, Pavements, Buildings Foundations, and Buildings, etc., will all require proportionately large quantities of the manufactured products of the new Company. The hydro-electric developments throughout the country will increase the demand, while the rapid substitution of reinforced concrete for other materials in the building trades will render necessary an increased production on the part of the new Company.

OBJECTS OF THE MERGER :

According to the returns made to the Dominion Government by the cement manufacturers, the average price at their works obtained by them in 1908 was $1.39 per barrel. This was the lowest price ever reported by the Canadian mills. In 1906 the average price was from $1.65 to $1.70, and in 1907 about $1.60. At the beginning of the present year it was realized by a number of the manufacturers that, even without any increase in prices, the business would be rendered much more profitable by a merger of several of the large competing companies on a conservative basis. The Canada Cement Company, Limited, is the outcome. The new Company will own or control cement-producing plants at the central points of distribution from the St. Lawrence River west to the Rocky Mountains; and, by securing a more efficient organisation which will be able to regulate the distribution of the manufactured product from these central points to the centres of consumption, large economies in the present cost of freight, which represents a large percentage of the ultimate cost to the consumer will undoubtedly be effected. The establishment of one executive office in the City of Montreal, and the elimination of competitive salesmen, middlemen, and brokers is also expected to effect a considerable saving in the costs of the Sales Department under the new management.

Forms of application can be obtained at any office of the Royal Trust Company or of the Royal Securities Corporation, Limited.

IMPORTANT FACTS

"A quart of milk is practically equal to a pound of beef in food value."

Professor Dean, of the Ontario Agricultural College. "The composition of wheat is higher in protein and heat of combustion than any other cereal prepared for human food."

Results of analysis by Bureau of Chemistry, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture:

ORANGE MEAT is simply the whole wheat berry, steam cooked, mixed with malt, flaked and toasted. This process develops in each wheat berry the highest percentage of grape sugars. It converts the starches into a form most easily digested and assimilated

PROPAGATING GOOSEBERRIES AND CURRANTS

From Farm and Dairy.

Probably there is no fruit that propagates with more ease than the gooseberry and currant. Well ripened shoots of one season's growth, cut into eight-inch lengths, when handled properly, root very readily. Cuttings can be made either in the spring or fall. Fall cuttings are set out and rooted before cold weather and will necessarily have to be made early in the season. Cuttings made in late fall are stored in damp sawdust until time for setting in the nursery row.

Cut the base square and the tops with a slope so one can be distinguished from the other, as it is very necessary that the top be up when in the ground. Prepare the nursery land as soon as it can be done with safety, and mark off in rows three feet apart. The cuttings should be set about six inches apart in the row, and deep enough so that only the top buds are above the ground. Pack the soil firmly against the cutting so that there will be no air spaces at the bottom. If air spaces are left the cutting will not grow. A quick way to set cuttings is to plow a furrow, set them against the land side and pack the dirt back in with the foot.

Gooseberries do not root as readily as currants, especially such varieties as the Downing and English types. Here sometimes mound layering is resorted to. Cut back the bush to force an abundant sucker growth. About mid-summer mound up with earth, leaving only the tips of the shoots exposed. It requires about two years to produce a well-rooted plant of the English type; the American will root in one year.

Depend upon it, whoever tries to sell you a substitute is doing so for the profit and not for your good. "D. & L." Menthol plasters for stiffness, etc., have many imitators. Beware of the substitute. Get the genuine made by Davis & Lawrence Co.

SIR NIGEL

BY A. CONAN DOYLE.

Copyright 1905, 1906, by A. Conan Doyle

Along the narrow winding path between the great oak trees there rode a dark sallow man in a scarlet tabard who blew so loudly upon a silver trumpet that they heard the clanging call long before they set eyes on him. Slowly he advanced, pulling up every fifty paces to make the forest ring with another warlike blast. The comrades rode forward to meet him.

"I pray you," said Nigel, "to tell me who you are and why you blow upon this trumpet."

The fellow shook his head, so Nigel repeated the question in French, the common language of chivalry, spoken at that age by every gentleman in Western Europe.

The man put his lips to the trumpet and blew another long note before he answered. "I am Gaston de Castrier," said he, "the humble Squire of the most worthy and valiant knight Raoul de Tubiers, de Pestels, de Grimsard, de Mersac, de Leoy, de Bastanac, who also writes himself Lord of Pons. It is his order that I ride always a mile in front of him to prepare all to receive him, and he desires me to blow upon a trumpet not out of vainglory, but out of greatness of spirit, so that none may be ignorant of his coming should they desire to encounter him."

Nigel sprang from his horse with a cry of joy, and began to unbutton his doublet. "Quick, Aylward, quick!" he said. "He comes, a knight errant comes! Was there ever such a chance of worshipfully winning worship? Untruss the harness whilst I loose my clothes! Good sir, I beg you to warn your noble and valiant master that a poor Squire of England would implore him to take notice of him and to do some small deed upon him as he passes."

But already the Lord of Pons had come in sight. He was a huge man upon an enormous horse, so that together they seemed to fill up the whole long dark archway under the oaks. He was clad in full armor of a brasen hue with only his face exposed, and of this face there was little visible save a pair of arrogant eyes and a great black beard, which flowed through the open visor and down his breastplate. To the crest of his helmet was tied a small brown glove, nodding and swinging above him. He bore a long lance with a red square banner at the end, charged with a black boar's head, and the same symbol was engraved upon his shield. Slowly he rode through the forest, ponderous, menacing, with dull thudding of his charger's hoofs and constant clank of metal, while always in front of him came the distant peal of the silver trumpet calling all men to admit his majesty and to clear his path ere they be slain from it.

Never in his dreams had so perfect a vision come to cheer Nigel's heart, and as he struggled with his clothes, glancing up continually at this wondrous traveler, he pattered forth prayers of thanksgiving to the good Saint Paul who had shown such loving kindness to his unworthy servant and thrown him in the path of so excellent and debonair a gentleman.

But alas! how often at the last instant the cup is dashed from the lips! This joyful chance was destined to change suddenly to unexpected and grotesque disaster—disaster so strange and so complete that through all his life Nigel flushed crimson when he thought of it. He was busily stripping his hunting-costume, and with feverish haste he had doffed boots, hat, hose, doublet and cloak, so that nothing remained save a pink jupon and pair of silken drawers. At the same time Aylward was hastily unbuckling the load with the intention of handing his master his armor piece by piece, when the Squire gave one last challenging peal from his silver trumpet into the very ear of the spare horse.

In an instant it had taken to its heels, the precious armor upon its back, and thundered away down the road which they had traversed. Aylward jumped upon his mare, drove his prick spurs into her sides and galloped after the runaway as hard as he could ride. Thus it came about that in an instant Nigel was shorn of all his little dignity, had lost his two horses, his attendant and his arms, and found himself a lonely and unarmed man standing in his shirt and drawers upon the pathway down which the burly figure of the Lord of Pons was slowly advancing.

The knight errant, whose mind had been filled by the thought of the maiden whom he had left behind at St. Jean—the same whose glove dangled from his helmet—had observed nothing that had occurred. Hence, all that met his eyes was a noble yellow horse, which was tethered by the track, and a small young man, who appeared to be a lunatic since he had undressed hastily in the heart of the forest, and stood now with an eager anxious face clad in his underlinen amid the scattered debris of his garments. Of such a person the high Lord of Pons could take no notice, and so he pursued his inexorable way, his arrogant eyes looking out into the distance and his thoughts set intently upon the maiden of St. Jean. He was dimly aware that the little crasy man in the undershirt ran a long way beside him in his stockings, begging, imploring and arguing.

"Just one hour, most fair sir, just one hour at the longest, and a poor Squire of England shall ever hold himself your debtor! Do but condescend to rein your horse until my harness comes back to me! Will you not stoop to show me some small deed of arms? I implore you, fair sir, to spare me a little of your time and a handstroke or two are you go upon your way!"

Lord de Pons motioned impatiently with his gauntleted hand, as one might brush away an importunate fly, but when at last Nigel became desperate in his clamor he thrust his spurs into his great war-horse, and clashing like a pair of cymbals he thundered off through the forest. So he rode upon his majestic way, until two days later he was slain by Lord Reginald Cobham in a field near Weybridge.

When after a long chase Aylward secured the spare horse and brought it back, he found his master seated upon a fallen tree, his face buried in his hands and his mind clouded with humiliation and grief. Nothing was said, for the matter was beyond words, and so in moody silence they rode upon their way.

But soon they came upon a scene which drew Nigel's thoughts away from his bitter trouble, for in front of them there rose the towers of a great building with a small gray sloping village around it, and they learned from a passing hind that this was the hamlet and Abbey of Battle. Together they drew rein upon the low ridge and looked down into that valley of death from which even now the reek of blood seems to rise. Down beside that sinister lake and amid those scattered bushes sprinkled over the naked flank of the long ridge was fought that long-drawn struggle betwixt two most noble foes with broad England as the prize of victory. Here, up and down the low hill, hour by hour the grim struggle had waxed and waned, until the Saxon army had died where it stood. King, court, house-carl and fyrdsman, each in their ranks even as they had fought. And now, after all the stress and toil, the tyranny the savage revolt, the fierce suppression, God had made His purpose complete, for here were Nigel the Norman and Aylward the Saxon with good-fellowship in their hearts and a common respect in their minds, with the same banner and the same cause, riding forth to do battle for their old mother England.

And now the long ride drew to an end. In front of them was the blue sea, flecked with the white sails of ships. Once more the road passed upward from the heavy-wooded plain to the springy turf of the chalk downs. Far to the right rose the grim fortalice of Pevensey, squat and powerful, like one great block of rugged stone, the parapet twinkling with steel caps and crowned by the royal banner of England. A flat expanse of reeded marshland lay before them, out of which rose a single wooded hill, crowned with towers, with a bristle of masts rising out of the green plain some distance to the south of it. Nigel looked at it with his hand shading his eyes, and then urged Pommers to a trot. The town was Winchelsea, and there amid that cluster of houses on the hill the gallant Chandos must be awaiting him.

CHAPTER XIV.

They passed a ferry, wound upward by a curving path, and then, having satisfied a guard of men-at-arms, were admitted through the frowning arch of the Pipewell Gate. There waiting for them, in the middle of the east street, the sun gleaming upon his lemon-colored beard, and puckering his single eye, stood Chandos himself, his legs apart, his hands behind his back, and a welcoming smile upon his quaint high-nosed face. Behind him a crowd of little boys were gazing with reverent eyes at the famous soldier.

"Welcome, Nigel!" said he, "and you also, good archer! I chanced to be walking on the city wall, and I thought from the color of your horse that it was indeed you upon the Udimore Road. How have you fared, young squire errant? Have you held bridges or rescued damsels or slain oppressors on your way from Tilford?"

"Nay, my fair lord, I have accomplished nothing; but I once had hopes—" Nigel flushed at the remembrance.

"I will give you more than hopes, Nigel. I will put you where you can dip both arms to the elbow into danger and honor, where peril will sleep with you at night and rise with you in the morning and the very air you breathe be laden with it. Are you ready for that, young sir?"

"I can but pray, fair lord, that my spirit will rise to it."

Chandos smiled an approving smile and laid his thin brown hand on the youth's shoulder. "Good!" said he. "It is the mute hound which bites the hardest. The babbler is ever the hangback. Bide with me here, Nigel, and walk upon the ramparts. Archer, do you lead the horses to the 'Sign of the Broom Pod' in the high street, and tell my varlets to see them aboard the cog Thomas before nightfall. We sail at the second hour after curfew. Come hither, Nigel, to the crest of the corner turret, for from it I will show you what you have never seen."

It was but a dim and distant white cloud upon the blue water seen far off over the Dungeness Point, and yet the sight of it flushed the young Squire's cheeks and sent the blood hot through his veins. It was the fringe of France, that land of chivalry and glory, the stage where name and fame were to be won. With burning eyes he gazed across at it, his heart rejoicing to think that the hour was at hand when he might tread that sacred soil. Then his gaze crossed the immense stretch of the blue sea, dotted over with the sails of fishing-boats, until it rested upon the double harbor beneath packed with vessels of every size and shape, from the pessoners and creyers which plied up and down the coast to the great cogs and galleys which were used either as war-ships or merchantmen as the occasion served. One of them was at that instant passing out to sea, a huge galleass, with trumpets blowing and nakers banging, the flag of Saint George flaunting over the broad purple sail, and the decks sparkling from end to end with steel. Nigel gave a cry of pleasure at the splendor of the sight.

"Aye, lad," said Chandos, "it is the Trinity of Rye, the very ship on which I fought at Sluys. Her deck ran blood from stem to stern that day. But turn your eyes this way, I beg you, and tell me if you see aught strange about this town."

Nigel looked down at the noble straight street, at the Roundel Tower, at the fine church of Saint Thomas, and the other fair buildings of Winchelsea. "It is all new," said he—"church, castle, houses, all are new."

"You are right, fair son. My grandfather can call to mind the time when only the conies lived upon this rock. The town was down yonder by the sea, until one night the waves rose upon it and not a house was left. See, yonder is Rye, huddling also on a hill, the two towns like poor sheep when the waters are out. But down there under the blue water and below the Camber Sand lies the true Winchelsea—tower, cathedral, walls and all, even as my grandfather knew it, when the first Edward was young upon the throne."

For an hour or more Chandos paced upon the ramparts with his young Squire at his elbow and talked to him of his duties and of the secrets and craft of warfare, Nigel drinking in and storing in his memory every word from so revered a teacher. Many a time in after life, in stress and in danger, he strengthened himself by the memory of that slow walk with the blue sea on one side and the fair town on the other, when the wise soldier and noble-hearted knight poured forth his precept and advice as the master-workman to the apprentice.

"Perhaps, fair son," said he, "you are like so many other lads who ride to the wars, and know so much already that it is waste of breath to advise them?"

"Nay, my fair lord, I know nothing save that I would fain do my duty and either win honorable advancement or die worshipful on the field."

"You are wise to be humble," said Chandos; "for indeed he who knows most of war knows best that there is much to learn. As there is a mystery of the rivers and a mystery of woodcraft, even so there is a mystery of warfare by which battles may be lost and gained; for all nations are brave, and where the brave meets the brave it is he who is crafty and war-wise who will win the day. The best hound will run at fault if he be ill laid on, and the best hawk will fly at check if he be badly loosed, and even so the bravest army may go awry if it be ill handled. There are not in Christendom better knights and squires than those of the French, and yet we have had the better of them, for in our Scottish Wars and elsewhere we have learned more of this same mystery of which I speak."

"And wherein lies our wisdom, honored sir?" asked Nigel. "I also would fain be war-wise and learn to fight with my wits as well as with my sword."

Chandos shook his head and smiled. "It is in the forest and on the down that you learn to fly the hawk and loose the hound," said he. "So also it is in camp and on the field that the mystery of war can be learned. There only has every great captain come to be its master. To start he must have a cool head, quick to think, soft as wax before his purpose is formed, hard as steel when once he sees it before him. Ever alert he must be, and cautious also, but with judgment to turn his caution into rashness where a large gain may be put against a small stake. An eye for country also, for the trend of the rivers, the slope of the hills, the cover of the woods, and the light green of the bog-land."

Poor Nigel, who had trusted to his lance and to Pommers to break his path to glory, stood aghast at this list of needs. "Alas!" he cried. "How am I to gain all this?—I, who could scarce learn to read or write though the good Father Matthew broke a hazel stick a day across my shoulders?"

"You will gain it, fair son, where others have gained it before you. You have that which is the first thing of all, a heart of fire from which other colder hearts may catch a spark. But you must have knowledge also of that which warfare has taught us in olden times. We know, par exemple, that horsemen alone cannot hope to win against good foot-soldiers. Has it not been tried at Courtrai, at Stirling, and again under my own eyes at Crecy, where the chivalry of France went down before our bowmen?"

Nigel stared at him, with a perplexed brow. "Fair sir, my heart grows heavy as I hear you. Do you then say that our chivalry can make no head against archers, billmen and the like?"

"Nay, Nigel, for it has also been very clearly shown that the best foot-soldiers unsupported cannot hold their own against the mailed horsemen."

"To whom then is the victory?" asked Nigel.

"To him who can mix his horse and foot, using each to strengthen the other. Apart they are weak. Together they are strong. The archer who can weaken the enemy's line, the horseman who can break it when it is weakened, as was done at Falkirk and Duplin, there is the secret of our strength. Now touching this same battle of Falkirk, I pray you for one instant to give it your attention."

With his whip he began to trace a plan of the Scottish battle upon the dust, and Nigel with knitted brows was trying hard to muster his small stock of brains and to profit by the lecture, when their conversation was interrupted by a strange new arrival.

It was a very stout little man, wheezy and purple with haste, who scudded down the rampart as if he were blown by the wind, his grizzled hair flying and his long black gown floating behind him. He was clad in the dress of a respectable citizen, a black jerkin trimmed with sable, a black-velvet beaver hat and a white feather. At the sight of Chandos he gave a cry of joy and quickened his pace so that when he did at last reach him he could only stand gasping and waving his hands.

"Give yourself time, good Master Wintersole, give yourself time!" said Chandos in a soothing voice.

"The papers!" gasped the little man. "Oh, my Lord Chandos, the papers!"

"What of the papers, my worthy sir?"

"I swear by our good patron Saint Leonard, it is no fault of mine! I had locked them in my coffer. But the lock was forced and the coffer rifled.

A shadow of anger passed over the soldier's keen face.

"How now, Master Mayor? Pull your wits together and do not stand there babbling like a three-year child. Do you say that some one hath taken the papers?"

"It is sooth, fair sir! Thrice I have been Mayor of the town, and fifteen years burgess and jurat, but never once has any public matter gone awry through me. Only last month there came an order from Windsor on a Tuesday for a Friday banquet, a thousand soles, four thousand plaice two thousand mackerel, five hundred crabs, a thousand lobsters, five thousand whiting—"

"I doubt not, Master Mayor, that you are an excellent fishmonger; but the matter concerns the papers I gave into your keeping. Where are they?"

"Taken, fair sir—gone!"

"And who hath dared to take them?"

"Alas! I know not. It was but for as long as you would say an angelus that I left the chamber, and when I came back there was the coffer, broken and empty, upon my table."

"Do you suspect no one?"

"There was a varlet who hath come with the last few days into my employ. He is not to be found, and I have sent horsemen along both the Udimore road and that of Rye, that they may seize him. By the help of Saint Leonard they can scarce miss him, for one can tell him a bow-shot off by his hair."

"Is it red?" asked Chandos eagerly. "Is it fox-red, and the man a small man pocked with sun-spots, and very quick in his movements?"

"It is the man himself."

Chandos shook his clenched hand with annoyance, and then set off swiftly down the street.

"It is Peter the Red Ferret once more!" said he. "I knew him of old in France, where he has done us more harm than a company of men-at-arms. He speaks English as he speaks French, and he is of such daring and cunning that nothing is secret from him. In all France there is no more dangerous man, for though he is a gentleman of blood and coat-armor he takes the part of a spy, because it hath the more danger and therefore the more honor."

"But, my fair lord," cried the Mayor, as he hurried along, keeping pace with the long strides of the soldier, "I knew that you warned me to take all care of the papers; but surely there was no matter of great import in it? It was but to say what stores were to be sent after you to Calais?"

Only Medicine That Did Any Good

After Suffering Tortures For Years, This Lady Found Happy Relief In "Fruit-a-tives".

Frankville, Ont., June 11th, 1908.

"I have received most wonderful benefit from taking "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered for years from headaches and pain in the back, and I consulted doctors and took every remedy obtainable without any relief. Then I began taking "Fruit-a-tives" and this was the only medicine that ever did me any real good. I took several boxes altogether, and now I am entirely well of all my dreadful headaches and backaches.

MRS. FRANK EATON

I take "Fruit-a-tives" occasionally still, but I am quite cured of a trouble that was said to be incurable. I give this testimony voluntarily, in order that others who suffer as I suffered may try this wonderful medicine and be cured."

UNCANNY GUIDES.

When the Gallows Was Used as a Landmark in England.

The old time guidebooks in England were by no means cheerful reading. A journey from London to East Grinstead, a distance of five or six and twenty miles, would have taken the horseman past three gibbets, and it was just as likely as not that from one or the other of them a body would be swinging in the wind.

Up till the beginning of the nineteenth century the gallows was almost as frequent a landmark as finger posts or public houses have become now. The traveler approaching York is directed by the guidebooks to "turn round by the gallows and three windmills," and the road out of Durham is "between the gallows and Crokehill." Going out of Wells you "cross the moor and pass by the gallows."

Any number of such directions can be gleaned from the old books for the guidance of travelers a hundred years ago, and as these interesting objects were put up and the dead bodies of malefactors left upon them for the special edification of footpads and highwaymen there was a suggestiveness about them that must have given a special piquancy to cycle touring if it had been in vogue at that time.—London News.

OLD ENGLISH COOKERY.

A Lively Feast With Much Delight and Pleasure.

A study of Robert May's "Accomplisht Cook," published in 1665, will serve to dispel the delusion fostered by many foreign critics that English cookery lacks variety. One of May's recipes is for the construction of a ship of confectionery, with guns charged with actual powder, and a castle of pies, containing live frogs and birds. After giving directions as to the firing of the guns he proceeds:

"This done, to sweeten the stink of the powder let the ladies take the egg-shells full of sweet waters and throw them at each other. All danger being seemingly over, by this time you may suppose they will desire to see what is in the pyes; when, lifting first the lid off one pye, out skip some frogs, which makes the ladies to skip and shriek; next after the other pye, whence come out the birds, who, by a natural instinct, flying in the light will put out the candles; so that, what with the flying birds and skipping frogs, the one above, the other beneath, will cause much delight and pleasure to the whole company."—London Chronicle.

The Ancient Greek Theater.

The performance at Athens, in ancient Greece, began at dawn, and, as several pieces were produced one after the other, these performances lasted the whole day. On the days the performances were given all work was suspended, business put off, imprisoned debtors were set free and arrests strictly prohibited. Long before sunrise thousands of people assembled, and outside of the theater noisy crowds of men, women and children congregated, all bent upon enjoying themselves and eager to obtain the best seats. Many of them brought their food with them, and in order to stimulate the enthusiasm of the people copious quantities of fiery Greek wine were given to impecunious citizens by wily authors, who endeavored thus to buy the applause of a discriminating public.

Real Sea Serpents.

In New Caledonia sea serpents are frequently seen and sometimes captured. They are curious creatures, the head being very small and scarcely distinguishable from the body and the tail being formed like an oar. In length they are generally between three and four feet. In the jaw there are tiny glands containing poison, but as the mouth is very small it is difficult for them to bite, and the natives handle them fearlessly. M. Kermogant, a European traveler, witnessed an experiment at Noumea which shows under certain conditions the sea serpent can do deadly work. A rat was caught in a trap, and its tongue was grasped by a pair of pinchers and placed in the mouth of a sea serpent. The serpent immediately bit it, and the rat died in four minutes.

The DAY of the DUEL

THE CLASH OF CIRCUMSTANCE

(A TRUE STORY)

[Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.]

"THEN I say you need never come beneath this roof again."

"I had never hoped to, Elise, but a man must follow as his conscience leads."

Elise Dubert faced Ellesler defiantly and he read contempt in a face that once had looked upon him with a warmer light. With her tall, straight figure and imperious attitude she showed her family's characteristics of pride and determination as her face bore its traits of firm mouth and chin. He turned to leave.

"At least I owe myself a word of explanation," he said quietly at the door. "When I accepted the hospitality of your father and your cousin it was with none but friendly intent. I was a stranger. I knew nothing of California. I can never forget the obligations they placed me under.

"I have formed political convictions and in so doing have found that I can no longer be associated with them. It seems small, treacherous even, I suppose. I cannot justify myself to you, for they are of your own blood. Still, you must know that it has cost me something in sacrificing the hope I had. For I did hope, Elise."

She stood looking at him with proud eyes, unmoved, a white, erect figure. Her air was that of one who awaits the withdrawal of an intruder. He held out a hand to her, then dropped it and stepped quickly out upon the porch, thence to the street.

Joseph Ellesler was the subject under discussion in the study of the Dubert home a week later.

"There may be some difficulty in making him fight," said John Dubert slowly, looking out across the wheat fields. "It would be quite like him to overlook a challenge and carry it off with his superior air." The speaker was a square, heavily muscled man of middle life, with close cropped beard and mustache that did not hide a thin, hard mouth. His eyes were narrowed as he debated, half to himself, and took nothing from the aggressive quality of his face. Opposite him sat the only other occupant of the room, a man about sixty years old, white and lined. His features showed the same marks that were somewhat veiled in the younger. There was a strong resemblance between them.

"You seem to have a poor opinion of Joe Ellesler's courage," he answered, after a pause. John Dubert turned with a gesture.

"You misunderstood me if you think that, uncle," he replied. "Whatever it may be necessary to say to the contrary, I know Ellesler for a man of high spirit and fearless. When he was in Tennessee he fought often enough and readily enough, killed his man twice and never refused a challenge. But since he came to Sacramento he has avoided all meetings and has been heard to condemn the code."

"Still, there must be some way of making him come to the front," said the elder Dubert.

"I shall find a way. We cannot sit still under this thing." John Dubert frowned heavily and there was an answering shade upon his uncle's face.

"If it came to last resort he would fight if you laid a whip across his back," suggested the elder man, grimly.

"There is another method open. That would throw sentiment against us. With a convention coming I must be careful. If it is managed right, on the other hand, it will help. They will think twice before making an attack. For another thing, I have a fancy to be the challenged party myself. I tell you I knew Ellesler in Tennessee. The man is a crack shot with rifle and pistol. I have no mind to be a mere target. You know I am useless with firearms since my eyes went back on me."

His Weapons Picked.

Old Dubert stared. "Then what, in heaven's name, do you propose to name as weapons?"

"All in good time, uncle. I have them ready picked."

"If, as you say, he's not apt to accept a challenge, he's a lot less likely to issue one," grumbled the aged man, who knew it was small use to press his nephew for what he did not care to tell. "Meanwhile, did you verify the report we had of his words?"

"I did, and learned they were sharper than we had heard. Sam Fisher was in the group at the time. Some one asked Ellesler if he would support me for Auditor of State next fall. He said he would not. They asked why. Then he came out with that story about the county funds when I was Treasurer. He mentioned you, too, uncle. I inquired particularly about his language. He did not say 'thief,' but he might as well have said it. He wanted to know where we made our money so fast."

"He did, eh," sneered the other. "Perhaps he was not so anxious to find out before Elise threw him over. Did he say anything about her?"

"Not a word."

"Well, now, I want to know what you're going to do," the elder Dubert broke out, rising with vigorous movement from his chair and pacing the room. "Joe Ellesler is leading the only opposition you've had in years. He has influence, for all he's been here but a short time. You'll never make headway till you get him. If you can't or won't, by God, I will myself. What's the plan?"

John Dubert did not alter his pose in face of the sudden demand. He still stared out over the fields.

"I'm going to post him," he said, deliberately.

"Good! good! I never thought of that," cried his uncle, exultingly. "Post him in all the papers in town. Put the thing up to him squarely. He can never hold up his head again if he ignores it."

"He won't ignore it," said John Dubert.

Joseph Ellesler sat late that night in the upper offices of the land company of which he was president. Word had reached him that the Duberts were planning an answer to his public declaration against them. He was not disturbed. He had spent an active early life in the politics of his native State and had been accustomed to the chances of opposition. He saw in the Duberts a corrupt and dangerous element in the young, vigorous development of new California, and he had set himself to combat them. The danger he ran in so doing was a part of the game.

He was engaged in writing a political article for the columns of the newspaper which had been willing to join him in his opposition of the Duberts. The door of his room opened suddenly and Crawford, the editor of the sheet, entered. Ellesler looked up in surprise. The visitor held a slip of paper in his hand and advanced with a scowl on his handsome face.

"This is what you run into when you buck that crowd, Joe," he said without preamble, and laid the paper on the desk. "This is what they've inserted for to-morrow in every paper in the county. Even had the nerve to come to me with it; there's sheet iron cheek for you."

This was what the slip bore:—

"In justice to myself I denounce Joseph Ellesler as a prevaricating, base, calumniating scoundrel, poltroon and coward. JOHN DUBERT."

"Let me be the bearer of your answer, Joe," said Crawford, tensely. "I'm in this thing with you to the end. I'd give something to have the chance at the black visaged rascal myself."

Digesting the Insult.

Ellesler was taken squarely aback. He had not been prepared for this. Flushed with anger, he sat reading and rereading the insult that would be the talk of the county within a few hours. Crawford awaited some explosion, some word of defiance, but Ellesler said nothing.

"Well!" exclaimed the editor, impatiently. Ellesler stood up and faced him.

"Crawford," he said, heavily, "you haven't known me long and I can't complain if you judge me as you would any other man of your acquaintance in my place. But for myself, I know it is no cowardice when I say that I would give ten years of my life if this had not happened."

The other watched his face keenly, nodding in quick comprehension and sympathy.

"Joe, don't say another word. It's the girl. I understand, old man. Do you see any way out of it? You can count on me."

Ellesler shook his head with a long breath.

"No; there's no way out of it. If he had met me in person, insulted me, even struck me, I might have passed the thing off. I thought I had done with this miserable code of so-called honor that binds us in all our actions. It is false, Crawford, and that comes from a man who has lived by it."

"Shall I act for you, then?"

"Yes. You know the procedure. I give you full power to make the arrangements. Accede to anything. He will have a fight, and it makes not the slightest difference to me how he gets it."

It was not the custom in the Dubert family to admit its women to the sterner purposes of the men. The first intimation of the state of affairs came to Elise when she read the papers next morning. She started up as the paragraph came under her eye, her instant impulse being to seek her cousin. She knew what this meant. From beyond the study door she could hear the voices of John Dubert and her father. But with her hand on the knob she drew back.

It was useless. What could she say? The man was an enemy to her house and to her. She hated him. Then was it not strange that she must lean against the wall for support? She fought against the weakness. No; she had not thought of Ellesler. It was the danger her cousin must run that had sent the blood flooding about her heart. She returned to the porch and set herself to watch.

The first visitor was "Jim" Hammond, long her hopeless admirer, a henchman of the Duberts. He greeted her awkwardly on his way in. She confronted him when he returned, half an hour later.

"When is it to be, Jim?" she asked, calmly.

"To-morrow," he answered, embarrassed but helpless against her peremptory tone. She put a hand on his arm.

"Come," she said, drawing him toward the parlor. "I want to speak with you a moment." Inside, she shut the door and faced him.

"Jim Hammond, you have vowed and protested often enough to me. I have never asked anything of you. I'm going to ask it now." The young man's face flushed and he stepped forward eagerly.

"Only try me, Elise. I'll do anything I can for you and you know it."

"You are going to act as John's second?"

"Yes."

Arranging the Duel.

She swept across the parlor to the table on which Hiram Dubert's box of dueling pistols lay. The weapons were oiled and polished by her father himself each week and had served in many an encounter involving members of the family.

"Then here are the pistols they will use," she hurried on. "I want you to note the calibre." He looked at her blankly.

"Listen," she said. "This man Ellesler is a professional duellist. My cousin's hot head is carrying him to certain death. The honor of the Duberts is as dear to me as to him, Jim, but I will not have him slaughtered. I am trusting in you. You must find some way so that the bullets shall be harmless. Make substitute balls of some substance, I scarce know what, but I know such things are done. Will you help me, Jim?"

Hammond's face fell and he evaded her direct, questioning glance, uneasily fumbling with his hat.

"Why, Elise, you're asking what is well nigh impossible," he said slowly. "I'm pledged in honor to act as your brother's second. It's a man's affair, Elise."

She checked him with a decisive gesture.

"Is it a man's affair to pit a helpless combatant against a dead shot? Ellesler is a professional duellist, I tell you. This must be stopped. I am showing you the way to stop it without a scene or a scandal. If you care anything for my cousin you should aid me to help him. If you care anything for me you should be willing to do what I ask. Surely my interest is nearer than your own."

"But I'm not sure that I know how to manage it," he faltered.

"You can do it, Jim, if you want to. "I'm asking once more," she pleaded.

He gazed at her, overwhelmed by the commanding beauty of her, softened by the poignant appeal in the wide eyes. It was a face and a figure than had haunted him through many a hopeless month, and the tyranny of that obsession swept him from all holds.

"You will find me not ungrateful, Jim," she said softly, as he hesitated, and Hammond surrendered.

"I will do what I can, Elise," he said, finally.

All the afternoon Hammond worked upon the plan he had devised with John Dubert's cousin to prevent bloodshed in the coming duel. His final conference with his principal was to take place at ten o'clock that night. At midnight he would meet Crawford to arrange the final details of the affair. For hours he experimented with chalk, graphite, wax and other possible substitutes, and after many failures he produced several dummy bullets that might serve his purpose if they were not closely examined. The only remaining difficulty was to manipulate the situation so that he should be the one to load the pistols. He felt that he had a fair chance of success when he presented himself at the Dubert house at the appointed time.

He met the two men in the study, the younger rather nervous, the elder silent and composed.

"Well, Jim, did Crawford accept the terms I named?" asked John Dubert when his second entered.

"Yes," nodded Hammond, "he agreed to everything, though he did put up a kick because I wasn't ready to complete the negotiations on the spot."

No Paces at All.

Dubert nodded. "I had a reason for that. As a matter of fact, the conditions I have in mind are a little unusual. Still, no one can say I went beyond my rights."

"What do you want, John? Going to shorten up the distance?" asked Hammond, with some misgiving.

"Considerably."

"Ten or eight paces?"

"No paces at all, Jim," was Dubert's answer.

Hammond stared in amazement. "What then?"

"We will meet face to face," said the other, walking to a corner of the room. "And these will be our weapons."

He laid on the table a pair of gigantic broadswords, newly sharpened and cleaned of rust. Hammond could scarce believe that he heard or saw aright.

"You mean to fight with these?" he stammered, while old Dubert cackled with glee.

"Certainly! Why not?" returned his principal. "They are permissible, are they not? I do not propose to stand as a mark for Ellesler. My eyesight is good enough for close quarters."

"But this is unprecedented in California," said Hammond.

"What matter? They are commonly employed elsewhere. I don't know how to use them. Neither, as I figure it, does Ellesler. The chances are equal. I want to fight, but I want to give blow for blow, that's all, Jim. You'd better look up Crawford now and break the news to him."

To Hammond it was the hand of fate. Neither he nor Elise could intervene now, the affair must go forward. He thought for a moment of sending up a servant to arouse her, but brushed the impulse aside. At midnight he finished the arrangements with Crawford.

The combatants and their seconds met on the river bank about a mile below the city soon after dawn next morning. Ellesler had shown neither surprise nor resentment at the choice of weapons. He had no knowledge of the broadsword and he had taken for granted that his adversary must be no adept in its use. But, as he had told Crawford, he was wholly indifferent. Against all his convictions and natural feelings he must fight a man who had been his friend at one time, who was the cousin of the girl he loved. When the meeting became inevitable he had no further interest in its details, nor did he particularly care what its outcome might be. He would do what he could; he owed that to his own manhood, but he would not quarrel or bicker over the terms.

John Dubert had spoken truth, however, in telling Hammond that he was unskilled with the weapon he had chosen against prevailing traditions of the time. He was no coward. He sought no unfair advantage. But he meant to kill his opponent and in a hand to hand engagement he counted upon his long arms and weight of muscle. He counted something, at the same time, upon the complete surprise it would be for Ellesler and the resulting confusion in his adversary's mind.

Hammond and Crawford, equally ignorant with their principals as to the proper process of duelling with unwieldy weapons, came to a simple agreement which was acceptable on both sides. A straight line was dug in the turf across which the combatants were to face each other. In fighting, either, if able, could press his enemy back a short distance. But they were strictly warned that neither must advance so far as to have both feet over the line.

The two principals took their positions just as the sun cast its first long shadows from tree and shrub. Ellesler was the taller by several inches, but his frame was slighter and his arms lacked the remarkable length of his opponent's. Both were calm and determined. They stood for a moment, sword points to the ground, while each studied the other and sought preliminary dominance by glance of eye.

"Ready?" asked Hammond.

"Ready," they answered.

"On guard!"

The swords rose and clashed. Cautiously, watchfully, Dubert feinted. In the side thrust from Ellesler each could test the strength of his adversary's wrist. To the seconds, who followed every move with the tensest interest, it became instantly evident that the contest would prove deadly. Edges and points were sharp. The inexperience of the duellists would leave wide openings. The men were strong and active, well matched.

Dubert settled himself for a blow. Without uncovering himself with his hilt he swung his blade high and sent it crashing in, throwing his right foot across the line. Ellesler caught the stroke in midair and turned his weapon neatly. The descending sword swept harmlessly aside and Dubert recovered himself with difficulty. Before he had regained his guard Ellesler had thrust, awkwardly, but with venom, and the point bit along his opponent's right side, grazing a rib. Dubert answered instantly with another hacking, downward sweep, which Ellesler again evaded.

Warmed to their work and conscious now that the upper hand rested with neither, the combatants quickened their pace. Thrust, cut and parry followed rapidly. The characteristics of each unaccustomed swordsman became observable. Dubert took naturally to a drawing sweep down or across, striking with a force that exposed him dangerously after each blow. Ellesler's most frequent move was a quick lunge and recover. At this stage of the combat, however, his energy was chiefly directed toward intercepting Dubert's smashing attack.

The Terrific Combat.

Dubert's arm seemed tireless. Suddenly he pressed harder, launching terrific blows in quick succession. Ellesler stood beneath the onset manfully but could not maintain his guard. His covering blade wavered for an instant and Dubert's weapon slashed home on his left arm. Ellesler had broken the first force of the descending sword but the wound was severe. Simultaneously the seconds rushed forward and called a halt.

The contest had now proceeded for twenty-five minutes. Ellesler's hurt had not disabled him and Dubert was suffering little from the cut on his side. Hammond, mindful of his frustrated pact with Elise, sought to patch a truce, an effort to which Crawford lent his aid. It was represented to the principals that honor had been satisfied, the result resting equally between the two parties and each having proved his courage. But the fire of battle had been fanned. Ellesler was now as eager as his opponent to fight to a finish and would hear of no agreement.

"This begins to amuse me," was Dubert's comment to Hammond. "I'll kill him next time I get in that stroke."

Again they took their stand and again, at the word, the swords crashed together. Previous caution was forgotten. They had each other's measure, now, and their common purpose was to force the issue to a quick conclusion. The whirling blades made an incessant hammer and ring. Dubert felt the result first. Five times Ellesler's weapon reached past his guard and drew blood. Aroused to frenzy by the consequent drain upon his strength he cut savagely and then, changing his tactics for the first time, rushed forward with a lunge. His point passed through his adversary's shoulder and he wrenched it back with difficulty. Ellesler slashed him across the face before he regained his balance.

During the last fifteen minutes of the desperate encounter the combatants were staggering like drunken men, surely wounded and on the verge of exhaustion, but holding to the mad batter and thrust without pause. It seemed scarcely possible that human strength could longer endure the terrific strain. Both were hard hit in a dozen places, their clothing torn to shreds, their faces hardly to be recognized. They left bloody marks on the grass as they trampled to and fro. There was no longer any attempt to check a blow. The one surviving purpose in the frantic mêlée was to kill. So weak were they that time and again a cut fell harmless on the flat of the sword or a thrust that might have been fatal went no further than the outer flesh.

Toward the end Ellesler stumbled and fell to his knees. The seconds rushed forward to check Dubert. But with a tremendous effort Ellesler half rose and met Dubert's rush with a thrust that caught the impending blow. A second later he was on his feet once more, swaying and tottering, his breath wheezing in gasps, but jabbing madly at the other's face. Suddenly Dubert backed away, blinking to clear his eyes, lifted his sword and came in with a blow that had all his remaining power behind it. His sword clove fairly through his opponent's collar bone and down into his breast. Ellesler's blade at the same instant passed through Dubert's body. The combatants fell together without a cry. The duel had lasted, with but one brief pause, for fifty-eight minutes.

Ellesler died as he was being lifted into a farm wagon for removal. Dubert was taken to his home. His arrival there was preceded by that of Hammond, who contrived to prepare the household in some part for the shock. He himself gave Elise the first word that their plan had failed. Even in that bitter moment, when she learned of Ellesler's death and the fact that her cousin was fatally wounded, she found courage for a crushing dismissal of the man who, as she conceived, had betrayed her. She nursed John Dubert faithfully through the day and the next night. He died at dawn without regaining consciousness.

Throughout the first painful week of her sorrow, sharpened by the pitiable state of her father, the brave, self-controlled girl yielded but once. She fainted one afternoon in the parlor. It was recalled that the procession that followed Joseph Ellesler's body to the grave had passed the house a moment before.

DURING THE LAST FIFTEEN MINUTES OF THE ENCOUNTER THE COMBATANTS WERE STAGGERING LIKE DRUNKEN MEN.

WITH FLYING COLORS.

The Incident That Ended His Period of Probation.

By CLARENCE ENGLE.

[Copyright, 1908 by Associated Literary Press.]

A man picked his way slowly along the sun baked trail that led westward to Taggart across the desert. It was high noon and the day had been hot and dry and the man's throat was parched with thirst. This did not tend to lessen his ferocious aspect nor to soften the anger that glowed in his eyes. It was all due to his visit that morning to the little ranch a few miles behind, for there he had met with the first failure in his life. He had proposed and been rejected.

It was not Bill Warren's nature to be balked by anything. He usually carried matters his own way and with a high hand, as a result of which he was looked upon as a sort of local "bad man." But this cognomen was applied to him only by people who did not know Bill. In reality no better nor kinder natured man than he ever rode into Taggart.

But Sue Patterson was one of those who were not intimately acquainted with Warren, and this assertiveness she looked upon as something evil. Therefore, although otherwise she liked Warren better than any other of her admirers, she felt that she was acting quite right when she rejected his offer of marriage.

All the consolation that she had given him in answer to his earnest pleading was that she would put him on an indefinite probation and if he came through it with flying colors why—she would think about it.

All of which Warren took too literally, and he thought that she had spoken thus only to soften her refusal. He became angry at the thought of it.

She don't care nothin' fer me," he muttered savagely, "an' I know why. It's all along of that sneakin' coyote, Ralph Henderson. Been to Frisco an' seen a few things an' comes out here to lord it over us. I know the brand. She's plumb loco over the cuss, too, an' he ain't no man. No," he finished spitefully, "he ain't no man."

He rode on across the desert in a sort of dulled consciousness, with his hat pulled well down over his eyes. At length, toward the middle of the afternoon, he came into the foothills. Before him lay the Tooth of Time, the largest mountain in that vicinity. Beyond it, ten miles to the westward, was Taggart. This necessitated his taking the trail that wound round the slope of the mountain. This trail was hardly more than a well trodden footpath and was only wide enough to permit a single rider upon it. One side of it sloped up at an angle of almost eighty degrees. The other formed the side of a precipice that dropped a sheer 200 feet to the sandy ravine below.

As he rode over the trail, lost in thought, Warren was dead to external sounds. He did not notice the fidgeting of his horse nor his frightened whinnies. He had no intimation whatever that any one was approaching along the trail from the opposite direction. And yet not a hundred feet ahead of him a horse and rider were rounding the curve of the mountain. Neither noticed the other until they were fifty feet apart. Then by some strange intuition both raised their heads. Recognition was mutual and instantaneous, for the man ahead of Warren was Ralph Henderson.

The faces of both men paled with fear. Not in years had two men met on that narrow trail, and it seemed some strange intervention of destiny that it should be Warren and Henderson. While the face of the cattleman grew anxious, that of Henderson became quickly overshot with a crafty cunning.

"Hello!" he drawled pleasantly.

"Hello!" muttered Warren nervously.

"Well, what are we going to do about it?" the city man continued. "It looks as if you'd have to go back."

"Not by a —— sight!" snapped Warren. "There's no turning about for either of us. We'll have to manage to pass each other. The place seems pretty wide here."

"Flip a coin for the inner side," suggested the other, suddenly reaching a hand into his pocket.

"Right," agreed Warren, "but let's have a look at it first."

Henderson's face turned scarlet and he stayed his hand. "I declare, I'm all out of coin," he rattled sheepishly.

"Here's an eagle," replied Warren, with narrow eyes. "Heave her up! Heads I pass on the inside, tails I pass on the outside."

He tossed the coin to Henderson as he spoke who, pale faced and hesitating, fumbled with it a moment and let it fly up into the air with a twirl of a veteran trickster. It fell down on the trail at their feet, ringing out clear and cold.

"Tails!" cried the city man, overcome with excitement. His face resumed something of its natural color and the old craftiness stole into his eyes.

Warren accepted his fate nonchalantly, although he knew that it might mean death for him. There was one thing about it, however, that galled him. He well knew that Henderson was on his way to the Patterson ranch, and it came to him as a rather bitter thought that he might have to play the martyr and sacrifice his own life in order that the man could do so. But without a word he pressed his pony's ribs with his heels and rode forward.

Henderson had drawn his horse as close as he could against the side of the mountain but he seemed overtaken by fits of nervousness, for the reins shook in his hands and the color came and went in his dark cheeks.

The ledge where Warren would have to pass Henderson was somewhat wider than the rest of the trail, and he rode forward light hearted and confident that he would easily accomplish it. But just as he brushed against the side of Henderson the latter suddenly drove his spurs with great force against his horse's ribs. With a snort of terror the animal plunged madly forward, dislodging the other horse and rider and sending them hurtling down and over the edge of the precipice. Then he went careening down the slope.

The breath went out of Warren as soon as he felt himself falling, and under the sickening sensation that ensued he lost consciousness. A stinging pain in his leg finally awoke him. Bruised and bleeding, he now sat up and gazed about him. He had landed in the branches of a tree that jutted out from the slope of the mountain. Down below on the sand he could see the form of his horse, dead as a stone.

The first thing Warren did was to swear. Then he looked to his leg. It had been broken just below the knee. As he started to wrap his handkerchief about it he heard a sound from above. Over the rim of the precipice a bushy head was peering.

"Hello!" it called. "Kin ye manage if I send down a rope?"

"Sure," Warren yelled back.

A minute later the end of a lariat came whirling down through space. Warren caught it, made it fast about his body, and then, clinging to it with both hands, ordered the man above to hoist away. A few moments later he crawled up over the ledge and lay panting for breath at old Jem Patterson's feet.

"I seen the hull thing, Bill," began the latter as he undid the rope about the man's body. "Henderson will swing for this or I'll shoot him on sight. I was comin' along a mile behind him an' I seen him jab the buckskin and then scoot." But Warren was unconscious before the man finished speaking, and Patterson lifted him up on his pony after great difficulty and started down the trail for home.

When Warren next regained consciousness he was lying on a bed in a dimly lighted room. Soft hands were bandaging his head and soothing words fell from the lips of their owner. Warren opened his eyes and took in the situation at a glance.

"Sue," he demanded fiercely, "has that skunk been here?"

"Sh!" she murmured, touching a finger to his lips. "He has not been here. Evidently he has skipped the country. Father has told me all about it—the honorable way in which you acted and Henderson's treachery. You have indeed behaved splendidly."

"Sue!" cried the man eagerly, starting up.

"Be quiet," she admonished smilingly. Then she added, "Your probation is over, and you have come through it nobly."

And then Warren claimed his own.

A CULINARY MASTERPIECE.

When You Go to Paris Don't Turn Up Your Nose at Mussels.

You will find in Paris a small restaurant just inside the street entrance presided over by a waiter who has apparently been forty years of age for the last twenty years. He has a friendly, alert air, and anything in the world that you want he will promptly provide.

You will naturally order some sort of potage or something that your fancy suggests; but, whatever else you do be sure to call for mussels. I can see you turning up your nose at this. In America who eats mussels except at rare times—perhaps some pickled mussels? They are with us in the same category as tripe.

But behold the genius of the French! When the waiter brings in an enormous silver bowl with a domelike silver cover and when he removes the cover, then you forget everything in the world except the delicious savory smell of the steam which rises from the myriad shells that open lovingly for you to extract from them the dainty sea flavored mussel that lurks within.

Mussel, did I say? No; these are not the ordinary mussels that Americans know. French gastronomic genius has transformed them into moules marinieres. In some deftly magical way the French chef has imparted a delicious suggestion to the moules, just that indefinable, evanescent memory of garlic—garlic which in the hands of the ordinary cook is an offensive and deadly weapon, but which in the hands of a cook of high degree—an artist in fact—is a means for achieving some of the supreme triumphs of his art.

After the moules you will have anything you care for—dainty slices of galantine or sliced capon nestling amid watercresses and then perhaps some peaches in a little basket where the fruit is infolded in leaves from its own tree and ripened to precisely the right turn on some ancient wall in the sunshine of an old French garden, then perhaps some pulled bread and a bit of Camembert and a Cafe Mazagran in a long glass. No one remembers now the battle that gave its name to this particular preparation of coffee, which shows that men may come and empires may fall and armies may be dashes into fragments upon the battlefield, but the genius of cookery remains triumphant and its achievements are never lost.—Bookman.

ENGLISH MONARCHS.

Death Often Unkind in the Manner of Their Taking Off.

Of the monarchs who have reigned over England since the days of the Norman conquest nearly one-quarter of the number have met violent deaths. William I. was killed by a fall from his horse, William II. was shot while hunting, whether by accident or design is still one of the unsolved problems of history; Richard I. was killed by a shaft from a crossbrow while besieging the city of Chalus, in France; Richard II. was murdered in Pontefract castle, Edward II. was murdered in Berkeley castle and Edward V. in the Tower of London. Richard III. was killed on the battlefield of Bosworth, and Charles I. had his head cut off in London.

Elizabeth's death was hastened by remorse that she had ordered the execution of Essex, and her sister Mary sickened and died soon after the loss of Calais, declaring that the name of that city would be found after death written on her heart. The death of Edward III.'s son, the Black Prince, caused the aged monarch to die of grief. So, after the loss of his son in the White Ship, Henry I. was never seen to smile again and lived only a short time. Henry VI. and George III. were insane during the latter years of their reigns and finally died from what in these days would be called paresis. Charles II., Henry VIII., Edward IV. and George IV. hastened their deaths by the lives they lived. Only two monarchs died of that great national scourge, consumption. They were Edward VI. and Henry VII. Queen Anne's death was due as much as anything else to overfeeding. Only two monarchs, Henry VII. and George III., died after long illnesses.

What Would He Do With It?

A farmer owned a dog—a very good, high bred and thoroughly trained dog—that every morning for three years chased a railway train that ran past the farm. The farmer and his wife were watching the persistent but vain pursuit one warm morning.

"I wonder," the wife said, "what makes that foolish dog chase the train so persistently."

"Never thought about that," replied the farmer, "but I've often wondered what he would do if he caught it."

THE DAIRYMEN'S CONVENTION

From Farm and Dairy.

The next annual convention of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association will be held at Belleville, Jan. 5, 6, 7, 1910. This was decided upon at a meeting of the executive committee of the association held in Toronto last week at the time of the Toronto Industrial Exhibition. The directors present included Senator D. Derbyshire, hon.-pres; R. G. Murphy, sec'y, Brockville; Ed. Kidd, M.P., North Gower; Chief Instructor G. G. Publow, Kingston; G. A. Putnam, Director of Dairy Instruction, Toronto; J. H. Singleton, Smith's Falls; C. F. Whittaker, North Williamsburg; Henry Glendinning, Manilla; Jas. Whitton, Wellman's Corners; A. S. White, Sidney Crossing; T. A. Thompson, Almonte; J. A. Sanderson, Kemptville; Jas. R. Anderson, Mountain View.

A deputation from Belleville, headed by John Kerr and including John Miller, Casselton; Chas. B. Myers, Bayside; D. J. Fairfield, N. W. Simmons, Belleville; S. T. Vandervoort, Sidney Crossing, waited on the committee and urged that the next convention be held in Belleville and promised to leave no stone unturned to make it a success. On motion, Belleville was selected and the dates already mentioned were decided upon.

The following committee were appointed to have charge of the local arrangements for the convention:

Local Committee, Messrs, Jno. Miller, Casselton; A. S. White Sidney Crossing; Ed. Symons, Rosemore; M. Bird, Stirling; C. B. Myers, Bayside; Jno. Kerr, Belleville.

City committee, Jno. Kerr, M, Sprague, F. W. Brenton.

LOCAL MEETINGS.

Senator Derbyshire reported that following the dairy meetings held last fall in Eastern Ontario more corn by far was grown in the counties of Leeds and Grenville than ever before. Messrs. Putnam, Publow and Murphy were appointed to arrange the dates of the meetings to be held this fall and the speakers. Mr. Publow suggested that the director in each district should endeavor to select the best possible local man in each district to address the local meetings Men who are making a success of their work are always effective speakers in localities where their success is recognized.

"The great need in our section," said Mr. Whittaker, "is to show the farmers how to lower the cost of production. Too much mill feed is being fed."

Mr. Whitton felt that the illustrated addresses given in his section last fall by Mr. Geo. H. Barr, of Ottawa, had been worth thousands of dollars to the farmers in his section. They were worth probably $400 to his factory alone. Never had he known such good results follow a series of meetings as attended those held last fall..

REFRIGERATOR SERVICE.

Mr. Singleton felt that the refrigeration service this year had not been satisfactory. The chief defect was that refrigerator cars were not available except where 20,000 lbs. of cheese were available for shipment. This is such a large quantity that many shipping points have not been able to avail themselves of the service. He had shipped from seven or eight points but had not had enough at any one point to enable him to take advantage of it. Mr. Sanderson agreed with Mr. Singleton. Senator Derbybe made next year to start the service earlier in the season if hot weather should start at as early a date as it did this year. The matter will be brought up at the annual convention.

WHEY BUTTER.

It was suggested by Mr. Singleton that the Association should take steps to have the government enact legislation that will make it compulsory for factories to brand whey butter as such. He knew of cases where whey butter had been palmed off as creamery butter, thereby causing trouble. Senator Derbyshire said that more whey butter was made in his section than anywhere else in the province and it was all consumed in the section. Mr. Publow felt that there were some unsatisfactory features connected with the manufacture of whey butter that would probably right themselves in time. Many factories, he thought, would obtain more satisfactory results were they to install pasteurizing plants instead of machinery for the manufacture of whey butter. This matter, also, will be brought up for further consideration at the annual convention.

MILK ADULTERATION.

Chief Instructor Publow reported that 25 prosecutions for the adulteration of milk had been disposed of, resulting in the imposition of fines aggregating $568.00, the average fine being about $20. There were still 17 cases pending.

ASTONISHING RESULTS.

Follow Each New Discovery of Science.

The great strides that medical science has made in the last few years is due to the germ theory. When the germ of a disease has been discovered the doctors have been slow in finding a drug to kill it. In a few years, it will be rare to find a bald-headed man or woman. The falling out of hair is due to a dandruff germ, and now it has been discovered how to kill the germ. The remedy used is called Newbro's Herpicide. Its success has been marvellous. Not a failure has been so far reported. It is also a delightful hair dressing, free from oil or sticky substances. Try it and be convinced of its actual merit. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Sold by Jury & McDermid, Druggists: also Payne's Drug Store. One Dollar bottles guaranteed.

NERVOUS DISORDERS

Promptly Cured by the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

If your hand trembles or is unsteady, remember that this is a sure and early sign of your nervous system being at fault. The mischief may develop slowly to a worse stage. You feel unaccountably weak and weary after exertion; you lose flesh; you turn against food and suffer palpitations and indigestion after eating. At times you are intensely irritable, greatly depressed and easily worried. Sometimes sharp pains shoot down your spine and legs and probably neuralgia robs you of your sleep at night. These are some of the troubles that indicate the presence of nervous disorders. If these troubles are neglected they result in complete nervous collapse and possibly paralysis. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have won a great repuation by curing all forms of nervous disease. The nervous system depends entirely upon the blood supply for nourishment; when the blood is thin and weak the nerves are affected as described. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually increase the supply of good red blood, feed, strengthen and tone the nerves, enable them to perform their functions and dispel all signs of a breakdown.

Mrs. Jas. H. Ward, Lord's Cove, N.B., says: "About two years ago I suffered so much from nervous prostration that I was little better than a helpless wreck. I suffered from headaches and a constant feeling of dizziness. The least unusual move would startle me and set my heart palpitating violently. I had little or no appetite, and grew so weak that I was hardly able to drag myself about, and could not do any housework. In every way I was in a deplorable condition. As the medicine I had been taking seemed to do me no good, my husband got a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had only been taking the Pills for a couple of weeks when I seemed to feel somewhat better, and this encouraged me to continue the treatment. From that on my strength gradually but surely returned, and in the course of a few more weeks I was once more a well woman, able to do my own housework and feeling better than I had done for years. I have since remained well and feel that I owe my good health to the healing powers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

Every other weak, sickly, worn out, nervous person should follow the example of Mrs. Ward and give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial. These Pills will send new blood coursing through the veins and bring brightness and energy to the weak and despondent. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

IN AGONY WITH PILES

Mr. G. W. Cornell, with the Shaw Milling Co., St. Catharines, Ont., writes, "For six years I was a victim of itching, protruding piles and was in dreadful agony day and night. Doctors were unable to help me and I was about as miserable as any creature could be. My druggist advised me to try Dr. Chase's Ointment, which I did and obtained relief from the first box and complete cure with the second. This ointment would be cheap at fifty dollars a box in view of what it did for me."

FIELD CROP COMPETITION

From Farm and Dairy.

The exhibit of sheaves of oats, wheat and barley from the prize-winning fields in the standing field crop competition in Ontario was an innovation which attracted great attention at the Exhibition. In order to equalize conditions the Province was divided into three districts, and competitors could show only in the district in which they resided. District No. 1 comprised Muskoka, Parry Sound, Haliburton, Nipissing, Manitoulin, Algoma and the other districts in New Ontario. District 2, all counties east of York and Simcoe. District No. 3, York, Simcoe and all counties west and southwest of same. The winners follow in the order of their standing, the address given being the residences of the exhibitors and they are followed in every case by the name of the agricultural society of which they are members:—

Oats—District No. 1—1, W. E. Streatfeild, Emsdale, Perry; 2, Thos. Nicholson, Warren, Warren; 3, A. Sylvester, Verner, Cardwell; 4, Geoffry Streatfeild, Emsdale, Perry; 5, Rev. L'Ecuyer, Verner, Cardwell. District No. 2—1, Thos. Cosh, Bobcaygeon, Verulam; 2, James Leask, Taunton, South Ontario; 3, F. Truedell, Collin's Bay, Kingston Township; 4, J. B. McLaren, Renfrew, Renfrew; 5, Mrs. T. B. Taylor, Bobcaygeon, Verulam. District No. 3.—1, W. G. Rennie, Ellesmere Scarboro'; 2, R. E. Mortimer, Honeywood, Dufferin Central; 3, Jas. W. THE HAND OR FARM SEPARATOR

From Farm and Dairy.

To the cream separator is due the great expansion of the cream gathering system and its popularity today in nearly every country where good butter is made. In 1886 the small hand separator for use on farms and in small dairies made its appearance. It is safe to say that it has effected a greater evolution in buttermaking than the introduction of the centrifugal force in cream separation in the first instance. The chief business of the cream separator manufacturer to-day is to turn out a machine that will best meet the needs of the farmer who keeps a few cows and will give him the best service for the money expended. The hand or the farm separator as it is often called, is so common in every dairy country to-day as to excite no comment.

And yet the most skilful workmanship and the services of the best trained artisans are required in its manufacture. If it does not run true and the material of which it is made is not of the very best, it will not do the work it is intended to do. The farmer who buys a cream separator has in his possession one of the finest pieces of mechanism that the ingenuity of man has produced. And still it too often receives less care from him than he gives his wheelbarrow or cultivator.

SELLING THE MACHINES.

Here at home we find the hand separator reaching out to all parts of Canada. It would be interesting to know how many, for instance have been placed on farms in Ontario, during the past five years. The number must be away up in the thousands. And the end is not yet. There are more different makes being handled to-day than ever before and each year sees the number sold increased by many hundreds. There are about as many avenues and ways of selling separators as there are of selling harvesting machines. The chief work, however, is done by agents representing the manufacturer. Upon these individuals depend largely not only how many are sold but also upon how the machine will be cared for and handled by the purchaser. The agent, who sells the most machines does not always render his employer the best service. By making extravagant claims, such as that his separator only needs a thorough cleaning occasionally, that all that is needed after each skimming is to run through some warm water, etc. One agent may sell twice as many machines as another, who is too honest to make such claims. The former may sell more machines, but if the method of care he advocates is followed these machines will not give the best service, and will react against the future business of the manufacturer. The honest agent, who instructs the buyer carefully as to the kind of machine he has purchased and the need for observing the strictest cleanliness in operating it, is rendering the manufacturer and the dairy industry, as well, the better service.

SPECIAL COURSE FOR AGENTS

But be that as it may, the separator agent is an important factor in providing better dairying methods among the farmers of the country. So important is he that the dairy schools might well consider the establishment of special courses of study for separator agents. Such courses need not necessarily deal with the mechanism of separators. It is presumed that a person engaged to sell separators would know all about the machine he is offering to the public, and considerable about the kind his competitors are offering also. But what would be advisable in a course of this kind, would be a thorough drilling on what milk is, how easily it may be contaminated by unsanitary or uncleanly conditions, how necessary it is to keep the separator always clean and sweet, and how to properly care for the cream so as to make the best quality of butter. An agent thus equipped would be able to serve his employer better and be in a position to assist the dairy industry very materially by instructing buyers of separators how to care for the milk and in the best way. Many agents on the road to-day already have this information. But it does not do anyone any harm to brush up now and again and familiarise himself with the latest developments in the business in which he is engaged. For instance, one of the needs of the creamery business is thicker cream. Pointers of this kind are valuable for the agent to know, and the more he knows about milk and the handling of cream the greater his influence will be with intending purchasers.—J. W. W.

AN EXHIBIT OF REAL VALUE

From Farm and Dairy.

Few exhibits on the grounds of the Canadian National Exhibition compare in real educational value, from the standpoint of the farmer, with the tuberculosis exhibit made under the direction of the Dominon Government. A section of the refrigerator in the dairy building was given over to the exhibit. There could be seen in plain view sound meat marked with the words "Canada Approved," while alongside of it was meat, bearing the "Condemned" tag, on which tubercles were plainly visible.

There are few farmers but do more or less slaughtering. A small percentage of them, it is safe to say, are sufficiently informed to recognize tuberculosis in meat that is but slightly infected. This exhibit taught a lesson to thousands in a most practical way. Those who studied it could not fail to recognize tuberculosis again. The layman, or the average meat consumer, having seen that demonstration will be on the watch hereafter to see that the meat he buys is sound.

PEARY'S BOY HAD KNOWN

William Pritchard, Cabin Boy on the Roosevelt, Saw Dr. Cook on His Return to Annotok and Heard of His Trip, But Did Not Tell Commander Peary About It All the Way to Battle Harbor.

Battle Harbor, Labrador, by Marconi wireless telegraph via Cape Ray, Nfld., Sept. 20.—One of the men on the steamer Roosevelt, at least, knew long ago that Dr. Frederick A. Cook had claimed to have reached the pole. He is William Pritchard, cabin boy and assistant cook on the Roosevelt, who remained at Annotok with Boatswain Murphy to guard the stores.

Pritchard had not spoken to anyone on board of Dr. Cook's achievement, but when confronted Saturday, just prior to the sailing of the Roosevelt from Battle Harbor, with a wireless message from mid-ocean that Dr. Cook said Pritchard knew the whole story of his dash for the pole, the youth admitted that he had learned from Dr. Cook the details of the final march, and that Dr. Cook had explained to him the route he followed.

Whether Boatswain Murphy also was informed of Dr. Cook's success, Pritchard did not know, but unquestionably Harry Whitney, who was at the storehouse when Dr. Cook returned from his dash with the two Eskimos, is conversant with all the facts. Whitney did not disclose this interesting piece of news to Commander Peary, and Pritchard kept it from Peary during the entire voyage of the Roosevelt to Battle Harbor.

Pritchard said that he was at the house at Annotok with Whitney and Cook, while Murphy was at Etah. He heard Dr. Cook describe to the New Haven sportsman how he went to the pole and remained there April 21 and April 22, or April 22 and 23. Dr. Cook used a map to illustrate the route followed.

Asked why he had not repeated this on board the Roosevelt, Pritchard said that Dr. Cook told him to say nothing about his having been at the pole until the Roosevelt reached civilization.

New light was thrown on the polar controversy yesterday on the arrival of the steamship Tyrian from Battle Harbor.

It was commonly reported at Battle Harbor that Peary had some differences with Whitney, who decided that, instead of returning to Sydney on the Roosevelt, he would do some shooting in Greenland.

Friends of Dr. Cook here point out that when Commander Peary on his return from the pole sent for Prof. McMillan, who had gone to establish a base of supplies at Cape Morris, Jessup, he did not mention in his letter to the professor anything of his discoverey of the pole. The message which was made public by Prof. McMillan at Battle Harbor read:

S.S. Roosevelt, April 28, 1909.—My dear McMillan—Arrived on board yesterday. Northern trip was satisfactory. There is no need of Greenland depot. Captain came on board the 24th. Concentrate all your energies on tidal observations, and line soundings north from Cape Morris, Jessup. Use intended supplies for me for this purpose.—Commander Peary."

Johnson Sends Greeting to Taft.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 20.—President Taft came to the Twin Cities of Minnesota Saturday, and with the shadow of death hanging over the governor of the state, received a cordial but not a demonstrative welcome.

The critical illness of Governor Johnson, probably the most popular executive Minnesota has ever known, entered deeply into the spirit of the day. President Taft was deeply affected. Soon after his arrival he received a message of personal greeting from Governor Johnson. Coming by dictation from the lips of a man who was reported at the time as having but the frailest chance of life, it called out an immediate sympathetic response from Mr. Taft.

Toronto Woman Is Charged With Having Slain Babe

Toronto, Sept. 20.—Charged with the murder of an infant, Mrs. Maud Turner was arrested last night by Detectives Mackie, Wallace and Kennedy at 39 Wood street, where she had been living for two weeks.

She came here from Niagara Falls, where it is alleged she strangled a five-days-old baby girl entrusted to her care and threw it out of a New York Central car window.

The baby was born to Mrs. Annie Anthers of Greenview avenue, Toronto, on the 11th inst. Two advertisements appeared simultaneously in a Toronto paper in July, one offering a child for adoption, the other agreeing to take a child "with money." Mrs. Turner answered the former and the two women got into communication with the result that Mrs. Turner agreed to adopt the baby which was born on the 11th of September in the Burnside Maternity Hospital. Mrs. Turner had received $60 by that date. On the 12th Mrs. Turner visited friends of Mrs. Authers to whom she gave her address as a house on Wilson avenue, and her 'phone number as north 5,364, which the police discovered afterwards to be at 39 Wood street.

On the 17th inst., a despatch from Niagara Falls told of the finding of a dead baby on the track of the N.Y.C. railway. It had been strangled and thrown from a window. On its back was the name "Authers" and the Toronto police discovered that Baby Authers was born in the Burnside Maternity Hospital on the 11th. They concluded that the Authers' baby had been murdered and followed the clues in their possession to the Wood street house. Mrs. Turner was questioned last night. She admitted that she had got the money for adopting the baby and she still had it. Pressed by the detectives, she declared she had given the child to another woman, but she was unable to give the address of the woman, although she had known her for years.

Mrs. Turner was locked up and will answer to the charge of murder. She gives her address as 869 Pierce avenue, Niagara Falls.

NATIVE EVANGELISTS NEEDED FOR JAPANESE MISSION WORK

Toronto, Sept. 20.—Our missionary work in Japan has been a failure and it is time for a change. I know, of course, that the ecclesiastical class don't want to change anything, nor do they want suggestions from laymen, but I would pull up the present system, root and branch, and recall 75 per cent. of the missionaries. The hundreds of thousands of dollars appropriated to missions would be better employed in paying native evangelists."

Thus spoke W. T. Preston, the returned Canadian Trade Commissioner to Japan, in the Queen street Methodist Church on Sunday morning, returning to his attack on Protestant missions in that country.

He said it was not his ambition to launch a controversy. He had been shocked on discovering the true condition of affairs while residing in Japan, and felt that he could not conscientiously remain silent.

Mr. Preston, who was introduced by the pastor, Rev. C. O. Johnston, as a layman Christian worker, spoke from the text, "And the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." In order to bring about the fulfilment of the prophesy, an active missionary spirit was necessary. It was the missionary spirit that had kept aglow the Christian religion through past ages.

When the kingdom of the Mikado was thrown open to the world, foreigners found a people waiting anxiously to learn more of life and conditions beyond the seas. They were recurrent periods of pro and anti-foreign feeling in the history of Japan, and there were evidences now that the anti-foreign feeling was returning.

Dealing with the history of Protestant missionary effort, the speaker said the church had proceeded on the plan of combining religion with education. Many Japanese had been educated in our schools, but very few of them had fallen under the influence of Christianity. "Tack religion on to anything and it will take second place," said the speaker. It was becoming more and more evident that the only way to reach the hearts of the Japanese was through their own people. The Roman Catholic Church had realized that fact as early as the 16th century, when about a million of a population of nine millions were converted through the medium of a native priesthood, but ranks of the converts were broken up by massacres in the early part of the 17th century.

The Protestant Church had failed to see the difference between the kaffirs of Africa and the Japanese, who in reality were our equals intellectually and our peers in some other ways. By failing to recognize the superiority of the Japanese character, Protestant missions had failed. It had endeavored to place the Japanese evangelists on the same footing as it had placed converts in India or Africa. Japanese evangelists, who had spent ten years preparing for the work, were being paid by the church at the rate of $240 to $270 per year, and probationers about $100, or less than a Jinriksha man. The result was that all over Japan were Christian Japanese who were out of the ministry for the sole reason that they could not maintain their families on the salaries allowed. The speaker had talked to many persons, both native Christians and visiting foreigners in Japan, and failed to find one who approved of the missionary system in force. They all felt that the work could be carried on and the people reached much more effectively through native evangelists.

Fifteen Acres Of Lumber Were Burned At Midland

Midland, Sept. 20—Yesterday morning the entire stock of lumber, amounting to about 15,000,000 feet, together with slabs, edgings, lath etc., in the Chew Brothers mill yards went up in smoke, leaving the yard of fifteen acres an ash heap.

About nine o'clock fire was discovered in a lumber pile on the east side of the yard, a few feet from the esplanade on the water front. The brigade and hundreds of citizens were soon on the scene, but a stiff breeze was browing and the flames spread rapidly. Through heroic efforts the mill was saved, although it was ignited a number of times. The stables were consumed, and the office had a very close call.

The firemen worked like trojans for seven hours and late last night there was still a number of piles burning away on the westerly side of the yard.

The loss is about $250,000. The lumber was owned by a number of firms and was partially insured.

The Penetang fire brigade was sent for and gave material aid.

Millionaire Weds His Housekeeper

Madoc Woman Has Kept House for Aged Widower for Three Years—Were to Have Been Married Next Month.

CEREMONY AT BEDSIDE

Auburn, N.Y., Sept. 20.—Auburn's wealthy citizens received a surprise yesterday in the statement given out that John H. Osborne, a retired millionaire manufacturer, aged 77, had married Charlotte E. Lyster of Madoc, Ontario, who had been housekeeper to the aged widower for the past three years.

The ceremony was performed yesterday morning, after City Clerk Hanlon was found to issue a Sunday license, and Rev. Norton T. Houser, of St. Peter's Church, officiated.

The marriage was performed at the groom's bedside, as he is seriously ill with her trouble, and the physicians advised postponing the ceremony, which was to have taken place at Madoc next month.

Declined to Sell to "Bell."

Cobalt, Sept. 20.—The shareholders of the Temiskaming Telephone Co. voted against the sale of the company, to the firm of Montreal brokers who recently offered $1.10 a share for the stock. Though nothing is officially known, it is generally believed that the Bell Co. was behind the offer. As a protest against the action of the meeting, Arthur Ferand, one of the directors, immediately resigned from the board.

Chinese Smuggled From Toronto.

New York, Sept. 20.—Leung Poy and Leung Suey, Chinamen, who were arrested Saturday morning by the police in a freight car of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad at the freight pier on the North River, are held in $1,500 bail each for unlawfully entering the country. The Chinese came from Toronto, and say they paid $300 for their passage in the freight car.

Collision Near Sarnia.

Sarnia, Sept. 20.—Shortly before noon yesterday the American steamer Lackawanna of the Mutual Transportation Co., bound down, with a cargo of ore, flour and shingles, got into a mix-up in the rapids opposite Point Edward with the steamer Shenandoah, resulting in the Lackawanna being rammed, tearing a hole in amidships.

Indicted For Graft.

Wilkes-Barre, Sept. 20.—The grand jury which has been investigating the charges of grafting in connection with the building of the court house, made a final report Saturday to the court. The jury recommended that County Commissioners George Smith, Walter McAvoy and Silas Jones; County Comptroller James N. Norris; Architects McCormick and French; Inspectors Michael Lynch and Chas. Norris, and about a dozen contractors, electricians, plumbers, etc., be indicted by the next grand jury for fraud, conspiracy and malfeasance in office.

In a previous report the grand jury returned true bills against Frank Canlucci, the principal contractor, and Orsi Gormigli, a sub-contractor, in which they were charged with defrauding the county out of $20,000 on a plastering contract.

Kingston's Street Railway.

Kingston, Sept. 20.—In order to provide for extra cost of producing power for the street railway it will be necessary to charge the railway company for power, at the rate of half a cent per kilowatt hour.

Such is the conclusion of the reports of three experts who were appointed to determine the cost of supplying the street railway with power.

Kills the Bugs Feeds the Plant with Bug Death

NON-POISONOUS

Recommended by
Ontario Agricultural College
Guelph, Ontario

They report Bug Death has made an excellent record in each of the past two years. The potatoes on which the Bug Death was applied were more vigorous in growth and greener in appearance throughout each of the seasons than those on which other applications were made.

DO YOU WANT BETTER CROPS?

Of course you do. Well, the way is clear. Use Bug Death and you'll not only have a heavier crop, but larger potatoes of better quality.

Write or call and we'll tell you some more good things of this celebrated Bug Killer and Fertilizer, both in one.

Next day the Rhaetian newspapers devoted columns to the attack upon the emperor by an anarchist from a certain province (once Italian), who had disguised himself as an official in the employ of the burgomaster. There were long paragraphs in praise of the lady who, with marvelous courage and presence of mind, had sprung between the emperor and the assassin, receiving on the arm with which she had shielded Unser Leo a glancing blow from the weapon aimed at the imperial breast; but, thanks to a few earnestly imploring words written by Lady Mowbray to Baron von Lyndal, commands impressed upon the landlord of the hotel and the fact that Rhaetian editors are not as modern as Americans in their methods, the lady was not named. She was a foreigner and a stranger to the capital of Rhaetia. She was, according to the papers, "as yet unknown."

CHAPTER EIGHT

NOT a window of the fourteenth century yellow marble palace on the hill, with its famous garden of the nine fountains, that was not ablaze with light, glittering against a faraway background of violet mountains crowned by snow.

Outside the tall bronze gates where marble lions crouched the crowd that might not pass beyond stared, chattered, pointed and exclaimed without jealousy of their betters. Unser Leo was giving a ball, and it was enough for their happiness to watch the slow moving line of splendid state coaches, gorgeous automobiles and neat broughams with well known crests upon their doors; to strive good naturedly for a peep at the faces and dresses, the jewels and picturesque uniforms; to comment upon all freely, but never impudently, asking one another what would be for supper and with whom the emperor would dance.

"There she is—there's the beautiful young foreign lady who saved him!" cried a girl in the throng. "I was there and saw her, I tell you. Isn't she an angel?"

Instantly a hearty cheer went up, growing in volume, and the green coated policemen had to keep back the crowd that would have stopped the horses and pressed close for a long look into a plain dark blue brougham.

Virginia shrank out of sight against the cushions, blushing and breathing quickly as she caught her mother's hand.

"Dear people—dear, kind people!" she thought. "I love them for loving him. I wonder, oh, I wonder, if they will ever see me and cheer me driving by his side!"

She had chosen to wear the white dress with the pearls, though up to the last moment the grand duchess had suffered tortures of indecision between that and the blue, to say nothing of a pink chiffon trimmed with crushed roses. Before the carriage brought them to the palace doors the girl's blush had faded, and her face was as white as her gown when at her mother's side she passed between bowing lackeys through the marble Hall of Lions, on through the frescoed Rittersaal to the throne room, where the emperor's guests awaited his coming.

It was etiquette not to arrive a moment later than 10 o'clock, and a few minutes after the hour Baron von Lyndal in his official capacity as grand master of ceremonies struck the polished floor twice with his gold knobbed wand of ivory. This signaled the approach of the court from the imperial dinner party, and Leopold entered, with a stout, middle aged royal highness from Russia on his arm.

Until his arrival the beautiful Miss Mowbray had held all eyes, and even when he appeared she was not forgotten. Every one was on tenterhooks to see how she would be greeted by the grateful emperor.

The instant that his dark head towered above other heads in the throne room it was observed even by those not usually observant that never had Leopold been so handsome.

His was a face remarkable for intellect and firmness rather than for classical beauty of feature, though his features were strong and clearly cut. But tonight the sternness that sometimes marred them in the eyes of women was smoothed away. He looked young and ardent, almost boyish, like a man who has suddenly found an absorbing new interest in life.

The first dance he went through with the Russian royalty, who was the guest of the evening, and, still rigidly conforming to the line of duty, which obtains in court ballrooms as on battlefields, the second, third and fourth dances were for the emperor penances instead of pleasures. But for the fifth, a waltz, he bowed before Virginia.

During this long hour there had been hardly a movement, smile or glance of hers which he had not contrived to see since his entrance. He knew just how well Baron von Lyndal carried out his instructions concerning Miss Mowbray. He saw each partner presented to her for a dance the emperor might not claim, and to save his life or a national crisis he could not have forced the same expression in speaking with her royal highness from Russia as that which spontaneously brightened his face when at last he approached Virginia.

"Who is that girl?" asked Count von Breitstein in his usual abrupt manner as the arm of Leopold girdled the slim waist of the princess and the eyes of Leopold drank light from another pair of eyes lifted to his in laughter.

It was to Baroness von Lyndal that the old chancellor put his question, and she fluttered a tiny diamond spangled fan of lace to hide lips that would smile as she answered. "What, chancellor, are you jesting, or don't you really know who that girl is?"

Count von Breitstein turned eyes cold and gray as glass away from the two figures moving rhythmically with the music to the face of the once celebrated beauty. Long ago he had admired Baroness von Lyndal as passionately as it was in him to admire any woman, but that day was so far distant as to be remembered with scorn, and now such power as she had over him was merely to excite a feeling of irritation.

"I seldom trouble myself to jest," he answered.

"Ah, one knows that truly great men are born without a sense of humor. Those who have it are never as successful in life as those without," smiled the baroness, who was by birth a Hungarian and loved laughter better than anything else except compliments upon her vanishing beauty. "How stupid of me to have tried your patience! That girl," as you so uncompromisingly call her, has two claims to attention at court. She is the English Miss Helen Mowbray whose mother has come to Kronburg armed with sheaves of introductions to us all. She is also the young woman of whom the papers are full today, for it is she who saved the emperor's life."

"Indeed!" said the chancellor, a gray gleam in his eye as he watched the white figure floating on the tide of music in the arms of Leopold. "Indeed!"

"I thought you would have known, for you know most things before other people hear of them," went on the baroness. "Lady Mowbray and her daughter are staying at the Hohenlangenwald hotel. That's the mother sitting on the left of Princess Neufried—the pretty Dresden china person. But the girl is a great beauty."

"It's generous of you to say so, baroness," replied the chancellor. "I didn't see the young lady's face at all clearly yesterday. I was stationed too far away. And dress makes a great difference. As for what she did," went on the old man, whose coldness to women and merciless justice to both sexes alike had earned him the nickname of "Iron Heart"—"as for what she did, if it had not been she who intervened between the emperor and death it would have been the fate of another to do so. It was a fortunate thing for the girl, we may say, that it happened to be her arm which struck up the weapon."

"Who is that girl?"

"Or she wouldn't be here tonight, you mean," laughed the baroness. "Don't you think, then, that his majesty is right to single her out for so much honor?" Her eyes were on the dancers, yet that mysterious skill which most women of the world have learned taught her how not to miss the slightest change of expression, if there were any, on the chancellor's square, lined face.

"His majesty is always right," he replied diplomatically. "An invitation to a ball, a dance or two, a few compliments, a call to pay his respects—a gentleman could not be less gracious. And his majesty is one of the first gentlemen in Europe."

"He has had good training what to do and what not to do." The baroness flung her little sop of flattery to Cerberus with a dainty ghost of a bow for the man who had been as a second father to Leopold since the late emperor's death. "But—we're old friends, chancellor"—she was not to blame that they had not been more in the days before she became Baroness von Lyndal—"so, tell me, can you look at the girl's face and the emperor's and still say that everything will end with an invitation, a dance, some compliments and a call to pay respects?"

Iron Heart frowned and sneered, wondering what he could have seen twenty-two years ago to admire in this flighty woman. He would have escaped from her now if escape had been feasible, but he could not be openly rude to the wife of the grand master of ceremonies at the emperor's ball, and, besides, he was not unwilling perhaps to show the lady that her sentimental and unsuitable innuendos were as the buzzing of a fly about his ears.

"I'm close upon seventy and no longer a fair judge of a woman's attractions," he returned carelessly. "A look at her face conveys nothing to me, but were she Helen of Troy instead of Helen Mowbray the invitation, the dance, the compliments and the call, with the present of some jeweled souvenir, are all that are permissible in the circumstances."

"What circumstances?" and the baroness looked as innocent as an inquiring child.

"The lady is not of royal blood, and his majesty, I thank heaven, is not a rone."

"He has a heart, though you trained him, chancellor, and he has eyes. He may never have used them to much purpose before, yet there must be a first time, and, the higher and more strongly built the tower, once it begins to topple the greater is the fall thereof."

"Is it the sense of humor, which you say I lack, that gives you pleasure in discussing the wildest improbabilities as if they were events to be considered seriously? If it is I'm not sorry to lack it. In any case, it's well that neither of us is the emperor's keeper."

"We're at least his very good friends, you as well as I in my humbler way, chancellor, and you and I have known each other for twenty-two years. If it amuses me to discuss improbabilities, why not? Since you call them improbabilities it can do no harm to dwell upon them as ingredients for romance. Not for worlds would I suggest that his majesty isn't an example for all men to follow nor that poor, pretty Miss Mowbray could be tempted to indiscretion, but yet I'd be ready to make a wager, the emperor being human and the girl a beauty, that an acquaintance so romantically begun won't end with a ball and a call."

"What could there possibly be more, or what you hint at as more, in honor?"

The chancellor's voice was angry at last as well as stern, for he could not bear persistence in other people unless it were to further some cause of his own. To the delight of the woman who had once tried in vain to melt his iron heart, Count von Breitstein began to look somewhat like a baited bull. Really, said the baroness to herself, there was an actual resemblance in feature, and joyously she searched for a few more little ribbon tipped banderillos.

What fun it was to ruffle the temper of the surly old brute who had humiliated her woman's vanity in days long past, but not forgotten! She knew the chancellor's desire for the emperor's marriage as soon as a suitable match could be found and, though she was not in the secret of his plans, would have felt little surprise at learning that some eligible royal girl had already been selected. Now how amusing it would be actually to make the old man tremble for the success of his hopes, even if it should turn out in the end to be impossible or undesirable to upset them!

"What could there be more in honor?" she echoed lightly after an instant given to reflection. "Why, the emperor and the girl will see a great deal of each other unless you banish or imprison the Mowbrays. There'll be many dances together, many calls—in fact, a serial romance instead of a short story. Why shouldn't his majesty know the pleasure of a—platonic friendship with a beautiful and charming young woman?"

"Because Plato's out of fashion, if ever he was in, among human beings with red blood in their veins and because, as I said, the emperor is above all else a man of honor. Besides, I doubt that any woman, no matter how pretty or young, could wield a really powerful influence over his life."

"You doubt that? Then you don't know the emperor and you've forgotten some of the traditions of his house."

"Are you trying to warn me of disaster, baroness?"

She laughed. "Oh, dear, no—of nothing disagreeable! But I should be sorry to think, as you seem to do, that our emperor has no youth in his veins."

"I think nothing of the sort. What I do think is that my teachings have not been in vain and that he has grown up to put his duty to his country and his own self respect above everything. He's a strong man—too strong to be trapped in the meshes of any pink and white Vivien. And if he admired a young woman not of royal blood he would keep his distance for her sake. You say this English miss is with her mother at the principal hotel of Kronburg. If Leopold constantly visited them there we should have a scandal. On the other hand, to suggest meeting the girl outside or incognito would be an insult. Either way he would be but poorly rewarding a woman who saved his life."

Baroness von Lyndal's color rallied to the support of her rouge, and her smile dwindled to inanity, for she had insisted upon the argument, and it was going against her.

In her haste to vex the chancellor she had not stopped to study from every side the question she had raised. So far she had merely succeeded in irritating him, and she owed him much more than a pin prick. Such infinitesimal wounds she had contrived to give the man in abundance during her twenty-two years at the Rhaetian court, but now, if she hurt him at all, she would like the stab to be deep and memorable.

To be sure, in beginning the conversation she had thought of nothing more than a momentary gratification, but the very heat of the argument into which she had thrown herself had warmed her malice and sharpened the weapon of her wit. She could justify her expressed opinion only by events, and it occurred to her that she might be able to shape events in such a way that she could say with eyes if not in words, "I told you so."

Her fading smile brightened. "Dear chancellor, you do well to have faith in your imperial pupil," said she. "You've helped to make him what he is, and you're ready to keep him what he should be. I suppose even that if, being but a young man and having the hot blood of his race, he should stray into a primrose path you would take advantage of old friendship to—er—put up signposts and barriers?"

"Were there the slightest chance of such necessity arising," grumbled the chancellor, shrugging his shoulders.

"It's like your integrity and courage. What a comfort, then, that the necessity is so unlikely to arise!"

The old man looked at her with level gaze, the ruthless look that brushes away a woman's paint and powder and coldly counts the wrinkles underneath. "I must have misunderstood you, then, a moment ago," he said. "I thought your argument was all the other way round, madam."

"I told you I was amusing myself. What can one do at a ball when one has reached the age when it would be foolish to dance? Why, I believe that Lady Mowbray and her daughter are not remaining long in Kronburg."

At last she was able to judge that she had given the chancellor a few uneasy moments, for his eyes brightened visibly with relief. "Ah," he returned, "then they are going out of Rhaetia?"

"Not exactly that," said the baroness slowly, pleasantly and distinctly. "I hear that they've been asked to the country to visit one of his majesty's oldest friends."

Leopold was not supposed to care for dancing, though he danced—as it was his pride to do all things—well. Certainly there was often a perfunctoriness about his manner in a ballroom, a suggestion of the soldier on duty in his unsmiling face and his readiness to lead a partner to her seat when a dance was over.

But tonight a new Leopold moved to the music. A girl's white arm on his—that slender arm which had been quick and firm as a man's in his defense—the perfume of a girl's hair and the gold glints upon it, the shadow of a girl's dark lashes and the light in a pair of gray eyes when they were lifted, the beating of a girl's heart near mm, the springtime grace of a girl's sweet youth in its contrast with the voluptuous summer of Rhaetian types of beauty, the warm rose that spread upward from a girl's childlike dimples to the womanly arch of her brows—all these charms and more which rendered one girl a hundred times adorable took hold of him and made him not an emperor, but a man, unarmored.

When the music ceased he fancied for an instant that some accident had befallen the musicians. Then when he realized that the end of the dance had come in its due time he remembered with pleasure a rule of his court established in the days of those who had been before him. After each dance an interval of ten minutes was allowed before the beginning of another. Ten minutes are not much to a man who has things to say which could hardly be said in ten hours. Still, they are something, and to waste even one would be like spilling a drop of precious elixir from a tiny bottle containing but nine other drops.

They had scarcely spoken yet, except for commonplaces which any one might have overheard, since the day on the mountain, and in this first moment of the ten each was wondering whether or no that day should be ignored between them. Leopold did not feel that it should be spoken of, for it was possible that the girl did not recognize the chamois hunter in the emperor, and Virginia did not feel that she could speak of it. But, then, few things turn out as people feel they should.

Next to the throne room was the ballroom, and beyond was another known as the waldsaal, which Leopold had fitted up for the gratification of a fancy. It was named the waldsaal because it represented a wood. Walls and ceiling were masked with thick growing creepers trained over invisible wires, through which peeped stars of electric light, like the checkerings of sunshine between netted branches. Trees grew up, with their roots in boxes hidden beneath the moss covered floor. There were grottoes of ivy draped rock in the corners, and here and there, out from leafy shadows, glittered the glass eyes of birds and animals—eagles, stags, chamois, wolves and bears—which the emperor had shot.

This strange room, so vast as to seem empty when dozens of people wandered beneath its trees and among its rock grottoes, was thrown open to guests whenever a ball was given at the palace, but the conservatories and palm houses were more popular, and when Leopold brought Miss Mowbray to the waldsaal after their dance it was in the hope that they might not be disturbed.

She was lovelier than ever in her white dress under the trees, looking up at him with a wonderful look in her eyes, and the young man's calmness was mastered by the beating of his blood.

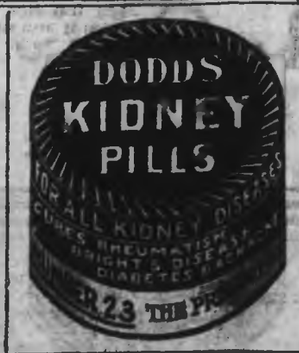
"This is a kind of madness," he said to himself. "It will pass. It must pass." And aloud, meaning all the while to say something different and commonplace, the real words in his mind broke through the crust of conventionality, "Why did you do it?"

Virginia's eyes widened. "I don't understand." Then, in an instant, she found that she did understand. She knew, too, that the question had asked itself in spite of him, but that once it had been uttered he would stand to his guns.

"I mean the thing I shall have to thank you for always."

If Virginia had had time to think she might have prepared some pretty answer; but, there being no time, her response came, as his question had, from the heart, "I couldn't help doing it."

"You couldn't help risking your life to"— He dared not finish.



"It was to save— Nor was there any end for her sentence.

Then perhaps it was not strange that he forgot certain restrictions which a royal man in conversing with a commoner is not supposed to forget. In fact, he forgot that he was royal or that she was not, and his voice grew unsteady, his tone eager, as if he had been some poor subaltern with the girl of his first love.

"There's something I must show you," he said. Opening a button of the military coat blazing with jewels and orders, he drew out a loop of thin gold chain. At the end dangled a small bright thing that flashed under a star of electric light.

"My ring!" breathed Virginia.

Thus died the emperor's intention to ignore the day that had been theirs to gether.

"Your ring! You gave it to Leo He kept it. He will always keep it Have I surprised you?"

Virginia felt it would be best to say "Yes," but instead she answered "No," for pretty white fibs cannot be told under such a look in a man's eyes by a girl who loves him.

"I have not? When did you guess the truth—yesterday or"—

"At Allehelligen."

Silence fell for a minute, while Leopold digested the answer and its full meaning. He remembered the bread and ham, the cow he could not milk the rucksacks he had carried. He remembered everything and laughed.

"You knew at Allehelligen? Not on the mountain when"—

"Yes, I guessed even then, I confess Oh, I don't mean that I went there ex pecting to find you. I didn't. I think I shouldn't have gone had I known Every one believed you were at Mellinabad, but when I tumbled down and you saved me I looked up and—of course I'd seen your picture, and one reads in the papers that you're fond of chamois hunting. I couldn't help guessing. Oh, I'm sorry you asked me this!"

"My ring!" breathed Virginia.

"Why?"

"Because one might have to be afraid of an emperor if he were angry."

"Do I look angry?"

Their eyes met again, laughing at first, then each finding unexpected depths in those of the other which drove away laughter. Something in Leopold's breast seemed alive and struggling to be free from restraint like a fierce wild bird. He shut his lips tightly, breathing hard. Both forgot that a question had been asked but it was Virginia who spoke first since it is easier for a woman than a man to hide feeling.

"I wonder why you kept the ring after my—impertinence."

"I had a good reason for keeping it."

"Won't you tell me?"

"You're quick at forming conclusions, Miss Mowbray. Can't you guess?"

"To remind you to beware of strange young women on mountains."

"No."

"Because your own picture is inside?"

"It was a better reason than that."

"Am I not to ask it?"

"On that day you asked what you chose. All the more should you do so now, since there's nothing I could refuse you."

"Not the half of your kingdom, like the royal men in fairy stories?"

As soon as the words were out Virginia would have given much to have them back. She had not thought of a meaning they might convey, but she tried not to blush lest he should think of it now. Nevertheless he did think of it, and the light words, striking a chord they had not aimed to touch, went echoing on and on till they reached that part of himself which the emperor knew least about—his heart.

"Half his kingdom?" Yes, he would give it to this girl if he could. Heavens, what it would be to share it with her!

"Ask anything you will," he said as a man speaks in a dream.

"Then tell me—why you kept the ring."

"Because the only woman I ever cared—to make my friend took it from her finger and gave it to me."

"How the emperor is pleased to pay compliments."

"You know I am sincere."

"But you'd seen me only for an hour. Instead of deserving your friendship, I'm afraid I"—

"For one hour? That's true. And how long ago is that one hour? A week or so, I suppose, as time counts But then came yesterday and the thing you did for me. Now I've known you always."

"If you had, perhaps you wouldn't want me for your friend."

"I do want you."

The words would come. It was true already. He did want her, but not as a friend. His world—a world without women, without passion fiery enough to devour principles or traditions—was upside down.

It was well that the ten minutes grace between dances was over and the music for the next about to begin A young officer, Count von Breitstein's half brother, who was to be Miss Mowbray's partner, appeared in the distance looking for her, but stopped seeing that she was still with the emperor.

"Goodby," said Virginia while her words could still be only for the ears of Leopold.

"Not goodby. We're friends."

"Yes. But we shan't meet often."

"Why? Are you leaving Kronburg?"

"Perhaps—soon. I don't know."

"I must see you again. I will see you once more, whatever comes."

"Once more, perhaps. I hope so, but"—

"After that"—

"Who knows?"

"Once more—once more!" The words echoed in Virginia's ears. She heard them through everything, as one hears the undertone of a mountain torrent, though a brass band may bray to drown its deep music.

Once more he would see her, whatever might come. She could guess why it might be only once, though he would fain have that once again and again repeated, for this game of hers begun with such a light heart, was more difficult to play than she had dreamed.

If she could but be sure he cared, if he would tell her so in words and not with eyes alone, the rest might be easy, although at best she could not see the end. Yet how in honor could he tell Miss Helen Mowbray that he cared? And if the telling were not to be in honor how could she bear to live her life?

"Once more!" What would happen in that "once more?" Perhaps nothing save a repetition of grateful thanks and courteous words akin to a farewell.

To be sure, Lady Mowbray and her daughter might run away and the negotiations between the emperor's advisers and the Grand Duchess of Baumenburg-Drippe for the Princess Virginia's hand might be allowed to go on as if no outside influence had ruffled the peaceful current of events. Then in the end a surprise would come for Leopold. Willful Virginia would have played her little comedy, and all might be said to end well. But Virginia's heart refused to be satisfied with so tame a last chapter, a finish to her romance so conventional as to be distastefully obvious, almost if not quite a failure.

She had begun to drink a sweet and stimulating draft—she who had been brought up on milk and water—and she was reluctant to put down the cup, still half full of sparkling nectar.

"Once more!" If only that once could be magnified into many times. If she could have her chance, her "fling," like the lucky girls who were not royal!

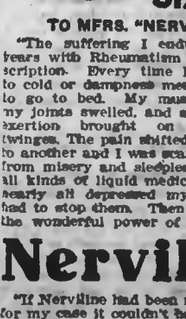
RHEUMATISM IN THE SYSTEM



SIX YEARS CURED IN SIX DAYS

TO MFRS. "NERVILINE."

"The suffering I endured for six years with Rheumatism is beyond description. Every time I was exposed to cold or dampness meant that I had to go to bed. My muscles stiffened, my joints swelled, and any attempt at exertion brought on excruciating twinges. The pain shifted from one part to another and I was scarcely ever free from misery and sleeplessness. I took all kinds of liquid medicines, but they nearly all depressed my heart and I had to stop them. Then I was told of the wonderful power of Nerviline.

Nerviline

"If Nerviline had been made specially for my case it couldn't have been more successful. It sank right into the core of the painful part, gave me ease, allowed me to sleep, gave me the use of my arms and limbs—in fact, made a new man of me. I urge all Rheumatics to use 'Nerviline.'

A. E. TRAYONER.
"Justice of the Peace, Lancaster."

The most wonderful pain-subduing substances in the world are in Nerviline—that's why it penetrates so quickly, why it instantly cures pain that other remedies can't even relieve. You'll be surprised how quickly sciatica, lumbago, or rheumatism are cured by Nerviline—seems almost magical the way it will cure a cold or sore throat. When the chest is sore and it hurts to draw a long breath, one rubbing with Nerviline is sufficient. So highly valued is Nerviline by those who use it, that many families consider it quite as good as a doctor for aches, pains, and minor ailments of every kind. Large 25c bottles are sold by all dealers.

Bringing in "Fir Boughs" to Make a Camp Bed

FOR GIRLS WHO ROUGH IT IN A FOREST CAMP

Where Freedom Is the Keynote and the Balmy Air and the Good Exercise Spell Health, Happiness and Beauty

Trimming Off Branches to Use for the Under Mattress

The Camp

Their Turn to Build a Camp Fire

The Way to Lay the Fir Boughs with the Soft Ends on Top

The Bathing Hour at a Girls' Camp

HALF the fun of camp life, as every girl knows who has tried this kind of summer vacation, is in sleeping outdoors. After the freedom of a day in the woods or on the seashore even a canvas tent seems like a cage, and the true camper chooses to spend her nights, like her days, with the starred dome of heaven for her couch canopy instead of abutting herself inside of canvas walls.

Long tramps through the woods are wearying, the fresh air is soporific, and the rustle of the leaves is like a lullaby, so that when night falls you feel that you could sleep sweetly on the hardest kind of a bed, while a couch made of soft, springing fir boughs seems more delicious and inviting than the softest eiderdown.

It is part of the guide's lore to know how to put up one of these nature couches. Leave it to him and he will choose the spot, make the couch and attend to the other details of setting up camp, but it is worth while learning how to construct your own fir bed and how to freshen it as the branches dry and become harsh.

In one of the fashionable camps, where half a hundred school girls spend their summer vacation accompanied by teachers and chaperons, the girls were given lessons in making fir beds. A famous guide in the neighborhood, who was attached to the camp when the demands of sportsmen did not require his services, gave this instruction, and in a week's time every girl could get up her own fir bed, and before the summer was over the whole camp had learned more of the woodman's craft than some men know after they have spent a season hunting and fishing.

Each girl was given a hatchet and led to the woods, where she was shown how to chop down fir trees. The fresh, green trees are better than older ones because their foliage is soft and their branches springy. Only a few poles are needed for a couch, four or possibly six being enough for ordinary use. The branches were stripped off, hatchets being wielded with considerable skill and surprising strength by the young girls.

Tennis and basketball develop strength and muscle, but they do not qualify the average girl for tree felling exercise. A hatchet is far more difficult to handle than a golf club, as any girl knows who has tried swinging both.

THE long, slender tree trunks used for the sides of the bed and to save space each pole was chopped off just the right length. Two or three can be piled together, and others can be crossed at the ends, the guide explained, so some of the fir trees were laid together like the foundation of a log cabin. Then the woodman set each girl to sorting in two piles the branches she had cut off the fir tree, and when this was done he taught them all how to lay in the fragrant mattress.

A few branches of pine were scattered over the bottom inside the four boughs, and on top of these he laid the larger fir branches, those of two or three feet length, so that the upper side presented a convex curve and made the spring. Each branch was laid with the smaller end toward the head of the bed, and the larger end was covered with the next row of branches. When the entire rectangular space of the bed was covered with these larger branches to the depth of twelve or eighteen inches the interstices were next filled in with the soft young, fresh green ends, that had been cut off and set aside for this purpose.

All were placed with the convex curve up, and whenever the guide discovered depressions or lumps he insisted that the girl go over the whole fir mattress again until it had been built up evenly and thickly. Fir branches are better for the top than pine because they are smaller and softer and the needles are shorter. A few twigs of balsam give a pleasant fragrance to the bed, and the odor is supposed to waft one into the land of dreams without loss of time.

The comfort of a hair mattress is nothing compared to this kind of couch, and any one who has ever tried the delicious softness and springiness of a bough bed will never choose another for camping. There is the added advantage of being able to make it and then leave it when the outing is ended and not being bothered with having to have cots or springs crated and sent back to town.

The experienced camper carries the least possible amount of baggage and the necessaries are packed in the most compact form. Even those who occupy pretentious log camps having their built-in bunks or balcony bedrooms are in favor of the rustic couch, and where their fir beds are not built on the ground they are often set up on the wide porches, either on the lower or upper floors.

For rainy nights a sleeping tent should be provided or the framework can be set up so that in a very few minutes the fir beds can be covered with a canvas roof and everything kept dry.

Fir beds retain their freshness and elasticity several days—two or three weeks sometimes—but whenever the upper layer of boughs begins to dry and crack the smaller pieces can soon be replaced by fresh ones. Naturally the boughs settle a little from the sleeper's weight and if the original height of the bed is to be maintained new bits of fir should be added from time to time.

COUCH coverings vary in camps, so there is no rule to follow absolutely. In the more primitive ones a pair of blankets is used and a pillow is dispensed with. A fir bed can be made up as conveniently as a brass one with sheets, blankets and eider quilts, but the usual fashion is a compromise, with a pair of blankets and sheets and a pillow made of fir boughs. This is easy to manage, for all you have to do is to make the branches higher at the head and fill in the crevices with more soft tender ends of fir.

WHEN the campers live in tents instead of bungalows the choice of the camp site is left to the guide, who looks for a spot with proper drainage. He may not select the most picturesque one, but he will be sure to get the most comfortable, and it is not always desirable to have the living quarters overshadowed by thick foliage. A few trees add to the coolness of the camp, but thick canopies of leaves and branches keep out the sunshine, which is necessary to the health and pleasure of the campers.

There should be separate tents for everything; one for a living room, another for a dining room, as well as one outdoor dining room when the weather is pleasant; separate sleeping tents and one far enough removed from the others for cooking. Where the party is large it is always pleasant to provide a little nook to which the girls can withdraw when they want a little rest and solitude or where they can write or study. No matter how agreeable and congenial the party may be, there is always a time with each one when solitude is better than the most charming society.

THE long walks through the woods provide daily exercise, and for diversity there is rowing, swimming or fishing. A tennis court is an addition to any camp which is to be occupied longer than a few days, and it is worth while laying out a rough court where the trees are not too thick to furnish a variety of sports. Quoits and clock golf are mild games suited to camp life and they are easy to lay out.

School camps usually follow a routine with certain hours for study and observation classes, rest and domestic lessons. Botany and all phases of nature form the principal feature of lessons, and where the camp occupies historic ground or lies near the scenes of our nation's early struggles, history is studied as near first hand as it is possible to get it.

A lake or a stream that is not too swift offers a splendid chance for swimming, and every girl who has not mastered the art ought to devote a little time each day to this very useful accomplishment.

There are many who do not consider it essential for girls to know how the domestic side of camp life is managed, but knowledge along this line never comes amiss, and the plan of having only the necessities of life on hand and of making the best use of the provisions offered by the country is one that has its value. Each camper should do her share of the daily work and by changing from week to week all have a chance to take an active part in the entire management of the menage.

SOCIAL AMENITIES FOR THE SCHOOL GIRL

IF you wish to be a delightful, attractive girl do not allow yourself to belong to the "I don't care" class. This class is a large aggregation of girls who are not really as indifferent as the phrase sounds. Indeed, they are not indifferent at all, but have fallen into the way of using the expression out of politeness.

For instance, when you take them to a restaurant and ask them what they would like for luncheon they "don't care." If you invite them to have a soda or a sundae and ask their preference they "don't care." If they are your house guests and you ask them whether they would like to go swimming or go out for a motor ride they "don't care."

Now, they do care, for every live girl has her preferences, but some of them think that they must not express them out of courtesy to the hostess. This is mistaken politeness and the "don't care" girl is often a source of constant annoyance to her hostess, who either has to decide for the girl or help her decide the most trivial questions.

If a person is entertaining you and the matter is even so small as inviting you to have a sundae, the desire of the hostess is to give you pleasure, and when you indicate your preference she feels happy in providing the thing you most like. But when you say you do not care what you have she is all at sea, for she does not know your taste, and you make it necessary for her to suggest one thing after another until she finally hits on something you think you will have. This gives her a lot of unnecessary bother, whereas if you express your preference at once everything goes smoothly. If it happens that you really do not know what you want, ask your hostess what she is going to have, and then tell her you will try the same thing. This decides the matter without discussion and the order can be promptly given.

As a house guest the "don't care" girl is often a most annoying young person, though her offences are unintentional and she is quite unconscious of them. But her unwillingness to make decisions is a constant tax on her hostess. If she doesn't care whether she goes swimming or motoring, and is equally vague about everything of the sort, she is always on the mind of her hostess, whereas the girl who expresses her preference when she is asked can be arranged for without the slightest trouble. So, if you wish to be popular—and what girl does not?—do not be a "don't care" girl.

LINEN BELT PURSES.

AMONG the dainty little accessories of dress that are used by the girls of to-day few are as convenient and fill as long felt a want as the linen belt purses. In these days of no pockets the question of how to carry a little change is often a most difficult one, and especially is it so in summer, when the girls go around so much in thin dresses with no hats and coats. Many times a little money is wanted, and how is a girl to carry it? The linen belt purse is a simple and safe solution of the difficulty.

These purses can be bought, but most girls make their own, and nothing could be more acceptable when one wants to make a little gift for a friend. The purse is quite easy to make, and may have only plain scallops embroidered around the edge or may be quite elaborately embroidered with solid French work or eyelets or a combination of both.

A rather heavy linen should be used, for a thin one would wear out too soon. The purse is made in much the shape of a square envelope, and has two little straps of the linen across the back, through which the belt is slipped. The piece of linen must be cut considerably larger than the finished purse in order to have a margin beyond the scallops while embroidering them. Measure the width of the widest belt the purse is to be used with and calculate how long the piece of linen must be, remembering the extra depth at the bottom for the margin. The width of the linen must be such as to make the purse about square when finished.

First hem across one end and baste it up carefully, so that the hemmed edge will come a little below the top of the belt. Then scallop all around the sides and bottom through the two thicknesses of linen. Next turn it over on the other side and scallop around the upper flap. The scallops can be drawn with a pencil, using a thimble as a marker. Fold over and stitch two narrow pieces of linen for the straps and sew them on the back. Make a small buttonhole in each corner of the upper flap and sew a button at the corresponding place on the under flap, and the purse is finished. The upper flap should reach nearly to the bottom of the purse, and can have any amount of embroidery that the maker chooses to put on it.

WEAR FELT HATS NOW.

FOLLOWING the style set by French matrons, the young women of New York have already abandoned straw and lingerie hats for felt, beaver and velvet millinery, and instead of wearing wash dresses during September have adopted chic cloth costumes in the newest autumn colors to correspond to the hats.

This unusual haste in discarding light summery headgear is not surprising when one sees pretty toques, trimmed with huge wings, and the becoming Louis XVI. tricornes, that are so stunning and practical for fall travelling, exhibited in the shops.

Judging from the millinery displays and the shapes already seen in the streets and in fashionable hotels and restaurants, débutantes will wear small hats. For those in the Henri II. type, the moderate military turnup brim, the Coligny style and the beret toque are favorites.

Of course, a few shapes with wide brims will be worn, but the edict from Paris is "small hats," and young American women, having used big hats for several seasons, seem delighted with the change and are rather "rushing the season" to put on the latest styles.

A characteristic feature of the autumn designs is the big crown, and this is most pronounced because of the sharp contrast between crown and brim, for as the brim has become narrower the crown seems to have increased in height, so that when surrounded by big wings it looks large.

Trimmings, however, are comparatively plain, for a big handsome wing or two wings caught to the crown with folds of satin ribbon or rosettes of velvet are used almost exclusively.

These decorations have a tailored look that the young woman who affects tailored suits will be pleased with. Incidentally, though the ornamentation is plain the style with which it is placed upon the hats gives an air that is unmistakably smart and that cannot easily be duplicated in cheap millinery.

Separate Waists for Many Occasions.

SEPARATE waists of cloth, flannel and silk are usually necessary in the school girl's outfit, and among the new designs for fall fashions are many for these useful garments. For the hard wear blouse flannel, cloth, fine serge and cashmere and checked, plaid and striped woollen materials are used, while for the blouse to be worn on more distinguished occasions, supple taffeta, crêpe de Chine, tulle and voile de soie are employed. Stitching pleats, cloth covered buttons and braid trim the everyday blouse, and the daintier bodice of fine material is trimmed with lace, embroidery and fine tucks.

A very attractive model for a rather severe taffeta or crêpe bodice which will also look well in fine cashmere is made with three vertical pleats on each side of the front panel, running from the shoulder to the belt. The space between these pleats is equal. The sleeves, which are long and rather close fitting, are also pleated from shoulder to wrist.

The wide front panel of this blouse is strapped with soutache barettes. Across the wider part of the panel at the top there are five of these barettes. Then comes a space and beneath this a group of four barettes. Then another space is followed by three barettes. The blouse has a high collar, which is tucked and finished with a stiff cravat and a crushed belt of silk. The ends of the barettes are finished with ribbon.

A severe cloth blouse is opened on the left side. It has a shallow chemisette of tucked batiste, forming a round neck. The high collar is also of the tucked batiste. The blouse is finished with five rows of stitching around the chemisette and down the side where the opening is. There are also rows of stitching around the armholes. The long sleeves are perfectly flat at the top and are finished with rows of stitching around the bottom and extending up the sleeve almost to the elbow. Cloth covered buttons and tabs are also used in groups of three on the left side of the blouse and on the cuffs.

A plaid flannel blouse in two tones of blue had a plain piece of material set in bias about two-thirds of the way down the front. There were box pleats of the plaid used straight on either side of this bias piece. The blouse was fastened down the front with buttons covered with the material. The sleeves, a little full, were gathered into a shallow cuff, and there was a pleat down the outside arm.

One of the more elaborate new blouse models is of tulle over thin, soft silk. The tulle is pleated both in the sleeves and body. The trimming is of vertical bands of taffeta held together by soutache barettes and small silk covered buttons and finished with tassels. The blouse has a high collar and is finished with a tulle cravat.

Some of the new blouses are trimmed in a way that is very attractive for young girls and also allow an opportunity of carrying one's colors to suit various occasions.

A blouse made of net, chiffon, tulle or voile de soie in white or cream and having a shallow round chemisette and high collar of cream or white lace is made very simply, the body and sleeves being laid in pleats or tucks. The trimming is of lace, having well defined rounding scallops and an open design through which ribbon may be run. This lace is laid flat around the lower edge of the chemisette and two pieces are put together to form a panel for the front of the blouse. It is also used around the bottom of the sleeves. Velvet or soft satin ribbon may be run through this lace in narrow or broader width according as the space will allow. If lace having the desired places for ribbon cannot be found, it is possible to purchase a fairly heavy net and scallop it, trimming the edges with lace and setting in ornamental beading at the top or as lace motifs.

USEFUL WALL POCKET.

IF you happen to have in your room a door which is not used leading into another room and leaving the hollow space on your side, there are several good ways to utilize it. You will usually find that the space is rather shallow for shelves that are to be used for books unless you are willing to have the shelves come out into the room. If you need book shelves and like this idea it makes an effective arrangement after you have the straight shelves up to have corner pieces extending from each shelf to the wall, making a series of small brackets, on which ornaments and mementos may be kept, or on which some particularly choice volume may rest in elegant seclusion. There should be a shelf built across the top of the door and extending over these corner brackets to complete the design.

If you don't particularly need book shelves, but want a place for stowing away odds and ends of all kinds, fill up the space with a wall pocket or, rather, a series of pockets. These may be made of linen, crash, denim, chintz or cretonne, and the pockets may be any size which you want for your particular needs. Of course they should be flat and should never be stuffed so full that they bulge out beyond the doorway.

You should first cut a piece of material exactly to fit the door. The pockets are made in rows stretching entirely across this back piece. For the pockets strips of material cut to any desired depth are stitched to the back piece by machine, two rows of stitching being desirable. The width of the pockets is determined by the spacing of the vertical stitching; that is to say, each pocket is separated from the next on the same row by two rows of machine stitching. The pockets are hemmed at the top, and the back piece should be weighted along the bottom hem by a few leads sewed in at intervals. If you wish to have this wall pocket covered, a curtain of the same material or of whatever drapery is used in the room may be hung from the edge of the door. As the pocket fits snugly inside, there will, of course, be no effect of bulging. If the pockets are to be used for magazines, &c., it isn't necessary to have a curtain.

RACK FOR POSTCARDS.

FOR holding collections of postcards girls who are interested in amateur carpentering and cabinetmaking, or, to use the more modern phrase, in manual training, are now making very useful and at the same time ornamental racks which hold a large number of cards and keep those from different sections of country separated. The racks are made of wood and have three bars at each side and two bars on the bottom. At the ends are square pieces of wood hollowed out at the bottom to form two ornamental feet, sloped out at the top to make a more ornamental line and with oval holes cut in the centre near the top, which form handles by which the rack may be lifted. There are spaces cut in these solid wooden ends through which the side and bottom bars are slipped. The two upper side bars are perforated with round holes at regular intervals. Through these perforations slender brass bars are slipped, and it is these brass bars which separate the different groups of cards.

It is perfectly possible for girls who do not do cabinetmaking, &c., to make these racks by using heavy cardboard and upholstering it with brocade or tapestry. The two end pieces, which are about square in proportion, although the lines are not kept square, should be made of two pieces of cardboard, each so that they may be sufficiently strong. The cardboard is hollowed out at the top, the oval holes are cut in a short distance from the top to make the handles, and feet are cut from the two lower corners. The pieces of board are then sewed together and covered on both sides with tapestry or with a plain material, which should be trimmed on the outer side with a wreath, a bouquet of ribbon flowers or embroidery, or perhaps with a small French engraving framed in gilt galloon. Along the edges of these end pieces three slits are made at equal intervals and on the bottom edge two more slits of similar size. These are for the ends of the bars.

The sides and bottom of the box should not be made of bars, with spaces between, as in the case of the wooden rack, but of solid pieces of cardboard, two pieces being sewed together and covered with tapestry. The top may be edged with gold braid or with narrow fringe. The spaces between the groups of cards are formed by cord of gilt or heavy silk, which is slipped through small brass rings sewed inside along the sides of the rack. The cords are slipped through the rings on each side and tied or fastened with clasps.

GRAND RALLY

BOYS

THE

EXAMINER

WE WONDER if it ever occurred to the boys of Peterborough that the selling of papers was a stepping-stone to a successful business career in future years.

DO they recognize the fact that this little business offers them an opportunity to

MAKE

100 Per Cent ?

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

BOYS buy the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each ; or in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive ten cents from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 62 2-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts ?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say that the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

A NEWSBOY'S EXPERIENCE IN A LARGE CITY. Why can't a local Boy be benefitted proportionately ? This story is taken from the Saturday Post :

MONEY IN NEWSPAPER ROUTES.

Another boy was only thirteen when his father died, leaving two hundred dollars insurance, a widow and four younger children. The insurance money was loaned out to a neighbour at six per cent., as a sort of reserve fund, and while the widow did plain sewing, the boy carried newspapers morning and evening. After three months' experience with this work he borrowed twenty-five dollars and purchased the smallest newspaper route in town. Vigorous canvassing for new customers made that route so productive that in six months he paid back the loan. The lender offered another loan of fifty dollars, which the boy took, buying two more routes. These were covered by boys hired to do the work, however, because he felt that all his energy must go into the original route, so that he would at least be certain of good returns from that. Principles of management learned by this plan made him so successful that in less than five years he owned every newspaper route in his town. His mother's two hundred dollars was still intact, and his brothers and sisters going to school. A legacy of two hundred dollars fell to the family. This, with the original two hundred dollars and another hundred the boy had saved, was paid on a home costing twenty-eight hundred dollars, the balance to be cleared off at the rate of twenty-five dollars a month. Three furnished rooms were rented at a total of about twenty-two dollars monthly, and this money, it was agreed, should never be spent. Newspaper routes, odd jobs and the mother's contributions kept the family and paid the instalments. In four years the income from furnished rooms, put away in the bank, grew to more than one thousand dollars. The mortgage was finally cleared off, and the boy, now nearly twenty-one years old, started to get an education at the high school.

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily all selling the Examiner, but some easily make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Boys! Be Boys of Business

Get in the game. It won't hurt you, but will give you a right start. You will have money of your own to save or buy useful needs with.

BOYS ! Take your spare time between four and six o'clock and see what success you will have between now and Christmas.

NEWSBOYS' BONANZA

Boys, figure this proposition out for yourselves. Be ambitious. Good newsboys are always taken care of and recommended for future positions.

WOODBINE TRACK OPENS.

Seagram's Bouquet is Winner of the Autumn Cup.

Toronto, Sept. 20.—The Toronto Autumn Cup was the feature of the opening day of the Woodbine fall meeting on Saturday, and brought out a game field, hotly contesting to the finish, when Seagram's Bouquet unexpectedly beat Hanbridge, in 2.06 1-5, one and a fifth seconds behind the track record.

The track was in particularly good order, and there was a large and fashionable turnout. In the first race Lady Irma made good her reputation of last spring and won the Tercentenary purse for P. T. Chinn in 1.13 3-5, beating all the favorites at 8 to 1. Amelia Jenks was a general favorite and pulled off the Rosebery purse for her backers. In the Islington purse Zipango took first place, beating Fair Annie in a close race.

First race—Six furlongs, purse $500, for all ages—Lady Irma, 1; Hasty Agnes, 2; Pajaorita, 3. Time, 1.13-5.

Second race—Six furlongs, purse $500, for two-year-olds—Amelia Jenks, 1; The Monk, 2; Bob Co, 3. Time, 1.14 3-5.

Third race, 1 1-8 miles, purse $500, for three-year-olds and up, selling—Zipango, 1; Fair Annie, 2; Joe Rose, 3. Time, 1.56 3-4.

Fourth race—1 1-4 miles, purse $2,500, Toronto Cup, for three-year-olds and up, handicap—Bouquet, 1; Hanbridge, 2; Green Seal, 3. Time, 2.06 1-5.

Fifth race—About two miles, Woodbine Autumn Steeplechase, purse $1,500, for four-year-olds and up—Thistledale, 1; Harrington, 2; Bergeo, 3. Time, 4.06.

Sixth race—1 1-16 miles, purse $500, for three-year-olds and up, selling—Veame, 1; Harry Richeson, 2; Uncle Toby, 3. Time 1.51.

Athens Is Nervous.

Athens, Sept. 20.—The political situation in Greece, while calmer, continues to cause grave anxiety in diplomatic circles. There are not wanting careful prudent men who predict that King George will still be forced to abdicate, although there is no personal feeling against him.

The choice of the military party, which is now really in power, is Prince George, grandson of the present King and son of Crown Prince Constantine. He is 19 years old.

The British fleet is lying off the Piraeus.

One Drowned; Others Burned.

Mount Clemens, Mich., Sept. 20.—Theodore Englander, jr., 18, son of the pastor of the local German Lutheran Church, was drowned Saturday night. Ray de Kay and Ray Groesbeck were badly burned about the hands and 22 seniors of the Mount Clemens High School, many of them girls, had a narrow escape from death when the 44-foot gasoline launch Saratoga, on which the party was returning from a picnic at Tashmoo Park, burned to the water's edge in the mouth of the Clinton River.

Fair Wages on G.T.P.

Ottawa, Sept. 20.—An important light upon the complaint made by trades unionists, that the contractors on the mountain section of the Grand Trunk Pacific are not paying standard wages, and that that is the cause of the shortage of labor, at which the company is protesting, is given in a report to the Minister of Labor by J. D. McNiven, one of the fair wage officers of the Department.

An investigation of the wages paid showed ordinary laborers received $2.50, $2.75 and $3 a day and were only charged 25 cents a meal or $5.25 per week for their board, though they had to provide their own blankets and bedding for use in bunk houses given free of charge.

The majority of the laborers are foreign born and unable to speak English, but by means of those who could, the fair-wage officer came to the conclusion that there is no general complaint, and that on the whole the men seemed perfectly satisfied and content.

His final conclusion is that the rate of wages is fair, reasonable and should not be interfered with.

Sir Thomas Bent Is Dead.

Melbourne, Australia, Sept. 20.—Sir Thomas Bent, Premier of Victoria, is dead. He was an Australian by birth, and has been Premier, Treasurer and Minister of Railways of Victoria since 1904. He was created a K.C.M.G. in 1903. In 1907 he was authorized to visit England, with a view to arranging for cheap transportation of emigrants to Victoria.

Sold Unripe Grapes.

Beamsville, Sept. 20.—Inspector Baker of the fruit division has issued a summons against Robt. O. Konkle, a Clinton Township farmer, for putting unripe champion grapes in the hands of Randall & Falconbridge, fruit dealers of Grimsby.

Earl of Meath Trophy.

London, Sept. 20.—In the school corps rifle competition for the Earl of Meath trophy, an Empire match, England with 1,021 was first. British Columbia had 777, Quebec 605, Selkirk 498, Dawson City 449.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

George James, aged 14, son of Richard James, of Victoria, was instantly killed Saturday by being impaled on a pitchfork.

Ernest Holmes and George Phillips, who recently escaped from the Industrial School at Mimico, were captured at Belleville after a stiff fight.

Trains are again running over the C.P.R. bridge at Roosport, Port Arthur, part of which collapsed and slid into the lake Friday afternoon.

Lord Strathcona is on his way by special train from Montreal for Halifax, to pay a visit of three hours and a half to Governor Fraser. He will be back in Montreal early Tuesday.

Four burglaries were committed on Saturday night at the Toronto Shoe Co., Marshalls' grocery store, Clark & Crawford's hardware store, and the Michigan Central Station, Niagara Falls, Ont.

The Canadian Northern has purchased Anacis Island at the mouth of the Fraser River, 20 miles from Vancouver. It contains 900 acres, and will be a site for shops, elevators, etc., for freight shipping.

Cecil P. Drake, John D. Strong and Harold M. Lewis, three young bank clerks of Victoria, B.C., were arrested Saturday at the request of the chief of police of Victoria.

Frightened by the explosion of a gas stove, Theodore Variate and his wife jumped from a third story window yesterday morning in Montreal. The man was instantly killed and the woman was injured.

The body of a man aged about 35 years was found floating in Little Sturgeon River, near North Bay, and on being taken from the water evidence of murder were seen in a vicious gash in the neck, evidently a stab wound.

The Will of Old Man Scott.

London, Ont., Sept. 20.—Considerable interest attaches to the will of the late Harvey Scott, who was shot by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Wesley Scott.

His wife, Mrs. Susan Scott, gets $1,000 and $50 per year. Wesley Scott gets $500. Alfred Scott, Harvey's oldest son, gets $25. Arthur Scott, eldest son of Alfred Scott, aged 18, was evidently the favorite, as he is left the entire farm of 300 acres of fine land, complete with large barns, full stock of implements, and a large number of thoroughbred horses and cattle. All told, this must be over $25,000. Arthur's youngest brother gets $600.

By the terms of the will Wesley Scott will either have to come to some arrangement for renting or buying the little house and small plot of land he has had since his marriage or else move away.

Wesley's daughter, Clara, aged 15, has been working out, and stated that her grandfather had always treated her most unkindly. Once when she was a little girl he set a big dog on her when she was passing on the road in front of his place.

Apparently most of the family put up with the old man's abuse for fear he would cut them off when dividing up his property.

Want to Carry Chinese.

Washington, Sept. 20.—Acting Secretary McHarg of the Department of Commerce and Labor, has directed that hereafter the inspection of Chinese coming from the Orient and seeking admission through Canada, will be made at Vancouver, B.C. The present "land border ports" of entry for Chinese are to remain open for the entry of Chinese coming from the Orient, furnished at Vancouver with certificates of identity, and for the examination and admission of a small number of Chinese not from the Orient, desiring to enter from Canada.

Mr. McHarg has ordered that notice be served on the Canadian Pacific Railway of the Department's intention to modify the agreement of Feb. 23, 1908, to this extent. This agreement was entered into with a view to efficient control of the immigration of Chinese through Canada, and American transportation lines complained that under the agreement the business of carrying Chinese destined to eastern ports was steadily falling into the hands of the Canadian Pacific, to the serious injury of the American lines.

Suffragettes In Prison.

Birmingham, Sept. 20.—Ten suffragettes were brought up in the Police Court Saturday, in connection with the disturbances on the occasion of Prime Minister Asquith's visit and speech Friday night. They were charged with disorderly conduct, assaulting the police, and throwing stones. Eight were remanded and two were sent to prison for a month because they threw missiles at the train in which Asquith was traveling.

Policemen gave evidence to the effect that the suffragette roof-climbers were without their shoes and hence as nimble as cats. One policeman was knocked off the roof to the roof of a lower adjoining building. Another policeman got a black eye.

When the women had been arrested and taken to the detention prison they smashed the windows of their cells.

Son of a Lord In Jail.

Winnipeg, Man., Sept. 20.—Norman Scott, aged about 35, son of Sir John Scott of Cardiff, Wales, was Saturday sentenced to three months' imprisonment as a common vagrant by Magistrate Daly. Scott had already served a six months' term at Regina. He positively refuses to work. He has held several good positions, which he secured through the influence of his father, but has lost them all.

Great Finds at Thibet.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 20.—Col. Kozloff's Mongolian expedition, equipped by the Russian Geological Society, has returned after 20 months of exploration in the region of the Andos Mountain range in Thibet.

The chief discovery made was of the ancient city of Kharakhoto, called by the Chinese Siancin, which the Manchurians destroyed more than 500 years ago.

Not Using the Same Glasses.

New York, Sept. 20.—Lord Balfour of Burleigh, interviewed at New York, en route to Canada, did not see the "redness in the sky" that Lord Chas. Beresford spoke of in his address on Friday.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION OF 1909 THE MOST SUCCESSFUL THAT HAS BEEN HELD IN YEARS

Concluding Day of the Peterborough Fair Saw Another Big Crowd in Attendance---Agricultural Society Will Have Substantial Surplus---Good Horse Races on Saturday.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is over for 1909 and it can well be termed the biggest success in years. After many weeks of hard work by the energetic President, Mr. R. H. Leary, and the directors it must have been a source of the greatest satisfaction to feel that their labours had not been in vain and to know that immense throngs of people that attended were well pleased with the show presented. The weather, the chief essential necessary to insure the success of the Fair, was all that could be desired, the two main days being bright and balmy.

Saturday, the last day of the exhibition saw another tremendous crowd in attendance. The number present is estimated at 2,500 and the receipts approximately were about $500. The crowd was made of many who were there the first day and a large number of farmers from the immediate vicinity of Peterborough, who combined a visit to the Fair with their weekly trip to market. Local citizens also turned out in goodly numbers and several were not at all reluctant in proclaiming this year's exhibition, th est one that Peterborough has ever held. The splendid success of the event should leave the Agricultural Society with a substantial surplus, with which to begin the year.

The judging had practically been completed early and about the middle of the afternoon on Saturday saw the exhibitors preparing to remove their exhibits to their homes. On Saturday evening, the exhibition Park was a busy spot, with the people taking the things away and to-day little is left of the Fair but the memory of a most enjoyable and successful event.

The Horse Racing

The horse races on Saturday formed the main attraction, the large concourse viewing them from the Grand Stand and other vantage points with a great deal of interest. The events Saturday were particularly good and furnished some exciting sport. As on Friday afternoon everything was carried out in a highly satisfactory manner, the different heats being run off in a way that was pleasing to the spectators.

The two classes, the 2.30 and the Free-for-all brought out big fields. There were six starters in the first race and five in the second one. In the 2.30 Lou Keswick, owned by Mr. A. J. Ashmore of Lindsay, that won the 2.22 class on the previous day, took first money in straight heats. Jennie Hal, owned by Mr. S. Hallett of Sunderland was second, also winning in successful heats. In the Free-for-all, Wallace W., owned by Mr. P. McCarthy of Toronto carried off the first money in straight heats, while Planet, also a Toronto horse was second.

2.30 Class

Lou Keswick, A. J. Ashmore, Lindsay	1 1 1
Jennie Hal, S. Hallett, Sunderland	2 2 2
Tom Tariff, C. Fife, Keene	3 3 6
Dr. Mack, Dr. Broad, Lindsay	5 4 3
Sparkle, Dr. J. N. Johnston, Port Hope	6 5 5
Lulu, Chimes, Thos. McIver, Peterborough	6 5 5

Time, 2.25; 2.24 1-4; 2.24 1-2.

Free-for-all Class

Wallace W., P. McCarthy, Toronto	1 1 1
Planet, Jas. McDowell, Toronto	2 2 3
Silver Tail, A. W. Collins, Sunderland	4 3 4
Harry Direct, Dr. Johnston, Peterborough	3 4 5
Patterson, E. Jones, Peterborough	5 5 2

Other Attractions

The performance in front of the Grand Stand on Saturday was much the same as on Friday, splendid entertainment being provided by seven Arab acrobats in their tumbling and gymnastic acts. This is an exceedingly clever troupe, their difficult feats were well done. They were greeted ith great applause.

Mlle. Celina de Leo's trained animals were again well received. Their clever and skilful performances were much enjoyed.

During the afternoon the 57th band rendered an excellent programme and Mr. Jos. Halpany delighted the audience with a comic song.

Dog Race.

The second and deciding heat of Mr. Yelland's dog race was run off and caused considerable excitement and fun. The start on Saturday was much better than the one on Friday and there was an exciting finish. Stevenson and Mongraw fought it out for first place, and after awhile Clare Stewart and another boy came up the track for third, and Stewart was in a fair way to lose had not his dog fought the other and thus gained an advantage.

Stevenson won both races and first money. George Mongraw and Clare Stewart will divide second and third money.

SPECIAL EXHIBIT

City Music Company Are It.

Music at the Fair is one of the pleasant features which everyone, of whatever temperament, can take an interest in. Of course, we mean pianos—and a "Newcombe" at their with an "Evans Bros." in the chorus. The thousands who heard these magnificently toned instruments were well repaid, and Mr. Russ and other members of the City Music Company deserve the hearty thanks of the directors as well as of the visitors, for the fine musical concerts which they gave during the days of the Fair. The representatives of the firm did themselves credit, not only by their courteous information, but by the skilful playing as well.

The Sherlock Manning piano is a new one in this district, and was shown for the first time. Mr. Russ stated that the piano was fully up to his expectations, and he looked for it to be a popular instrument when better known. The organs made by the Sherlock Manning people however, he considered the best made in Canada, as their exclusive features put them considerably in advance of all others. They will sustain the tone longer than any other organ made.

The instruments shown were beautiful types of their class. They were taken from the regular stock in the warerooms, 326 George street, and anyone can go and get the same styles of instruments any day.

A SURPLUS OF $1000 FROM THE EXHIBITION THIS YEAR

Gate Receipts and Grandstand Admissions During the Two Days Totalled $2,546.85----Best Showing in the History of the Association---Directors are Naturally Elated Over the Results.

There will be a surplus of at least $1,000 from the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

Several of the directors stated to the Examiner to-day that the balance on the right side of the ledger would be that much, but of course until all the bills are in it will be impossible to get at the actual surplus. However, it is safe to say that the fair has been the most successful in the history of the Association.

The merchants, the manufacturers, the farmers and the pjublic generally co-operated in bringing about that result, while the business-like way in which the directors have operated, has been a large factor in the splendid showing. Everybody appears to have been satisfied with the Exhibition, and a feeling of confidence in the directors by the public and the exhibitors has been set up that will make the work of the management in the coming years much more pleasant and easy.

The gate receipts for the two days, including the grand stand admission, totalled $2,546.85, Saturday's receipts being $750.85. For once the fair was greeted with good weather all the way through.

Directors Appreciate The Patronage Of The Citizens

The success of the Fair has been very gratifying to the directors who particularly appreciate patronage of the citizens. The outcome has emphasized the desirability or necessity of owning the grounds or of the city's purchasing them. The directors have spent between four and five thousand dollars on buildings, etc., but they do not deem it wise to continue this while the grounds are not permanently theirs. A director stated to the Examiner this morning that a meeting would be held in a few days, when he intended to bring up the question with a view to trying to purchase the grounds. He would not outline his ideas, but stated that the directors as a body recognized the necessity of getting the grounds before they could adequately equip them in a manner befitting the city and the importance of the fair. It is felt that under better conditions Peterborough could have a fair second to none between Toronto and Ottawa.

DR. COOK, AS HE APPEARED ON RETURN TO WORLD--- THE FIRST INTIMATE STORY FROM DENMARK

He's Homely and Awkward, and He's Got a Tooth Out in Front, But His Words Carry Conviction to All Who Hear, Writes Stewart, This Paper's London Correspondent, Who Met Explorer at Copenhagen Docks.

BY CHARLES P. STEWART.

Copenhagen, Denmark, Sept. 4.—Dr. Frederick Cook, who says he reached, and who probably did reach, the North Pole, is as homely a man as anyone would be likely to meet on a month travel.

Take the pictures that were published of him the day following the famous dispatch sent by Capt. Thorsen of the Hans Egede from the Shetland Islands, announcing Dr. Cook's discovery.

These pictures show him a tall, scholarly-appearing man, whose neat Van Dyke adds to his elegance and quiet dignity.

But the real Dr. Cook is much different. Of less than ordinary height, by beard, missing tooth and mechanical smile, Dr. Cook is a resolute, picturesque, heroic figure. But in United States Minister Egan's drawing-room in Copenhagen, in Prince Albert coat, patent leather shoes, the conventional clothes of court society, he looked out of place and awkward.

He is an out-door man. The Van Dyke, scholarly pictures did him an injustice.

The Doctor has an agreeable, unpretentious manner. He shows, too, the effects of his long stay in the far north. His air is abstracted; he gives you the impression of a man who has forgotten and is half afraid of his own voice. When asked a question he answers politely, but somewhat wearily. And always as briefly as possible. He very seldom volunteers a remark of his own.

Capt Thorsen of the Hans Egede knows less than Rasmussen of the polar regions, but he knows much, and he holds there is no doubt of the truth of what the doctor says. Commander Hovgaard of the Danish navy, president of the Danish Royal Geographical Society, and a Greenland explorer of years' experience, says 't'he weight of evidence is in Dr. Cook's favour."

he is not exactly fat, but very broad and deep-chested. He wore his hair long and stubby, inch-long beard when he landed in Copenhagen. Three hours later, with his hair cut, the beard shorn and his whiskbroom-like yellow moustache trimmed, the doctor's face appeared broad and flat, with a projecting under lip.

In fact, he wouldn't make a bad-looking Eskimo, except that he is rather too big and considerably cleaner than most natives of the arctic zone.

One of his teeth, pretty well toward the front, is missing and the slight droop of the lower lip, and the stubbiness of the moustache behind, which the lost incisor ought to be, makes the hole show up like a light house in a fog.

Dr. Cook wears a kind of a set smile most of the time, but it is not a happy smile. Rather the smile of a man who smiles in defiance of gloomy thoughts.

Probably that is what his smile is. On his lonely desperate hunt for the pole and on his return, when he was not certain whether he would ever get back, Dr. Cook must have had hours and days of thought that leave scars on a man's spirit. He did not give way to them, of course, or he would not have been the stuff that successful explorers are made of. But imagine the kind of set smile a man who has been through this world wears when he tries to look cheerful and happy—and you have the Cook smile.

On the bridge of the Hans Egede, pacing slowly up and down in a rough pea-jacket and cloth cap, stubNevertheless, everyone who met Dr. Cook in Copenhagen liked him. The newspaper men were decidedly and outspokenly skeptical of his story before they talked with him. Afterward, with hardly an exception, they declared themselves convinced. The doctor's tone and manner and words carried conviction.

That he actually reached the Pole, it is agreed, can never be proved beyond some shadow of doubt. But all the men best qualified to speak, who have talked with him thus far, say they believe him—that the weight of evidence is in his favour.

Knud Rasmussen, the Greenland writer—half-Dane, half Eskimo—who talked with him immediately after his return to comparative civilization from the solitudes of the "farthest north," was absolutely convinced. Rasmussen has been with many Arctic expeditions, knows Greenland as a man knows his own backyard, speaks Eskimo as his native tongue, and is in every way a competent judge.

Copenhagen is full of men well acquainted with the region north of the Arctic circle—it's the home of hardy explorers—and all accept the American's story at par.

The Doctor shows no resentment when asked to prove his claims. He simply continues to smile that fixed smile, and answers in a tired voice:

"I was there and I stand on my records and the verdict of any scientists who care to examine them. They are open to any geographical society in the world. I was there—if anyone doubts it, all right, let him doubt, I don't care. I was there all the same."

BRITISH STEAMER WARATAH GOES DOWN WITH OVER 300 PASSENGERS ON BOARD

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

London, Sept. 20.—The British Steamer Waratah which sailed from Durban for Capetown early in July carrying 300 passengers and crew was in all probability destroyed by fire according to a cable Lloyds received to-day from their agent in Manila. The message says, "the British steamer Harlow, which sailed from Newport News reports passing a blazing ship July 27th, 180 miles from Natal. While the Harlow's crew was watching the spectacle a violent explosion occurred on the burning vessel and she quickly sank. The Captain of the Harlow believed that the destroyed vessel was the Waratah.

THE WEATHER.

Yesterday morning, for the first time this season, the thermometer went down to the freezing point (32 deg.) and many tender plants received their first nipping. This event is usually to be looked for about this date.

REPORT OF DR. BRUCE SMITH ON RECENT VISIT OF INSPECTION TO THE PETERBOROUGH JAIL

Eleven Male Prisoners in Custody---Suggests Change in Heating System---Favourably Impressed With Discipline and Care of the Institution.

The following is the report of the official visit of R. W. Bruce Smith to the Peterborough County gaol:

An official visit of inspection was made to Peterborough gaol on Sept. 10th, 1909, when there were 11 male prisoners in custody.

On inspection the general condition of the building, beds and bedding, corridors and cells, yards, closets, drainage, ventilation and water supply were all found satisfactory.

Among the prisoners were some old men who should be provided for in a House of Refuge. It is most unfortunate that this condition has to be again complained of in connection with Peterborough gaol. The County has made provision for its indigents, but the City of Peterborough, instead of providing a House of Refuge or arranging with the County for the care of its poor, permits these old men to be sent to gaol from time to time, although they have been guilty of no crime.

The food supplied the prisoners is in accordance with the regulations, and the quality is good. There were no complaints in regard to the dietary. The cost of rations for the past quarter was .09 per day. The supplies are obtained by contract.

The prisoners are comfortably clothed. There were 20 suits of prison clothing on hand.

On examining the books I found the entries correctly made and up to date.

Attention must again be called to the necessity of providing a more economical heating system for the Gaol and Court House. The old stoves should be done away with and a central heating plant installed. The attention of the County Council should be specially directed to this at once. The heating of Peterborough Gaol is most defective.

In several places the walls require painting. It is mistaken economy on the part of the County Council to allow these repairs to be neglected.

My visit of inspection impressed me favourably in regard to the discipline and management of the Gaol, which in every part was found clean and in good order.

R. W. BRUCE SMITH
Inspector.

PETERBOROUGH SHOULD OWN HER EXHIBITION GROUNDS

So Thinks Western Visitor Who Does Not Think Much of the Accommodation Provided Here---Might Have a Week's Fair if Suitable Buildings Were Provided---Views of a Petrolea Man.

"Peterborough should own her own fair grounds," was the remark made to a reporter of the Examiner this mrning by r. James Peat of the firm of Peat & Sons, the well known well-drilling contractors of Petrolea, Ont. Mr. Peat is in the city on business in connection with the boring for gas and oil in this district. "Why up in Petrolae," he went, " a place not a third the size of this we own our own grounds, have suitable buildings and grand stand accommodation and the resul tis we have a great fair. We have taken in $4000 there in one day. Every merchant in the place makes an exhibit and there is not a manufacturer for twenty miles around who does not make a display. They know ti means business for them and hence they come."

There is ni reason why you people here should not be able to do the same thing. Yu have the country around to draw from and if you had the accommodation you culd run a week's fair and brnig them here from all the district between Toronto and Ottawa."

Mr. Peat's advice is timely and profitable. The directors of the Peterborough Industrial realize that they cannot accamplish very much until they owu their own grounds and steps towards this end may be expected before long.

Theory Held By Springville Residents Of Local Mystery

Examiner Special.

Springville, Sept 20.—No further discoveries have been made in regard to the skeleton found near Springville.

The opinion of a number of people is, that the skeleton is that of a woman, who was lured there and murdered, and that the murdered afterwards placed the male clothing and the other articles there as a disguise.

That it was a murder, is likely, and it is hardly probable that any person would commit suicide and die in the position that the skeleton was found in. Nor is it likely, that the person would still hold the razor after doing the act.

The farmers have been too busy to draw sand for the cement work, so the building of the new sheds will be delayed for a while.

About a month or so ago, Mr. Benj. Johnston set fire to a few brush piles near his woods and after these were burned Mr. Johnston thought the fire was extinguished, contrary to this, however, it had lodged in an old log near the boundary fence, and a few days ago broke out afresh, getting into the black muck.

It gradually made its way towards the fence and on Saturday the fence caught fire and not until fifty yards of new fence were, burned was the fire put out. It was only temporarily extinguished, however, as it is still burning deep in the earth.

The fire is less than two hundred yards from the woods and some anxiety is felt lest it get into the woods. Some four or five men worked all day Sunday at it with but little success.

Woman's Dress Caught Fire From A Match At The Fair

Mrs. Wm. McMullen, 251 George stret had a narrow escape from being seriously burned at the Exhibition grounds on Saturday afternoon. It is believed that a lighted match thrown carelessly to one side by a smoked ignited her silk dress which flared up. Friends went to her assistance and extinguished the flames but not before she had been burned to some extent. It has been stated by those who witnessed the affair that her escape was a very fortunate one.

Ald. Turner To Attend For Examination Before Judge Huycke

Alderman J. J. Turner, Jr., was served with papers this morning, asking his attendance for examination for discovery before His Honour Judge Huycke on Wednesday morning, September 22nd, in the case of Alfred Kingscote vs. J. J. Turner, Jr. The suit arises out of the allegation that Ald. Turner being a member of the firm of J. J. Turner & Sons, received a contract from the city in contravention of the statute in that behalf.

THE BRITISH SUFFRAGETTES

We shall have to revise our nomenclature. With the strenuous character of the British suffragettes in our minds, we feel how great a misfit is the tender title "the gentler sex." Carrie Nation, in her most rampant days and most vicious moods was a suckling dove compared with the bristling British Boadicean bulldozerines yclept the suffragettes. They camp on the trail of the unfortunate Premier Asquith. For weeks they have beset the doors of his private residence and made his goings-out and his comings-in, as the diabolic prancings of a nightmare. The suffragettes have mounted guard at every door of the House of Commons as ready to stone the stone St. Stephen as were his enemies to stone the protomartyr. Premier Asquith recently went with his family to Lympne Castle, near Falkestone for a holiday. He had with him his colleague Herbert Gladstone and the two promised themselves a few blessed weeks of golf and rustic and syvan sport. But the weird sisters found him out. On returning from church on a Sunday morning the hunted premier found his way barred by three females attired as nurses and accampanied by a big basket. As he was escaping from their hands they smote him in the face and his hat falling in the hustle, the suffragettes danced with fiendish glee upon his Sunday tile. In the afternoon the Premier being on a walk, the Suffragettes again barred his way, saying, "Ah! Mr. Asquith we shall continue to haunt you till you do justice to the women of England." The basket was again in evidence and its contents were found to be ropes furnished with hangman's knots at the end. A second escape did not end the day. In the evening when the family was at dinner, the suffragettes as told by their own journal, hurled stones through the window, with the exclamation, "That's what the women of England think of you." With the suffragettes so hot of his scent, the lot of a premier is not a happy one. If they abuse their votes in case they are accorded them, as they abuse their sex and their right of action in securing them, Premier Asquith is justified in evading them and their request and is to be excused if he is in doubt as to whether the Old Bailey or Bedlam will better met their cause.

NEVER HAD A CHANCE

In a news despatch is recorded the fact that a young Canadian brought before a Chicago Police Court on a charge of theft, made the plea that he went astray because "he never had a chance.' 'He had been given no trade, found employment, therefore, hard to get, and thus went wrong. He pleaded to be given a chance, to be placed where he would be able to learn a trade and so have an even chance in the world's fight. There is food for reflection in this pathetic incident. In the first place does not our every-day justice conform too much to the character, poetically given to personified justice—the blind goddess. Are not the judgments delivered from the bench upon erring human beings too often and too much blind? Only the law of punishment is considered, the lex talionis. Punishment is not the highest office of justice; prevention and reform in the interests of the culprit, of society and of the state should be the primary consideration. Yet it is too unfortunately true that the greater part of the judicial punishment inflicted is something very like vengeance, and tends to confirm the object in his evil courses. The Chicago judge in the case cited was more merciful to the prisoner than if he had set him free, in sentencing him to an indefinite term in an industrial institution where he will learn a trade, escape the contamination of hardened criminals and at the end come out equipped for fighting the battle of life on even terms with his competitors. We often boast of the superior character of the administration of justice in Canada as compared with that in the United States, yet we have perhaps never produced a more level-headed judge than the Chicago Justice who "gave a chance," to the boy brought before him, pleading guilty of having broken the law. The incident also suggests the reconstruction of our standard of judging our fellows in private life. In our superior virtue we are inclined to condemn hastily, those of our fellows who go astray. We do not reflect that they "have never had a chance," that their early training has been defective or either wanting entirely or vicious in its tendencies.

Our way has been made smooth, every obstacle removed, every aid in the way of advice and example has been provided, while their path has been piled high with obstruction, trenched with pitfalls; and evil example, if not evil injunction, has been their lot. It is a small boast that we have not fallen if we have never been tempted; that we have never gone astray when the side paths have been closed by loving and provident hands. Many a woman in her lofty virtue condemns, without sparing, an unfortunately fallen sister. She has never been tempted and doesn't know. She has been wrapt all her life, in as it were, absorbent cotton, a buffer set against every shock of life. She has never felt want of means, want of dress, the supreme lust of womanhood, want of food, want of love, want of care, want of good guiding, want of loving words and want of everything that could be set as a guard against the evils and wickedness of evil men. The triumphantly virtuous woman may be plain of face, angular of figure, obtrusive of joints, and lacking in all the physical qualities of allurement that would make her sought. She is not tempted; she is protected by her environment from temptation and she remains good. But her unfortunate sister may have the fatal gift of beauty, which in her unprotected state, with her lack of training and pious example make her a prey to the accursed lure of man with the honeyed tongue and the well-lined purse. One stands intact because she has no temptation and has no tempter; the other lies broken and bruised because with the fatal handicap of beauty she faced the race course of life, burrowed with pitfalls, dug by want, coarse toil, rude living and starvation of soul and semi-starvation and nakedness of body, an easy prey to the tempter, with his lure of an easy life, fine raiment and days of pleasure. None of us who have not honestly tried, know how hard it is to live the higher life; none of us who have not been tempted know how hard it is to stand; how easy to fall. A little consideration will temper our judgment of the frailties of our fellows.

You Can Defy The SPRING FATIGUE

And nervous exhaustion, if you will make the blood rich and red by using DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Fatigue and weakness tell of weak, watery and impure blood.

Are you going to go through the usual suffering and discomfort of spring this year or take a hand in the matter of your health and build up the system?

It is for you to decide, for you know that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, by forming new, rich blod, overcomes the fatigue, the weakness, the feelings of depression, and discouragement which come with spring.

The nervous system is almost always exhausted in the spring. Your appetite fails because the nerves which control the appetite are exhausted, and so it is with digestion and the working of the other bodily organs.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the greatest spring medicine because it is the greatest of nerve restoratives. It forms the new, rich, red blood from which vigor, energy and nerve force are created.

If you would restore the healthful glow to the complexion, sharpen the appetite, improve digestion, strengthen the action of the heart, revitalize the wasted brain and nerve cells and round out the wasted form you must use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. No imitation is just as good. There is no substitute but will disappoint.

Mrs. John P. Shannon, Whiteside, N. S., writes: "I used four boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and found it an excellent medicine. It has proved to be a splendid treatment for headache and a run-down system."

MERGING OF BUSINESS SCHOOL INTERESTS

Messrs. Spotten & McKone Take Over the New Gibbon Business College.

It is announced today that Messrs. Spotton & McKone of the Peterborough Business College have made arrangements for taking over the new Business College recently opened out on Hunter street by Mr. Gibbon. The lease of the premises and the school equipment have all been assumed by the Peterborough Business College, and a portion of these premises will be taken in as an addition thereto, an enlargement having been contemplated for somt time past. It is expected that the pupils enrolled in the new business college will be transferred to the Peterborough Business College as Mr. Gibbon will use his influence in seeing that his pupils are enrolled therein.

ELECTRIC LAUNDRY WITH COMIC OPERA

Four Wardrobe Women Kept Busy Looking After the Gowns and Costumes of "The Gay Musician."

An electric laundry is one of the noved effects connected with Manager John P. Slocum's big comic opera company appearing in Julian Edwards' best composition, "The Gay Musician," which will appear here at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday evening, Sept. 22nd.

Four wardrobe women are kept busy every day in looking after the handsome gowns and costumes worn in "The Gay Musician." Every article, including dainty lingerie, is freshly ironed every day, to say nothing of the work of cleaning any gowns that might be soiled on the stage.

All the gowns are ironed by electric machines that were made for the company and which are part of its equipment. Men's evening clothes and the costumes worn are also freshly ironed each day, with the result that at each performance, the costumes present a fresh and striking appearance.

HARVEST FESTIVAL

Services at Park Street Church Were Interesting and Profitable.

The Harvest Home services at the Park Street Baptist Church yesterday were a grand success along all lines. The artistic decorations reflected great credit indeed upon the committee in charge. Especially the arch designed by Mr. Archie Jackson, which was very fine. Trimmed with evergreen and grape vines, with hanging grapes, surmounted by stately palms, it certainly was a thing of beauty, as also was the fruit display directly in front of the pulpit. The pastor preached two interesting sermons to large audiences and the splendid choir, under the able direction of Mr. J. C. Miller, rendered musical selections in fine form. Mr. S. Pratt contributed an excellent bass solo at the evening service. In the afternoon Mr. Hassard, Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., spoke in a very pleasing manner to the children. About $300 was realized in the offerings.

THE NOX TASTELESS LIQUOR, DRUG AND TOBACCO CURE.

We have yet to hear of one failure to cure where a fair trial has been given. Can be given without the person knowing it, is harmless and absolutely without taste. Mother, sister or wife, you would be doing a great work by giving this remedy to some members of your family. We will mail a full month's treatment for five dollars. WAS LATE IN ENTERING

Mr. Adam Hall Did Not Arrive Until After Judges Had Awarded Prizes.

On Saturday afternoon in the judging of the 15.3 and over class of horses with single carriage, Mr. Adam Hall was late in entering, the judging having been completed when he came along. The judges stated that had he been there before the decisions had been arrived at, Mr. Hall would have been given a premium.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION ELECTED OFFICERS TO-DAY

The members of the Ministerial Association met at 12 o'clock to-day, partly to welcome back Rev. E. A. Pearson from Europe and partly to meet together in friendly intercourse. Coleman Bros. had prepared an excellent luncheon, which was partaken of in the room upstairs.

After luncheon some unfinished business was transacted and the following officers elected:

President—Rev. E. A. Pearson.
Vice-President—Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, M.A., Ph.D.
Secretary—Rev. R. Pogue.

ST. PAUL'S SUNDAY SCHOOL GRAND RALLY YESTERDAY

Bright Prospects for an Inspiring Fall and Winter Term—Pastor and Superintendent Pleased.

Sunday School "Rally Day" yesterday in St. Paul's Sunday School, was a pronounced success, the attendance in the afternoon of scholars and teachersand of members of the Bible classes exceeding the expectations of pastor and Mr. W. Madill, the superintendent.

In the morning Rev. Mr. Pogue delevired a special address to St. Paul's congregation on "The True Function of the Sunday School." It is safe to say that the worshippers in St. Paul's never had the subject so forcibly pressed home to them, and the results were demonstrated by an increased attendance of adult members at the Sunday School rally in the afternoon.

Printed forms of service, provided by the General Assembly's Committee of the Presbyterian Church of Canada, were used for the Sunday School exercises, and were responded to in a nimpressive manner by all present.

At the roll call the various classes of the school were shown to be in excellent force, the attendance of scholars being in many cases up to the full number on the rolls. This was all the more gratifying, seeing that so short a period had elapsed since the holiday season, when the school had been depleted of many of its members.

Pastor and Superintendent were delighted and encouraged by the rally, and teachers and scholars appeared to have "trimmed their lanmps," and buckled on their armour with renewed earnestness.

The order of services were gone through in perfect harmony. Rev. Mr. Pogue addressed the school on "What Has The Bible Done For us?" and Mr. D. H. Moore spoke on the subject "What Use are We Making of the Bible." The collection was a very gratifying one.

T. A. S. ARE CITY CHAMPIONS BEAT WEST ENDS BY 19 TO 4

Final Game Was Tightly Contested for Seven Innings But the Last Two Stanzas Were a Massacre---Abstainers Were Without Quinlan and O'Brien---Attendance Small

Three things distinguished the final City League Game of the season at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, first the largeness of the score, second an aviation contest introduced by the West Ends in which all the records for speed and length of flight (hitherto held by the Strathconas) were smashed, and third the fact that "Laj" Derocher made his first, last, and only hit of the season, thus spoiling what promised to have been a perfect average. Incidentally the score was 19 to 4 in favour of the Abstainers, thus making them champions for 1909 and holders of the Spalding Trophy for the next twelve months.

Up to the moment the aeroplane stunt referred to above happened along, the game was making a noise like a real article of baseball. The Coldwater men bit off a lead of three in the first innings, but West Ends overhauled them in the fourth stanza. In the fifth the Abstainers went ahead again by one run but the Davidson-Oldhamites shot one over in their half of the seventh with a squeeze play. With the score 4 to 4 it grew a trifle interesting but just then some one cut the ropes and the monoplanes and bi-planes began to circle through the air. Every one of the West Ends seemed to have been fired with the ambition to become a Bleriot and before they got back to earth the Abstainers had scored five. "Fine work," said Captain Dobson as he and his men came back to terra firma, "but we can get higher still."

The gallant leader of the Westerners was a true prophet. They did go higher next innings, much higher, in fact twice as high as they went before and this time the Abstainers had a base running contest while Dobson and Company were trying to find the North Pole by the aerial route. The foot race conducted by the T.A.S. and the flying contest inaugurated by their opponents came to end simultaneously and after adding up the long column twice to make sure there were no mistakes, the official census taker announced the sum total of that innings as ten runs.

The result was that when the West Ends came to bat in the ninth sitting they needed fifteen runs to tie the Abstainers and their club swinging in the final did not pull anything off the lead. The first seven innings provided about as good baseball as has been seen in the League this season, but the last two spasms seemed part of a delirious dream. The Westerners could not stop, catch nor throw a ball and sandwiched in with their errors, the Abstainers were clouting the sphere to all corners of the lot. Rose was taken out in the middle of the eighth and his successor, Minorgan, who went in with none out was somewhat severely punished before he succeeded in returning the side. Everyone on the West Ends took a hand in throwing the game away, except Halpin who did not have a chance all day.

The Abstainers were without Quinlan and Mike O'Brien but Flaherty pitched fine ball holding the Westerners to five hits and "Bill" O'Brien subbing at first for his brother demonstrated that the clan of the O'Briens seem to specialize on first basing. Flaherty was mixing a high speedy one with a slow spitter and the two played havoc with the West Enders who could not get to him in bunches.

For the first six innings Rose had the Abstainers guessing. True they scored three in the first but errors paved the way and they were not touching up the lanky West Ender very much until the seventh when everybody broke loose with the big stick.

Mr. Derocher's marring of his splendid average occurred during the midst of the fusilade in the eighth. It looked like his last time at bat for the season and he strode out with the determined air of a man who has decided that the time has come for action. Picking out one of Rose's outdrops he lined one down inside third and when the ball was returned to the diamond that Peerless one was resting proudly on second. The audience rose as one man and cheered. By the way that was about the only way the audience could rise as there was hardly more than one man in the crowd. A study of the ticket statistics shows that the West Ends made more errors than there were spectators present.

In tabular form the story of the game reads something like this:

HAVELOCK TEAM WINS THE R. R. HALL TROPHY AT FAIR

Defeated the Brintons on Saturday Afternoon by 3 Goals to Nil After an Interesting Game Which Was Witnessed by Good Crowd of Exhibition Visitors.

The last and the least advertised feature of the Peterborough Exhibition was the association football match for the County Championship and the R. R. Hall trophy. The contestants were Havelock, the champions of the Midland League, and the Brintons, who also figured in this league during the past season.

The game was played on Saturday afternoon, commencing at 5.25, with Mr. Percy Fitzgerald acting as referee. His duties were rather light because neither side seemed inclined to "rough it," but played ball all the time. Considering the unfavourable condition of the field and also that both teams have had scarcely any practice for the past month, it was a good exhibition of the way soccer should be played. At times there were flashes of good combination and a few individual rushes were indulged in by McPherson and Monk, who did splendid work for their respective teams. Within five minutes of the start, Havelock made the first count, and in another five minutes they had another.

At this point the Brintons sprnced up and made the railroaders take notice, for they made two very close shots which were dangerous. For the rest of the first session there was nothing doing in the scoring business. When ends were changed Havelock soon notched another and did not really extend themselves, as they simply had to keep their opponents from scoring.

The visitors had much the advantage in weight, as well as having played together all summer, while the carpet makers have several changes on their line-up since the league games. Havelock is making a collection of football silverware and hrve this year annexed the Stratton and Hall trophies and are in the finals for the Intermediate championship of Ontario, which they stand a good chance of winning. The teams:—

Stealing Home Easy For Tiger Moriarty

GEORGE MORIARTY

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 20.—Isn't Geo. Moriarty the home stealing kid, though? Six times since he joined the Tigers, "Mory" has with malice aforethought, deliberately swiped the registration station from unsuspecting catchers and pitchers. It's like taking candy from the orphans.

Moriarty has revolutionary ideas on pilfering. He thinks it is easier to steal third than second, particularly with a left hander pitching. He has made his claim good since joining Detroit. He does not try to steal home regularly, but maintains that with the enemy off guard and a right hander at bat, the feat is not as difficult as it appears.

CAHILL OF THE T. A. S. WON THE BASE RUNNING CONTEST

Billie Cahill, shortstop of the T.A.S. team won the prize donated by Mr. Harry Neil in the base running contest for City League players held at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, circling the bases in the splendid time of 14 4-5 seconds and may thus be styled the League's champion base runner for 1909. Craig of the Strathconas and Dobson of the West Ends were tied for second place, making the circle in 15 seconds, a fifth of a second behind the winner. Six players, two each from the West Ends, Strathconas and T.A.S. participated. The conditions were that the competitors had to bunt a ball thrown over the plate fairly and run the bases.

Following was the time of the different contestants.

Cahill, T.A.S., 14 4-5 seconds.
Craig, Strathconas, 15 seconds.
Dobson, West Ends, 15 seconds.
Shaw, Strathconas, 15 1-10 seconds.
Callaghan, T.A.S., 15 2-5 seconds.
Gibson, West Ends, 15 3-5 seconds.

PETERBOROUGH WILL HAVE JUNIOR AND SENIOR RUGBY TEAMS

At a meeting of the Peterborough Rugby Club on Saturday night further plans for the season were made. The players are decidedly enthusiastic over the prospects and the outlook for plenty of Rugby this fall is very bright.

It is the intention to have teams in both the senior and junior series of the O. R. F. U. The junior team will be picked from the ranks of the junior City League and the plan of the management is to pick a young, fast, team who can be carefully drilled in the fine points of the game and who, with the proper coaching, should develop into a formidable machine. There is no age limit on the junior O. R. F. U. series, but still the locals will endeavour to develop a young team, leaving the older players for the senior team. The juniors will likely be grouped with Lindsay in this district.

The seniors will probably get a bye in the senior series, as the present plans of the O. R. F. U. are to group Dundas and the two Toronto teams, leaving Peterborough to meet the winners in the finals. This will give the local management a chance to get the Senior League out of the way before the O. R. F. U. season opens.

There is a possibility that the 57th Regiment may place a team in the senior series of the City League. The matter is being discussed and the officers are expected to take action at once.

The seniors had a light practice at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon. It was too warm for Rugby, but the boys stuck at it for half an hour in the bright sun.

We have a little book bout Ammunition that will interest any Sportsman using gun or rifle. We will send it together with a yarn by Edward Cave on "Bear Hunting" to anyone who will write for it.

GOLF

On Saturday afternoon mixed fousomes were played at the Golf Links and a very large attendance of ladies and gentlemen marked the affair. The prizes presented by Mr. Wainwright and Mr. Blanchette were won respectively by Miss Aylmer and Mr. W. H. Denham, they having made the lowest scores. Tea was served and a thoroughly enjoyable afternoon was spent.

The Lindsay ladies are expected to visit the city on Friday, Sept. 24th, to play the Peterborough ladies.

OUR EXHIBIT of Pianos and Organs at the Fair and at our Show Rooms attracted great attention and admiration for their beauty of design, perfect action and purity of tone.

ONE MUSICIAN a graduate of one of the best colleges of music in Canada remarked that "The Newcombe Piano is one finest tone Pianos I ever heard.

OTHERS admired the tone of the Evans Bros.' Piano.

AND SOME others prefered the Sherlock-Manning—each and every one produce perfect tones but of different qualities.

WE WOULD be pleased to discuss tone quality and Piano construction with you. There are reasons for different qualities and there are good, bad and horrible Pianos. Let us tell you about them before you buy.

A GUARANTEED CURE
For Indigestion and Dyspepsia

There is no hesitation or quibbling about the claims which the Coleman Medicine Company make for their wonderful "Little Digesters". They come out straight with the statement that "Little Digesters" will positively cure even chronic Indigestion or Dyspepsia, as well as Heartburn and Sour Stomach.

They GUARANTEE "Little Digesters" to cure. If they fail, you get your money back, promptly and without question.

Of course they would not make such positive statements, or give such a guarantee, if they had not proved, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that "Little Digesters" WILL CURE.

"Little Digesters" do it simply and naturally, too, by helping out the weakened stomach—supplying just what it needs in the process of digestion, and enabling it to assimilate the food. Soon the whole system regains its vigor, and the stomach needs no further help.

"Little Digesters" are put up in little red boxes, sold for 25c by your druggist, or mailed by the Coleman Medicine Co., of Toronto. 29

NEW ORCHESTRA

Mr. F. W. Miller Leader of Musical Body at Murray Street Baptist Church.

A new feature was introduced at the Murray street Baptist Sunday school yesterday afternoon, when the seven-piece orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. F. W. Miller, appeared for the first time. The orchestra is a big improvement and was thoroughly appreciated. The singing of the school was much better and good results are looked for. The attendance of scholars and teachers was very large and the prospect for the school this winter is very bright.

HARRY REID KNOWS

Wm. Madill the druggist, does not guarantee Parisian Sage to grow hair on every bald head, but if there is any life left in the roots of your hair, Parisian Sage will stimulate the hair bulbs and cause your hair to grow again. Here is one case: "I am now using the second bottle of your Parisian Sage, and can notice a new crop of hair appearing. I am glad to say it is a darker colour than my hair was before I became bald." Harry Reid, 10 Manhattan street, Rochester, N.Y.

Don't wait till you're bald before using Parisian Sage, use it now. Kill the dandruff germ and prevent baldness. Wm. Madill, the druggist, sells Parisian Sage at 50 cents a large bottle, and he guarantees it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair, and cure all diseases of the scalp, or money back. Parisian Sage is a delightful, invigorating hair dressing; it makes the hair soft and smooth.

Interesting History Of A Local Genius Who Has Helped Others By His Work

P. G. Walker of Indian River Has Shown His Natural Skill by a Number of Inventions That Have Been Useful to Farmers and Others—Story of Early Days of Peterborough County.

INVENTS RAILWAY SWITCH

"A strange man, Mister; you may say a strange man." The above words were used by Mr. P. G. Walker, at his home at Indian River, in a recent conversation with a representative of the Examiner. The old man, he is now passing his sixtieth year, has truly had a rather remarkable career and under more favourable conditions he might have been of even greater use to his fellow men, and would have undoubtedly brought more fame and possibly wealth to himself. Born in Asphodel at a time when the country was unsettled, when farms could be purchased for a mere trifle, and when the pioneer tillers of the soil had to depend mostly on the meagre returns of their small clearings for a living, Mr. Walker obtained but a slight education and when about fourteen or fifteen years of age he had to start out to help his parents practically at any work he could perform. But he soon showed signs of possessing a general knowledge which has served him in good stead up to the present, and has not only lessened his own toil, but has been a benefit to hundreds of farmers in this and the adjoining counties.

In other words Mr. Walker, "Pete," as he is known to his friends and acquaintances, is a sort of a genius. As a young man he often increased the efficiency of tools with which he was working from ideas that came of themselves. He also made a stump pulling machine and a stone lifter, both of which were in demand on every farm. He invented a sleigh brake and a rack lifter, which was used in barns, both of which he had patented. He likewise registered two patents on a cattle guard for railways, and his most recent efforts have resulted in a new invention in railway switches. Earlier in his life he used to make waggons, sleighs, gates, sleigh brakes, rack lifters, and other articles and there are few, if any, farmers between Peterborough and Norwood for whom he has not worked in some manner or other.

Early Days.

Speaking of his boyhood days Mr. Walker recollects the time when farm houses were far apart, the nearest neighbour being probably a mile or more distant. Although the land could be bought for a small sum, it was, nevertheless, dear to the people of that period. Wild fowl and game was extremely plentiful, but as the townships gradually became settled they disappeared before the advance of civilization. If so desired his father could easily get meat for dinner or supper, by going into the woods around the house and bringing a couple of partridges or rabbits. Deer, fox, and other animals were plentiful and it was a common sight to see a deer crossig the clearing of the homestead. Bears, likewise, roamed the woods, and at one time were numerous. Mr. Walker states that the wild pigeons flew in flocks of countless numbers and as for wild ducks he has seen them feeding on Rice Lake literally covering acres." The country was one great natural game reserve, but it was better stocked than a reserve could possibly be.

Became Deaf.

When about fifteen years old Mr. Walker began working in a sawmill at a place known as Welbeck, in Asphodel, on the Breckenridge farm.

It no longer goes by that name. Lumbering was one of the great industries in those days, and saw mills were plentiful. Mr. Walker caught a cold in the draught through the building in which he was employed, and as a result lost his hearing, and has never since had the use of that sense. Huge logs were hewn into square timber and floated down the Ouse and Indian rivers to Rice Lake, and thence by the Trent River to the Lake, Quebec being their final destination. They were used in the building of ships.

Early Work.

As Mr. Walker grew older he went into different work. He helped farmers for a number of years, and then got a stump puller making four altogether. He afterwards made a stone lifter, both of which were extremely powerful machines. Doing work of this nature he had a varied experience around the country until he went into farming, in Asphodel, in 1876. He had 100 acres, which he attended to and also had a workshop, in which he spent his spare time trying to carry out ideas that came to his mind. He was married in 1878 and continued to live on the farm until about 15 years ago, when he disposed of it and moved to Indian River and has since resided on the property directly behind the station.

His Inventions.

Mr. Walker has made a number of inventions which have been of considerable value and which have paid him well. He had one patent on a sleigh brake that sold well, and two patents on a rack lifter, which was a much better paying proposition. The latter was a contrivance by which a rack full of hay, straw, etc., was lifted off a waggon on the floor of a barn to any height up to the too and the contents were thrown into the mow. Many of these were sold to the farmers of this and other districts for years. The contrivances for pulling up stumps and lifting stones were early ideas. Twenty-eight years ago he had a saw driven by horse power for cutting wood and claims to be the first to have used it in this section. In 1903 he took out two patents on a guard to prevent cattle from going from the railway. While this has not been purchased from him he is of the opinion that it is being used in a part of Ontario, and is taking steps to find out the particulars. Probably his best effort was to invent a railway switch which would close after a train had passed over it. He had two patents taken out and is not sure yet whether he will be able to dispose of the idea. With it in use a train approaching on the main line stops until the switch is opened. The train passes over it. It closes and the train proceeds onward through the siding over the other siding, leaving the main line clear. Prominent railway officials have visited Mr. Walker's home and have inspected the model that he has erected in his yard. This was the most pretentious invention that Mr. Walker ever attempted, and it is certainly a credit to his genius.

He has not given up the battle yet, and it is likely that the future years will likely see other ideas formed and worked out satisfactorily by Mr. Walker and his friends express the hope that his efforts will be crowned by continued success.

WRITER SUGGESTS THAT THE CITY OFFICIALS ACT IN THE C.N.R. MATTER

Editor, Examiner:—

I see by to-day's World that the Canadian Northern Railway have already surveyed for their short line of road between Toronto and Ottawa to a point about four miles north of Whitby, Oshawa and Bowmanville, starting at Toronto. If this line were extended through Millbrook, Peterborough and Perth, it would be almost a bee-line to Ottawa. Having got so far north of Lake Ontario it seems almost incredible that they should plan to swing down again to the shore of the Lake striking Port Hope and Cobourg and thereby making a long detour from a direct line between the terminals.

Delegations from Whitby, Oshawa and Bowmanville waited on the C.N.R. officials to induce them to alter the proposed route so as to run through these towns. The officials have promised to make another survey and if practicable to change the line accordingly. Even if the change is made as far as Oshawa, the route I have suggested will still be the most direct line to Ottawa. When the delegations from these heard towns are hustling, surely it it not too much to expect that our Electric City should get a move on. There is a chance of a life time. Can our City fathers and Board of Trade rise equal to the occasion?

Yours, etc.,
Sept. 18th, 1909. Peterborough.

Note.—The Board of Trade have written a letter to the officials in regard to the route.

West Peterborough Protested Election

Varied Versions Of Motion To Commit

Reports of the Result of Motion to Compel Mr. Burnham to Answer Questions as Given by Globe, Mail and Empire and Daily Evening Review.

On September 15th, at Osgoode Hall Toronto, Mr. Justice Magee heard argument upon a motion for an order to commit John Hampden Burnham, petitioner in West Peterborough Controverted Election case, for contempt of court in refusing to answer questions asked him at his examination for discovery and in the alternative for an order compelling him to appear for examination Sept. 30th, at his own expense and answer questions and produce documents.

The motion was argued on Sept 15, and on Thursday, Sept. 16th, the following report appeared in the legal columns of

THE GLOBE:

MR. BURHAM HAS TO STATE GROUND FOR OBJECTION

Otherwise He Need Not Answer Questions About Detectives He Employed in West Peterboro' Election Case.

"Mr. J. H. Burnham must state why he objected to answer certain questions on his examination in connection with his petition against Mr. J. R. Stratton's electon for West Peterborough. Mr. Justice Magee so directed yesterday afternoon, on a motion before him, but did not in other respects alter his previous order. Mr. Burnham therefore need not give the names or the amounts paid to the detectives employed by him or the conversations had with them, but simply has to state that the payments were for work done as detectives."

On Thursday, Sept. 16th, the subjoined report of the result of the motion mentioned appeared in

THE MAIL AND EMPIRE:

"MUST ANSWER QUESTIONS."

"An order was made in the West Peterborough election case that Mr. John Hampden Burnham must answer questions except two (Nos. 1 and 3) to which he refused to answer when examined.

This order was granted on motion by Hon. J. R. Stratton to commit Mr. Burnham for not answering various questions as to the detectives employed by him."

On Thursday, Sept. 16th, the report of the result of the motion above referred to appears as follows:

THE DAILY EVENING REVIEW:

The following appears in the legal columns of the Globe to-day:

"MR. BURNHAM HAS TO STATE GROUND OF OBJECTION.

Otherwise He Need Not Answer Questions About Detectives He Employed in West Peterborough's Election Case.

"Mr. J. H. Burnham must state why he objected to answer certain questions on his examination in connection with his petition against Mr. J. R. Stratton's election for West Peterborough. Mr. Justice Magee so directed yesterday afternoon, on a motion before him, but did not in other respects alter his previous order. Mr. Burnham therefore need not give the names of the amounts paid to the detectives employed by him or the conversations had with them, but simply has to state that the payments were for work done as detectives."

The above contingency arose through Mr. Burnham's not repeating the full formal answer to similar questions each time after the first, but contenting himself with repeating the words, "I object." He is now directed by the judge to give the full answer to all as to the first, not leaving the rest of the answers to be supplied as if clearly understood."

On Friday, Sept. 17th, the following reference to the result of the motion referred appeared in

THE DAILY EVENING REVIEW:

"The Globe's legal column is superior to any we know of. It not only gives all the important facts, but it, as a rule, gets it right, which is more important still."

THE ORDER ITSELF.

Below is the full text of the order made by Mr. Justice Magee on Sept. 15th:

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

Wednesday, the 15th day of September, 1909.

The Honourable Mr. Justice Magee.

THE DOMINION CONTROVERTED ELECTIONS ACT AND AMENDING ACTS.

Election for the Electoral District of the West Riding of Peterborough holden on the 19th and 26th days of October, A. D., 1908.

Between JOHN HAMPDEN BURNHAM, Complainant, and

JAMES ROBERT STRATTON, Respondent, and

IN THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

THE DOMINION CONTROVERTED ELECTIONS ACT AND AMENDING ACTS.

Election for the Electoral District of the West Riding of Peterborough holden on the 19th and 26th days of October, A.D., 1908,

Between JAMES ROBERT STRATTON, Petitioner, and JOHN HAMPDEN BURNHAM, Respondent.

UPON MOTION made this day by Counsel on behalf of the above named John Hampden Burnham, in presence of counsel for the above named John Hampden Burnham, for an order that the above-named John Hampden Burnham be committed to the County Jail of the County of Peterborough for contempt of Court in refusing to answer certain questions asked him on his examination for discovery on the above petition and cross petition and his refusal to produce certain documents upon the said examination, and, in the alternative, for an order that the said John Hampden Burnham do attend at his own expense on the adjournment of the said examination on the 20th day of September, 1909, before W. F. Johnston, Esq., the Examiner, and do answer the said questions and produce the said documents; upon hearing read the proceedings in the above petition and cross petition, including the particulars delivered by both parties, and the examination for discovery of the said John Hampden Burnham, and the affidavits of B. R. Hall, (2) Hugh Darke, W. S. Davidson and John Hampden Burnham filed, and the exhibits referred to in the said affidavits, including the certificate of the said Examiner; and upon hearing what was alleged by Counsel aforesaid.

1. THIS COURT DOTH ORDER that the said John Hampden Burnham do attend at his own expense before the said W. F. Johnston, Esq., on the 20th day of September, 1909, at the hour of two o'clock in the afternoon at the said City of Peterborough, being the time and place to which the said examination was adjourned, and do answer the following questions, arising therefrom.

Q.—Was he Sheppard to report to John G. M. Wilson?

Q.—On the 25th of October?

Q.—When did you learn of that first?

Q.—Did you have any conversation with John G. M. Wilson regarding Sheppard?

Q.—And as to the work that Sheppard was doing for you?

Q.—Did John G. M. Wilson ever report to you the good work that Sheppard was doing for you in the Liberal Committee rooms?

Q.—Did he tell you about having paid him this $20.00?

Q.—I have mentioned R. M. Waddell, Wilson and Kendry as having reported to you on the work that R. H. Sheppard was doing for you?

Q.—Did any person else report to you on the same subject?

Q.—Take charge No. 91—that the respondent, Mr. Burnham, in the cross petition, James Kendry, Herb Kendry, or Peter Gardiner or Roland M. Waddell paid John Farish, that he was paid money at various times between Sept. 10th and 26th of October, and subsequently thereto, what I ask Mr. Burnham is, during the process of your campaign did you pay any money to John Farish?

Q.—How much money did you pay John Farish?

Q.—Either before or during or after the election?

Q.—Did he report certain information to you during your election?

Q.—Was Mr. John Farish one of your detectives that you paid to whom you made payments yourself, personally?

Q.—Did you meet Mr. Farish during the campaign?

Q.—Did you talk to Mr. Farish during the time the campaign was on in reference to any work he was doing in the campaign for you?

Q.—Did you ever have any conversation with Mr. John Farish during the progress of your campaign?

Q.—But you do admit that he was paid a very large sum of money?

Q.—Have you any correspondence with Mr. John Farish between the 10th of September, 1908, and to date?

Q.—With regard to the election?

Q.—How much did you in fact pay to Mr. Farish?

Q.—And it is for this purpose I want to find out the amount of money that was paid to Farish during the campaign?

2.—AND THIS COURT DOTH FURTHER ORDER that upon the said examination of the said John Hampden Burnham do produce all correspondence (if any) between himself and the said John Farish not privileged from production.

3.—AND THIS COURT DOTH FURTHER ORDER that in the event of the said John Hampden Burnham making default in attending upon the said examination or in answering the said questions or any of them or procuring the said correspondence he be forthwith committed to the county gaol of the County of Peterborough.

4.—AND THIS COURT DOTH FURTHER ORDER that the costs of this motion be costs to the said James Robert Stratton in any event of the said petition and cross petition, unless the judges presiding at the trial of the said petition and cross petition do otherwise order.

WAS ALLOWED TO GO

Bobby Burns, who was remanded on Friday, on a charge of being drunk and disorderly until the Exhibition was over, came up before Magistrate Dumble at the police court this morning. He looked much better than when he entered the gaol. He promised His Worship that he would leave the city at once, if allowed to go. He had been working with the railway, he said, but would go right away to the woods with the Cavendish Lumber Company. He was discharged.

FEARED PARALYSIS

Mr. F. A. Kruis, Schwarts, Que., writes.

"For one year I was a complete nervous wreck, could not rest or sleep, had indigestion and terrible headaches and constantly feared paralysis. Six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food made me well and strong. There is no treatment in the world so good as this for building up the nervous system."

WRITES CONCERNING CHEMONG PARK

Sept. 20th, 1909

To the Editor, Examiner.

Sir,—I wish through your columns to correct an idea which seems to have gone abroad that the Jopling family of Bridgenorth was meant when I said that "the Cottagers at Chemong ought to form a protective society to defend themselves against hoodlums, etc." I did not think of them when I said that, as they are a family I have the greatest respect for. I have dealt with them for years and always found them gentlemanly and courteous and as far as I am concerned, I never saw any of them misbehave himself. In justice to them I write this.

Yours, etc.

They are expecting a splendid exhibition this year. Prize Lists, entry forms, &c may be obtained from the Secretary, W. Sherin, Lakefield, or any of the Officers or Directors. 4d-64-1w-37

WOMAN PLEADED NOT GUILTY TO CHARGE

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

Toronto, Sept. 20.—Mrs. Maud Turner appeared in Police Court this morning, charged with the murder of the infant, Authers, whose body was found at Niagara Falls a few days ago. Mrs. Turner, who was represented by T. C. Robinette, pleaded not guilty and was remanded for a week. She was terribly agitated and kept her face covered with her hands, trembling violently as she stood at the dock. Dr. Dunlop, a dentist, who, it is alleged lived with the Turner woman, has been arrested on a nominal charge of vagrancy, and is out under heavy bail. A man said to be Mrs. Turner's husband has also been arrested at Niagara Falls.

COST OF IDLE WORDS

PASTOR RUSSELL PREACHES ON CARELESS SPEAKING.

Text, "Every Idle Word That Men Shall Speak, They Shall Give an Account Thereof in the Day of Judgment; for by Thy Words Thou Shalt be Justified, and by Thy Words Thou Shalt Be Condemned" (Matthew xii, 36, 37).

Sunday, Sept. 19.—Some time soon we must consider for the benefit of fellow-Christians what the Bible has to say respecting the Day of Judgment. For the present we suffice ourselves with the general explanation that this term Day of Judgment has been seriously misconstrued by theologians and by the public. It has been used out of harmony with the Scriptural usage. It has been used out of harmony with reasonable, logical deductions. The term Day of Judgment is generally understood to mean Day of Sentence or Day of Doom. In fact, Doomsday is frequently used as a synonym without the slightest warrant. The term Day of Judgment signifies the Day of trial or testing; as in our text we read that men shall give an account in the Day of Judgment for every idle word. The proper thought on the subject of judgment from the Bible standpoint is this: God created our first parents innocent, perfect, and placed them on trial. Their Day of Judgment was in Eden. How long this world have lasted had they remained faithful to God we are not informed, but as soon as they had disobeyed the Divine command, their day of trial or judgment was ended, and the sentence, "Dying thou shalt die," began to be inflicted. The judgment or trial of Adam was over, and since all of his posterity share his imperfections and are equally unworthy of life on that account, therefore the sentence of sin, "Dying thou shalt die," rests upon every member of the race, just as though each individual had been on trial in Eden and had lost in the trial with father Adam. This matter St. Paul clearly enunciates, saying, "By one man's disobedience, sin entered into the world and death as the result of sin. Thus death passed upon all men, because all are sinners" (Romans v, 12).

This being true, how comes it that there is any mention made in the Scriptures of another judgment day. If all mankind already are judged unworthy of eternal life and worthy of death everlasting, why should there be any further judgment? The Bible answer to the question is that there would have been no reference to a future judgment day had it not been that God had provided a Redeemer, Christ Jesus, by whose merit the first penalty against our race through Adam will eventually be abrogated, set aside. In consequence of the setting aside of the first sentence of death a second trial or judgment will be opened to every member of the race. The first trial or judgment was of one man (Adam) for all of his race. A second trial or judgment, secured by the Redeemer, will treat Adam and all of his race individually; granting them each an individually or personal trial, hence unlike the first trial in Eden, which was of one man and for the race. This second trial has not yet been provided for our race, except in the sense that it has been prepared for and promised—"God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness. That day will be the Millennial day—a thousand years in length. It will be the world's trial day or time of individual testing.

Whoever of the world comes to a knowledge of the fact that God has provided such a future trial, such a future opportunity of obtaining eternal life, is on notice at once that every intelligent act of his in the present life will have a bearing upon his prospect for eternal life in the future. If now he uses wisely the opportunities of the present life he may upbuild for himself a measure of character, self-control, etc., which will prepare him for a more honorable place during the Millennial Kingdom and make his progress there the more rapid and the more easy. Or, on the contrary, by degrading himself in the present life he may undermine his character and, during the Millennial Day of judgment (trial) find himself so much lower in the human scale and have so much further to advance out of sin and death conditions into the condition of perfection and everlasting life.

The Church has her judgment day in the present life—during this Gospel Age. All consecrated believers, begotten of the holy Spirit, are now on trial for everlasting life or for everlasting death as "new creatures in Christ Jesus." If such do not comply with the conditions of their consecration, but draw back to sin, their trial will be in one sense useless and the sentence of utter destruction will rest upon them—"the Second Death."

The context shows that our Lord in our text addressed, not his disciples, but the worldly, the Pharisees. Doubtless the same principle applies to the Church. Every idle or pernicious word of ours has its weight, has its influence with ourselves and with others. Those who are rightly informed respecting the Lord's will in such matters, the Lord's consecrated people, have a great responsibility—a responsibility of what effect their words and influence have upon others. Our words, whether written or spoken, exercise an influence upon the minds and thoughts of others. Frequently they go from one to another and thus, if pernicious, evil is spread far and near and the word once uttered cannot be recalled. Some one has wisely said that Error can get around the world while Truth is getting its boots on. Oh, the power of a slanderous word! Oh, the power of an insinuation! Yea, even of a shrug of the shoulder! Who does not know it? Who is unaware of the fact that this is the practice of the world daily; and alas, the practice also of many of God's people—professing Christians! The bitter word of sarcasm or insinuation is shot out often unthinkingly, but the terrible poison goes from heart to heart and fresh roots of bitterness are scattered abroad, which a lifetime of holy living cannot fully counteract.

On the contrary, what a power the tongue has for good, using the word tongue here in its broad sense, representing not only words spoken, but the words written and printed. As an illustration: What speaker or writer has ever done more to help poor humanity than the Prophet David in the inspired Psalms which he wrote? Truly, as Solomon has said, "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver (Proverbs xxv, 11). As for the Church, the Lord has indeed agreed that he will not judge the Church according to their words and their deeds entirely, but according to their spirit, their intention, their will, their energy, their zeal for him and his Truth. Nevertheless, he assures the Church that out of the abundance of the heart the mouth will speak, and that they may thus judge or test themselves. If their hearts are right—full of love for God, for the brethren, for mankind, for their enemies, they will speak accordingly, manifesting their love and kindness in words as well as in deeds. The good heart out of its good treasure will shower blessings—fruits and flowers of refreshment and kindness, while the evil heart will send forth bitter words, poisoned arrows, injurious to all with whom they come in contact.

Whoever, therefore, finds that he is continually stirring up strife and wounding his friends should promptly make an examination of his heart to ascertain the trouble there. He should not be content to say, "I meant no harm." The heart that is not full of goodness, kindness, generosity, love, will likely not control the tongue properly. We must reach the place where not only we do not will to do harm to our neighbors, but where we sincerely wish to do them good. Then that good heart, out of its treasure of goodness, will speak words of kindness, of love.

But now, considering the words of our text as applicable to the Millennium, how will the world render its account in the future respecting the words of the present life? Not surely in line with the teachings of the dark ages that, during a twenty-four hour day, the whole world could be ranged in line and each individual remember each pernicious word and evil act and give an account of the same to the great Judge? Quite different will the reality be. The judgment day will be the thousand year period of the Millenhium and the account of every evil act, of every sinful deed, and of every pernicious word will be recorded in the individual's own character, just as a towel bears the mark of every unclean wash dried upon it. In other words, the wrong-doer not only injures others, but specially injures and marks himself by the wrong he has practiced in evil speaking and evil-doing and the more deeply has he marked his character accordingly. It is in line with this that the Scriptures assure us that in the resurrection time many will come forth to shame and lasting contempt. It is a time in which characters will be shown up. How terribly ashamed some will be of their showing! Some who now appear to be honorable indeed, some who now rank fairly high amongst men, will then be seen in truer colors. Their shame and the contempt in which they will be held by mankind in general will be a part of their wrong course. The shame will last until gradually they will be able to demonstrate a more noble character. Their contempt will continue until, under the blessed, uplifting influences of the Millennial Kingdom, they will have attained the way of the Lord more perfectly.

We are not to think that this signifies that every man will be justified from the Adamic death condemnation by any words that he could utter. Nor are we to think of the expression, "By thy words thou shalt be condemned," that any man could come under a second condemnation until first freed (through Christ) from the condemnation of original sin. Nothing but the merit of Christ's sacrifice can justify any. Nothing but the blood of Christ can justify those who come to God by faith, in this Age, or those who will assure him of their loyalty for righteousness by works, in the next Age. We are not to understand our Lord as here contradicting the general testimony of the Scriptures.

The lesson is in harmony with the Scriptural declaration, "Blessed is the man who is not condemned by that which he alloweth." That is to say, the ungenerous, the unkind, are very apt to blame others strongly for misdemeanors of which they themselves are guilty. The man whose words respecting others do not condemn himself is to be congratulated as a happy man indeed. The person whose criticism of others is so kindly, so generous, so merciful as to not involve a condemnation of his own course is certainly an exceptional man or woman. We call to remembrance our Lord's words, "With whatsoever measure ye mete it shall be measured to you again," and, interpreting our text in harmony with this, if our words are generous and kind, loving and benevolent we shall receive similarly kind treatment of our Lord. If our language respecting others be harsh, cynical, critical, unkind, we may expect reproofs from the Lord. Why? Because all mankind are by nature fallen, imperfect, depraved; and the person who sees the faults of others and fails to see his own, needs the correcting chastisements of the Lord to show him his true condition reflected in his course of conduct and language toward and respecting others; he indicates that he himself needs to be taught some very important lessons without which he will not be prepared to make progress toward the Divine standards of character.

On the contrary, the person who is kind, gentle, forgiving, forbearing, sympathetic, disposed to make allowances for others shows that he has learned an important lesson already and that, to a considerable extent, his heart is right. Whatever there is wrong with such a generous soul is unintentionally wrong, a wrong which is intrenched in his flesh, but with which his heart is not in accord. By his kindly words respecting others he marks himself, indicates his character as of the kind which God can approve: as one of the class who at least love their neighbor as themselves and thus imply also that they love God, because, as the Apostle points out, "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" Contrariwise he who loves his neighbor speaks generously of him, is merciful toward him, and compassionate, undoubtedly would greatly respect and love the Divine character in its perfection of Justice, Wisdom and Love.

This brings us to another Scripture of similar tenor: "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." It is true that God gave to natural Israel a code of laws which defined the course of life for them, saying, Thou shalt not do this and that. Yet that Law was intended in great measure to show to Israel and to the world the impossibility of an imperfect man or woman keeping perfectly the Divine requirements. When the Lord would state his Law from the other standpoint—positively and not negatively, he sums the matter up in few words, Thou shalt love the Lord supremely and thy neighbor as thyself. He who is merciful is in the condition to be blessed of the Lord, because he more than others approximates the standard of the Divine Law—Love; for mercy is the expression of love.

We see, then, that the Divine promise that he who is merciful to his neighbor will receive the more mercy from the Lord is not a mere ipse dixit, nor a mere rewarding of such a proper course. Rather it is in harmony with the principles and essence of the divine government, because the more generous and loving the heart, the nearer to the perfect condition.

If this principle could be rightly seen by Christian people it would work an almost instantaneous revolution in the hearts and conduct of all who desire Divine approval and favor. Instead of burning one another at the stake; instead of putting on thumb screws; instead of condemning one another to eternal torment, Christians would be seeking to bless one another, to think and feel kindly respecting one another and disposed to pray God's blessing upon those who despitefully use them and persecute them. Instead of slander and misrepresentation and envious insinuations, the spirit of love and kindness and mercy and godlikeness would more and more prevail amongst those who have named the name of Christ and have professedly enlisted under his banner and covenanted to walk in his footsteps.

Nor would the blessing stop with the Church. The world, seeing such an example of love and kindness, would be ready to take knowledge of the followers of Jesus, as they did in the days of the apostles, saying, "Behold, how these Christians love one another!" Then our Lord's words would have a practical illustration, "A new Commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another, as I have loved you"—to the extent of laying down our lives for each other. As the Apostle declares, "We ought also to lay down our lives for the brethren."

It has seemed at times as though some of those who profess relationship to Christ as members of his Church do even more of petty evil-speaking and slandering and busybodying than do the worldly who make no profession whatever. According to the standards set forth in our text the worldly, if they have more of the quality of mercy in their hearts will evidently be more pleasing to God than those who have made much profession and neglected the Master's commands and failed to cultivate his spirit of love and mercy, in word and deed.

Let us all remember our text and apply it. "By thy words shalt thou be justified, and by thy words shalt thou be condemned." As we think of the fact that these sermons reach the eyes of about seven millions of readers weekly, we feel the weight of our responsibility. It is our desire that they be just such as the Lord can approve, and such as will be helpful to hearers and readers.

A Million for a New Stomach

It is said that Mr. Rockefeller, one of the world's richest men, offered one million dollars to any physician who would make his stomach strong enough to digest an ordinary meal. With all his money, this multimillionaire is compelled to live on milk and crackers.

What a warning this is to men and women who are beginning to realize that "they have a stomach"!

Slight attacks of indigestion soon develop into acute attacks. The weakened stomach quickly becomes weaker under the continued strain of digesting unsuitable food. Chronic Dyspepsia makes a strict diet imperative, and life miserable.

Yet how unnecessary all this suffering is! "Fruit-a-tives" — that splendid stomach tonic—will give you what millionaires cannot buy, a clean, sweet, healthy stomach which will be capable of digesting any reasonable meal.

"Fruit-a-tives", made from concentrated and intensified fruit juice, acts directly on the stomach, increases the flow of the digestive juices and corrects the faults of digestion.

"Fruit-a-tives" or "Fruit Liver Tablets" is not only a positive and speedy cure for all these troubles. It also acts as a general tonic, building up and strengthening the entire system. Frequently those, who have been cured of Stomach and Bowel Troubles, write to the Company, stating that they are enjoying better health than ever before.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all druggists and dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c.—or may be obtained from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Mandarin.

Mandarin is not, as is generally supposed, a Chinese word, but one given by the Portuguese colonists at Macao to the officials of the Flowery Kingdom. It is from the verb "mandar" (to command). There are nine ranks of the mandarins, distinguished by the buttons in their caps—first, ruby; second, coral; third, sapphire; fourth, an opaque blue stone; fifth, crystal; sixth, an opaque white shell; seventh, wrought gold; eighth, plain gold; ninth, silver.

Potato Crop.

The potato crop of the world is roughly 5,000,000,000 bushels a year. Most of it is raised in Europe.

Bees.

Bees were unknown to the Indians, but they were brought over from England only a few years after the landing of the pilgrim fathers. It was more than two centuries after the first white invasion of New England, however, before modern beekeeping began. The industry of the present day dates from the invention of the movable frame hive by Langstroth in 1852.

J. M. KILBOURN, President of Lakefield Portland Cement Company, Limited; Owen Sound Portland Cement Company, Limited.
J. R. BOOTH, Ottawa, Director of Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.
GEORGE E. DRUMMOND, Montreal, Director of Molsons Bank; Canada Iron Corporation, Limited.
J. S. IRVIN, Ottawa, Managing Director The International Portland Cement Company, Limited.
HONOURABLE W. C. EDWARDS, Ottawa, Senator, Director of Canadian Bank of Commerce, Director of Toronto General Trusts Corporation.
W. D. MATTHEWS, Toronto, Vice-President The Dominion Bank; Director of Canadian Pacific Railway.
R. W. KELLY, New York, President of The Vulcan Portland Cement Company, Limited.
HONOURABLE ROBERT MACKAY, Montreal, Senator, Director of Canadian Pacific Railway; Director of Bank of Montreal.
W. R. WARREN, New York, Director of The Vulcan Portland Cement Company, Limited; Shawinigan Water and Power Company, Limited.
W. H. E. BRAVENDER, Calgary, Vice-President of Alberta Portland Cement Company, Limited.
E. M. YOUNG, Allentown, Penn., Vice-President of the Lehigh Portland Cement Company.
HONOURABLE GEORGE A. COX, Toronto, Senator, Director Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company; Canadian Bank of Commerce.
W. M. AITKEN, Montreal, Director Montreal Trust Company.
CHARLES H. CAHAN, Montreal, President Western Canada Power Company, Limited.

The Canada Cement Company, Limited, is a new Company which has been incorporated for the purpose of taking over the undertakings and businesses of the following Companies, now doing business in Canada, as manufacturers of Portland Cement and like products, viz.:—

The Lakefield Portland Cement Company, Montreal, Quebec.
The Lakefield Portland Cement Company, Lakefield, Ontario.
The Owen Sound Portland Cement Company, Limited, Shallow Lake, Ontario.
The Alberta Portland Cement Company, Limited, Calgary, Alberta.
The Belleville Portland Cement Company, Limited, Belleville, Ontario.
The International Portland Cement Company, Limited, Hull, Quebec.
The Vulcan Portland Cement Company, Limited, Montreal, Quebec.
The Lehigh Portland Cement Company, Limited, Belleville, Ontario.
The Canadian Portland Cement Company, Limited, Marlbank, Ontario.
The Canadian Portland Cement Company, Limited, Port Colborne, Ontario.

The Canada Cement Company, Limited, by means of contracts already made, proposes to acquire control of a majority of the shares of the capital stock of the following companies:—

The Western Canada Cement and Coal Company, Limited, Exshaw, Alberta, and
The Eastern Canada Portland Cement Company, Limited, Quebec.

The plants, which will be owned or controlled by the new Company, are believed to be among the best constructed and most efficiently equipped on this continent; and, under a competent central management, not only will a uniform standard of quality be secured in the combined product, but an equable standard of prices may be maintained throughout the whole country. These plants will have a total capacity in excess of 4,500,000 barrels of Portland cement per annum.

ESTIMATED EARNINGS:

The following may be regarded as a conservative estimate of the earnings of the Company:—

NET EARNINGS:

The estimated annual net earnings of the Company, based on the quantities of cement being sold, during the present year, by the companies comprised in the merger, and on the costs of manufacture, under existing conditions amount to $1,900,000

FIXED CHARGES:

Interest on $5,000,000 of First Mortgage Bonds, at six per cent. per annum	$ 300,000
Sinking Fund payment on bonds, two per cent. per annum	100,000
Preferential Dividend of 7 per cent. per annum on $10,500,000 Prefence Shares	735,000
		$1,135,000
Leaving available for dividends on Ordinary Shares of the Company		$ 765,000

THE CANADIAN MARKET FOR PORTLAND CEMENT

The demand for Portland Cement in Canada has increased remarkably during the last five years. In 1904 the total consumption of Portland Cement in the Dominion was 1,694,988 barrels, of which 784,630 barrels were imported. In 1908 the consumption, notwithstanding the general industrial depression was 3,134,338 barrels, and no less than 3,495,961 barrels were manufactured in Canada. Existing trade conditions indicate that the consumption during 1909 will largely exceed that of 1908.

The increase is not abnormal, nor due to merely local causes. In the year 1888, it is estimated that less than 200,000 barrels of cement were manufactured on the North American continent; and the enormous growth of the business is shown by the fact that in 1908 approximately 55,000,000 barrels were there produced. The manufacture of Portland Cement commenced in Canada in 1888, but until 1904 the importations into Canada of the foreign product exceeded the Canadian production.

The report of John McLeish, B.A., chief of the Division of Mineral Resources and Statistics of the Department of Mines, Canada, on the production of cement in Canada during the calendar year 1908, furnishes the following comparative statement:—

Calendar Year.	Canadian.		Foreign.	Total.
	Manufactured.	Consumed.	Imported into Canada.	Consumed in Canada.
	Barrels.	Barrels.	Barrels.	Barrels.
1904	908,990	910,358	784,630	1,694,988
1905	1,541,568	1,346,548	917,558	2,264,106
1906	2,152,562	2,119,764	666,931	2,785,695
1907	2,491,513	2,436,093	672,630	3,108,723
1908	3,495,961	2,665,289	469,849	3,134,338

Great as has been the development of the Portland Cement industry in Canada since 1904, it is only reasonable to assume that this growth will be largely exceeded in the immediate future, and for many years to come. The enormous public works in progress and in contemplation, including Railways, Canals, Bridges, Harbour Improvements, Piers, Wharves, Piles, Pavements, Buildings Foundations, and Buildings, etc., will all require proportionately large quantities of the manufactured products of the new Company. The hydro-electric developments throughout the country will increase the demand, while the rapid substitution of reinforced concrete for other materials in the building trades will render necessary an increased production on the part of the new Company.

OBJECTS OF THE MERGER:

According to the returns made to the Dominion Government by the cement manufacturers, the average price at their works obtained by them in 1908 was $1.39 per barrel. This was the lowest price ever reported by the Canadian mills. In 1906 the average price was from $1.65 to $1.70, and in 1907 about $1.60. At the beginning of the present year it was realized by a number of the manufacturers that, even without any increase in prices, the business would be rendered much more profitable by a merger of several of the large competing companies on a conservative basis. The Canada Cement Company, Limited, is the outcome. The new Company will own or control cement-producing plants at the central points of distribution from the St. Lawrence River west to the Rocky Mountains; and, by securing a more efficient organization which will be able to regulate the distribution of the manufactured product from these central points to the centres of consumption, large economies in the present cost of freight, which represents a large percentage of the ultimate cost to the consumer will undoubtedly be effected. The establishment of one executive office in the City of Montreal, and the elimination of competitive salesmen, middlemen, and brokers is also expected to effect a considerable saving in the costs of the Sales Department under the new management.

Forms of application can be obtained at any office of the Royal Trust Company or of the Royal Securities Corporation, Limited.

"THE TWO PIGEONS"

One of Pathe's beautifully coloured pictures telling a story of the love of a pretty maiden for a youth and how another youth steps in and nearly spoils it, but he doesn't and after many exciting incidents the first Romeo wins out. It is a most pleasing romance.

NIAGARA IN WINTER DRESS

This picture was taken last winter when the famous ice jam was forming and should be of great interest to everyone. It shows a most beautiful view of the falls when in the grip of the Ice King. Those who have not seen the falls in the winter should come to the Royal and see this picture.

"THE GALLEY SLAVE"

This is the first of art five reels to be released by the Vitagraph Co. dealing with Victor Hugo's Masterpiece Novel les Miserables. This first subject deals with 'Jean Valjean", his imprisonment, his release from prison after nineteen years, and how the good Bishop, "The man of God" tries to save him by presenting him with his Candlesticks. The play the Bishop's Candlesticks is taken from this incident and is now being played by James K. Hackett in Toronto.

DR. COOK IS THE FIRST TO REACH NEW YORK

COOK IN BROOKLYN

Commodore Delayed in Passage Southward Will Reach Cape Breton Town This Afternoon—His Family Probably Joined Him Yesterday—Cook Has No Statement to Make Until Later.

New York, Sept. 21.—The Oscar II. made her way slowly to quarantine this morning. There Mrs. Cook, accompanied by the two children, Dr. Cook's brother William, Dr. Boswell O. Stebbins and J. Knowles Hare of the executive committee of the Arctic Club of America, waited for a tug on which Dr. Cook was transferred to the steamboat Grand Republic, which carried more than a thousand friends and enthusiasts down the bay to meet him. The Grand Republic brought him to the foot of South Fifth street, where he made his entry into the city by automobile. Bird S. Coler, president of the Borough of Brooklyn, officially welcomed him there.

The greatest reception, however, will be held at the Bushwick Club in Dr. Cook's home section of Brooklyn, about noon to-day. Soon after that Dr. Cook will join his family at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Alexander Begg of Washington, of the National Geographic Society, will represent the society.

Some New York papers were taken on board the Oscar II. last evening containing long reports concerning Peary's achievements. Dr. Cook read them carefully, then said: "There is nothing new here, and I shall wait until something more definite is published before saying anything further on the matter."

Dr. Cook took advantage of the delay last night to send a wireless despatch to his wife, asking her to come down the bay and join him on board, thus avoiding the crush of the public greeting. Mrs. Cook was slightly indisposed, however, and replied by wireless that she would be unable to go.

Peary Delayed.

Sydney, Sept. 21.—Commander E. Peary will not make his entry into Sydney until late to-day. The Arctic ship Roosevelt anchored off St. Paul's Island yesterday, when the explorer found he could not reach port before nightfall. This is about 65 miles north of Sydney.

Mrs. Peary, her daughter, Marie, and little Robert E. Peary undoubtedly met the commander last night, the Peary family having sailed north on the steamer yacht Sheelah.

News that Commander Peary was nearing port and would probably land late yesterday afternoon caused a general cessation of business in the town. Large crowds swarmed into the streets and to the waterfront to greet the explorer. All manner of water craft, from yachts to sailboats, sporting their colors, moved down to the bay.

A tug, gaily decorated, will convey the official welcoming party down the bay. This party includes the mayor of Sydney, Wallace Richardson, the heads of the city departments and other prominent officials. The proposed banquet to the explorer has been held in abeyance until Commander Peary shall communicate his wishes to the mayor.

New Million-Dollar Company.

Welland, Sept. 21.—The commissioners of Queen Victoria (Niagara Falls) Park have given permission for another immense undertaking by the Ontario Power Co.

The company will spend over a million dollars in laying another pipe from the gate house to the power house. The new pipe is to be the same diameter as the old, eighteen feet, but instead of being steel, encased in concrete, it will be wholly of reinforced concrete.

It is anticipated that the work will be completed in six months. The long stretch of the park which the pipe will traverse will be torn up.

Seven Years In Penitentiary.

Brockville, Sept. 21.—John Fitzgerald, a Montreal man, was found guilty at the assizes here yesterday of attempted rape on an 18-year-old girl and was sentenced to seven years in Kingston Penitentiary.

CIVIC REFORM TRIUMPHS IN MONTREAL—GRAFTERS ROUTED

Montreal, Sept. 21.—Civic reform triumphed yesterday all along the line, and there is great satisfaction in consequence among the better class of the people. There were, in fact, no race differences, and neither did religious belief divide up the old city of Mount Royal.

In a word, the grafters are routed, horse, foot and artillery, and every ward represented by members of the Giroux faction has gone overwhelmingly in favor of an earnest attempt to clean up the City Hall.

Coming down to hard facts, the city voted to reduce the number of aldermen by a majority of 17,027, and to establish a board of control by 16,137, while the old city also pronounced in no uncertain sound against the utility board, to be elected by the Council and so championed by the aldermen, the majority against that measure being 10,883.

The following is the detailed vote throughout the city: Aldermanic reduction, 19,570 for, 1,643 against; board of control, 18,575 for, 2,428 against; board of public works, 2,906 for, 13,079 against.

There are 60,000 voters on the civic list, 20,000 being disqualified for failure to pay their water rates, and this is the cause of the immense majority for reform. The French as well as the English went as a sweep against the present regime.

An attempt on the part of a little Sunday sheet called The Bulletin to raise the race cry signally waned, for the French districts rolled up just as large a majority as the English people of the west end.

Great credit is due Senator Dandurand, a Liberal, and ex-Mayor Laporte, a Conservative, for having brought their compatriots to believe that the time for a clean civic administration had arrived.

The campaign has been a long one, for while the board of control scheme became a factor only a year ago, the movement for a better order of things dates back to the old council, known as the reform council, which was in office seven or eight years ago. A good deal of house-cleaning was done at that time, but there were a good many corners not touched, and, after a few years of a different kind of council, the agitation for a change began again, and this time it was not the council which purified itself, but the public got a chance direct to cast its vote.

The board of control is to be a board of five directors, elected by the people direct from the whole city and not by wards. They have no initiative power. The aldermen will, as heretofore, pass the bylaws which are to govern the city, make the appropriations for paving, sewers and all public works. The difference from the present system comes in at this point. The board of control is the executive body which will see that the wishes of Council are carried out promptly and economically.

MACKENZIE KING APPEALS TO WORKMEN FOR REGIME OF PEACE

Quebec, Sept. 21.—The 25th annual convention of the Dominion Trades Congress opened yesterday morning with many notables present, including Hon. Lomer Gouin, Premier of Quebec; Hon. W. L. M. King, Minister of Labor; Will Crooks, M.P., Woolwich, England, representing the British Trade Union Congress; Sir George Garneau, mayor of Quebec; George Jones, Atlanta, Ga., fraternal delegate from the American Federation of Labor; Charles L. Baine, Boston, Boot and Shoe Workers' International Brotherhood; Alphonse Verville, M.P., Montreal, and Allan Studholme, M.P.P., Hamilton. There are about 125 delegates here, including 40 from Montreal and 16 from Toronto.

Hon. Lomer Gouin, in his address, declared that the Quebec Government was constructing a high commercial school in Montreal that would be second to none on the continent. The Quebec Legislature was well disposed towards the working classes, and prepared at times to consider matters that might be placed before them by the congress.

Hon. W. L. M. King, Minister of Labor, said he was delighted to meet on the platform such men as Will Crooks, M.P. He outlined the policy of the Labor Department, and paid a tribute to the late D. J. O'Donoghue, who was fair wage officer in his Department.

The prevention of strikes and lockouts was dear to his heart. He was opposed to all kinds of war. He believed in peace. He asked workingmen to bring about a regime of peace, which would set an example to all the other nations of the world.

He hoped the workingmen would feel that with the establishment of a Department of Labor that the Asiatic question would be carefully studied by those in authority. The Government had not received any report from any individual to bring in Asiatic labor to help to construct the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. If such a request was granted it would be refused by the Government.

The Asiatic standard was beneath the Canadian standard, and for that reason and others a head tax had been placed on the Chinese. He thought that some means less obnoxious to China should be brought about to enable Canada to get Chinese markets, and yet be effective in preventing an influx of Chinese to such an extent to be a detriment to the Canadian workers and the standard of living of Canada's people. As long as he was Minister of Labor he intended to uphold the dignity of labor, maintained as it should be.

William Crooks, M.P., asked the representatives of labor not to pay too much attention to promises made by members of Parliament. While he was delighted to meet the Minister of Labor, the Premier of the Province of Quebec, and other prominent men on the platform, he asked the workingmen of Canada to depend entirely on their own labor organizations.

Snatched From In Front Of Engine

Young Girl Thrown Across Rails, Jostled by Nuptial Crowd at Station, Saved by Young Singer.

A GALLANT RESCUE

Cornwall, Sept. 21.—A gallant rescue was made at Grand Trunk station here yesterday. About one hundred people had gathered to send off Mr. and Mrs. P. Flynn, who were married at St. Andrew's yesterday morning. As the train was approaching, the crowd jostled about, with the result that Miss McIntosh, cousin of the bride, was thrown off the platform prostrate across in front of the train, which was about 100 feet away and running twenty-five miles an hour. The crowd stood powerless. Hugh Kippin, a singer at Starland, saw the lady fall, and rushed to her aid. He dragged her from the tracks as the engine passed, the pilot striking her feet. The airbrakes had been applied, but the train could not be stopped. Miss McIntosh was able to return to her home, uninjured, but very much affected by the shock.

Trade Commission at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Sept. 21.—Lord Balfour of Burleigh, Sir Daniel Morris and Sir John Dickson Poynder, the British members of the royal commission on better trade relations between Canada and the West Indies, have arrived in the capital. The Canadian commissioners are Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. Wm. Paterson.

The Ottawa sitting will begin today, after which evidence will be taken in Toronto, Montreal, St. John, and Halifax. The commissioners will then separate to meet again in the West Indies during the winter or next spring. H. R. Cowell of the Colonial Office is secretary of the commission, and H. McCarthy, C.M.G., is technical adviser.

Bartender Sent to Jail.

Kingston, Sept. 21.—For stealing $1 from the till of the British-American Hotel, when employed as a bartender, Herbert Fuller, a young married man, was given 15 days in jail.

The proprietor says he has lost about $500 out of the till in two years. He sent a man into the bar with $1 for a bottle of whisky, when the bar opened up, and then found that Fuller had not put the money in the till nor registered the sale. He asked Fuller for money and the later handed it over. Fuller said he was only paid $7 a week and claimed he was to busy with customers to register up the money before the proprietor dropped in on him.

Hanged Himself.

Comber, Ont., Sept. 21.—Charles Ford, aged 60, a sectionman on the M.C.R., hanged himself in a lumber shed yesterday morning. He had left home at the usual hour apparently to go to work. A widow and five children survive.

Spaniards Advncing.

Madrid, Sept. 21.—It is officially announced that the Spanish troops at Melilla have commenced their advance against the Moors.

To Produce Best Results Flour Must Be Properly Aged

MILLS with insufficient storage capacity are forced to ship their flour before it is properly aged. Underaged flour requires expert handling in order to secure even fair results. In our big warehouses in six different cities we have storage capacity for 370,000 (98-pound) bags. We are thus able to store "Purity" Flour until it is properly aged.

You can never get underaged flour if you always specify "Purity."

Good results come easiest and surest with "Purity" Flour.

"MORE BREAD AND BETTER BREAD."

PURITY FLOUR

Purity Flour is packed in 7, 14, 24, 49 and 89 pound cotton sacks. Also barrels and half-barrels.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

So she was thinking in the carriage by her mother's side, and the grand duchess had to speak twice before her laughter knew their silence had been broken.

"I forgot to tell you something, Virginia."

"Ye-es, mother?"

"Your great success has made me absentminded, child. You looked like a shining white lily among all those handsome, overblown Rhaetian women."

"Thank you, dear. Was that what you forgot to say?"

"Oh, no! It was this: The Baroness von Lyndal has been most kind. She urges us to give up our rooms at the hotel on the first of next week and join her house party at Schloss Lyndalberg. It's only a few miles out of town. What do you think of the plan?"

"Leave—Kronburg?"

"She's asked a number of friends—to meet the emperor."

"Oh! He didn't speak of it—when we danced."

"But she has mentioned it to him since, no doubt—before giving me the invitation. Intimate friend of his as she is, she wouldn't dare ask people to meet him if he hadn't first sanctioned the suggestion. Still, she can afford to be more or less informal. The baroness was dancing with the emperor, I remember now, just before she came to me. They were talking together quite earnestly. I can recall the expression of his face."

"Was it pleased, or"—

"I was wondering what she could have said to make him look so happy. Perhaps"—

"What answer did you give Baroness von Lyndal?"

"I told her I thought you wouldn't mind. I told her we would go."

CHAPTER NINE

SCHLOSS LYNDALBERG towers high on a promontory overlooking a lake seven or eight miles to the south of the Rhaetian capital. The castle is comparatively modern, with pointed turrets and fretted minarets, and, being built of white Carrara marble, throws a reflection snowy as a submerged swan into the clear green water of the Mommelsee. All the surroundings of the palace, from its broad terraces to its jeweled fountains and well nigh tropical gardens, suggest luxury, gayety, pleasure.

But on the opposite bank of the Mommelsee is huddled the dark shape of an ancient fortified stronghold, begun no one knows how many centuries ago by the first Count von Breitstein. Generation following generation the men of that family completed the work until nowadays it is difficiut to know where the rock ends and the castle begins. There, like a dragon squatting on the coils of its own tail, the dark mass is poised, its deep set window eyes glaring across the bright water at the white splendor of Lyndalberg like the malevolent stare of the monster waiting to spring upon and devour a fair young maiden.

The moods of Baroness von Lyndal concerning grim old Schloss Breitstein had varied many times during her years of residence by the lake. Sometimes she pleased herself by reflecting that the great man who had slighted her lived in less luxury than she had attained by her excellent marriage. Again, the thought of the ancient lineage of the present Count von Breitstein filled her with envy, and oftener than all the feeling that the "old grizzly bear" could crouch in his den and watch sneeringly everything which happened at Lyndalberg got upon the lady's nerves. She could have screamed and shaken her fist at the dark mass of rock and stone across the water, but after the birthday ball and during the first days of Leopold's visit at her house she often threw a whimsical glance at the grim silhouette against the northern sky and smiled.

"Can you see, old bear?" she would ask gayly. "Are you spying over there? Do you think yourself all wise and all powerful? Do you see what's in my mind now, and do you guess partly why I've taken all this trouble? Are you racking your brain for some way of spoiling my little plans? But you can't do it, you know. It's too late. There's nothing you can do except sit still and growl and glare at your own claws, which a woman has clipped. How do you like the outlook, old bear? Do you lie awake at night and study how to save your scheme for the emperor's marriage? All your grumpy old life you've despised women, but now you're beginning at last to find out that, powerful as you are, there are some things a woman with tact and money, nice houses and, a good natured husband can do which the highest statesman in the land can't undo. How soon shall I make you admit that, Chancellor Bear?"

Thus the baroness, standing at her drawing room window, would amuse herself in odd moments when she was not arranging original and elaborate entertainments for her guests. And she congratulated herself particularly on having had the forethought to invite Egon von Breitstein, the chancellor's half brother.

There was a barrier of thirty-six years' difference in age between the two, and they had never been friends in the true sense of the word, for the old man was temperamentally unable to sympathize with the tastes or understand the temptations of the younger brother, and the younger man was mentally unable to appreciate the qualities of the older.

Nevertheless it was rumored at court that Iron Heart had more than once used the gay and good looking captain of cavalry for a catspaw in pulling some very big and hot chestnuts out of the fire. At all events, "Handsome Egon" (so known among his followers), "the chancellor's jackal" (thus nicknamed by his enemies), would have found difficulty in keeping up appearances without the allowance granted by his powerful half brother. The ill assorted pair were often in communication, and the baroness liked to think that news fresh from Lyndalberg must sooner or later be wafted like a wind blown scent of roses across the water to Schloss Breitstein.

She was still less displeased than surprised, therefore, when, the emperor having been three days at Lyndalberg, with two more days of his visit to run, an urgent message arrived for Captain von Breitstein from his brother.

Poor old Lorenz was wrestling with his enemy, gout, it appeared, and wished for Egon's immediate presence.

Such a summons could not be neglected. Egon's whole future depended upon his half brother's caprice, he hinted to the baroness in asking leave to desert her pleasant party for a few hours. So of course she sent the chancellor her regrets, with the baron's, and Egon went off charged with a friendly message from the emperor as well.

When the captain of cavalry had set out from Lyndalberg to Schloss Breitstein by the shortest way—across the lake in a smart little motor boat—promising to be back in time for dinner and a concert, the baroness spent all her energy in getting up an impromptu riding party, which would give Leopold the chance of another tete-a-tete with Miss Mowbray.

Already many such chances had been arranged, so cleverly as not to excite gossip, and if the flirtation, destined by the hostess to disgust Leopold with his chancellor's matrimonial projects, did not advance by leaps and bounds it was certainly not the fault of Baroness von Lyndal.

"Egon has been told to use his eyes and ears for all they're worth at Lyndalberg, and now he's called upon to hand in his first report," she said to herself when the younger Von Breitstein was off on his mission across the lake.

But for once, at least, the "chancellor's jackal" was wronged by unjust suspicion. He arrived at Schloss Breitstein ignorant of his brother's motive in sending for him, though he shrewdly suspected it to be something quite different from the one alleged.

The chancellor was in his study, a deep windowed tower room, with walls book lined nearly to the cross beamed ceiling. He sat reading a budget of letters when Egon was announced, and if he were really ill he did not betray his suffering. The square face, with its beetling brows, eyes of somber fire and forehead impressive as a cathedral dome, showed no new lines graven by pain.

"Sit down, Egon," he said abruptly, tearing in half an envelope stamped with the head of Hungaria's king. "I'll be ready for you in a moment."

The young man took the least uncomfortable chair in the room, which from his point of view was to say little in its favor, because the newest piece of furniture there had been made a hundred years before the world understood that lounging was not a crime. Over the high stone mantel hung a shield, so brightly polished as to fulfill the office of a mirror, and from where Egon sat, perforce upright and rigid, he could see himself vignetted in reflection.

He admired his fresh color, which was like a girl's, pointed the waxed ends of his mustache with nervous cigarette stained fingers, and, thinking of many agreeable things, from baccarat to roulette, from roulette to races and races to pretty women, he wondered which he had to thank for this summons to the chancellor. Unfortunately Brother Lorenz knew everything. One's pleasant peccadillos buzzed to his ears like flies. There was little hope of deceiving him.

Egon sighed, and his eyes turned mechanically from his own visage on shining steel to the letter held in an old hand so veined that it reminded the young man of a rock netted with the sprawling roots of ancient trees. He had just time to recognize the writing as that of Adalbert, crown prince of Hungaria, whom he knew slightly, when keen eyes curtained with furled and wrinkled lids glanced up from the letter.

"It's coming," thought Egon. "What can the old chap have found out?"

But, to his surprise, the chancellor's first words had no connection with him or his misdeeds.

"So our emperor is amusing himself at Lyndalberg?"

Egon's face brightened. He could be cunning in emergencies, but he was not clever, and always he felt himself at a disadvantage with the old statesman. Unless he had a special favor to ask he generally preferred discussing the affairs of others with the chancellor rather than allowing attention to be attracted to his own. "Oh, yes," he answered brightly. "His majesty is amusing himself uncommonly well. I never saw him in as brilliant spirits. But you, dear Lorenz—tell me about yourself. Is your gout"—

"The devil take my gout!"

Egon started. "A good thing if he did, provided he left you behind," he retorted, meaning exactly the opposite, as he often did when trying to measure wits with the chancellor. "But you sent for me"—

"Don't tell me you supposed I sent for you because I wanted consolation or condolence?"

"No-o," laughed Egon uneasily. "I fancied there was some other more pressing reason. But I'm bound in common courtesy to take your sincerity for granted until you undeceive me."

"Hang common courtesy between you and me!" returned the bear. "I've nothing to conceal. I sent for you to tell me what mischief that witch cat Mechtilde von Lyndal is plotting You're on the spot. Trust you for seeing everything that goes on—the one thing I would trust you to do."

"Thanks," said Egon.

"Don't thank me yet, however grateful you may be. But I don't mind hinting that it won't be the worse for you if for once you've used those fine eyes of yours to some useful purpose."

Egon was genuinely astonished at this turn of the conversation, as he had been carefully arming himself against a personal attack from any one of several directions. He sat pointing the sharp ends of his mustache one after the other and trying to remember some striking incident with which to adorn a more or less accurate narrative.

"What would you call useful?" he inquired at last.

The chancellor answered, but indirectly. "Has the emperor been playing the fool at Lyndalberg these last few days?"

"Do you want to make me guilty of leze majesty?" Egon raised his eyebrows, but he was recovering presence of mind. "If by playing the fool, though, you mean falling in love, why, then, brother, I should say he had done little else during the three days, and perhaps even the first of those was not the beginning."

The chancellor growled out a word which he would hardly have uttered in the imperial presence, particularly in the connection he suggested. "Let me hear exactly what has been going on from day's end to day's end," he commanded.

Egon grew thoughtful once more. Clearly here was the explanation of the summons. He was to be let off easily, it appeared. But, suspense relieved, he was not ready to be satisfied with negative blessings.

"Are you sure it isn't a bit like telling tales out of school?" he objected.

"Schoolboys with empty pockets have been known to do that," said the chancellor. "But perhaps your pockets aren't empty—eh?"

"They're in a chronic state of emptiness," groaned Egon.

"On the 15th day of October your quarterly allowance will be paid," remarked his brother. "I would increase the installment by the amount of 3,000 gulden if that would make it worth your while to talk—and forget nothing but your scruples."

"Oh, you know I'm always delighted to please you!" exclaimed Egon. "It's only natural, living the monotonous life you do when you're not busy with the affairs of state, that you should like to hear what goes on in the world outside. Of course I'll gladly do my best as a raconteur."

"My dear young man, don't lie," said the chancellor. "The habit is growing on you. You lie even to yourself. By and by you'll believe yourself, and then all hope for your soul will be over. What I want to know is how far the emperor has gone in his infatuation for this English girl. I'm not afraid to speak plainly to you, so you may safely—and profitably—do the same with me. In the first place, I'll put you at your ease by making a humiliating confession. The other night the woman Von Lyndal tried to 'draw me,' as she would express it, on this subject, and I'm bitterly mortified to say she partly succeeded. She suggested an entanglement between Leopold and the girl. I replied that Leopold wasn't the man to pull down a hornets' nest of gossip around the ears of a young woman who had saved his life. No matter what his inclinations might be, I insisted that he would pay her no repeated visits.

"This thrust the fair Mechtilde parried as if repeating a mere rumor by saying that she believed the girl was to stay at the country house of some old friend of the emperor. At the time I attached little importance to her chatter, believing that she merely wished to give me a spiteful slap or two, as is her habit when she has the chance. For once, though, she has succeeded in stealing a march upon me, and she kept the secret of her plan until too late for me to have any hope of preventing Leopold from fulfilling his engagement at her house. After that was safely arranged I don't doubt she was overjoyed that I should guess her plot."

"Do you think that even if you'd known sooner you could have stopped the emperor from visiting at Lyndalberg?" asked Egon. "I know that you are iron, but he is steel."

"I would have stopped him," returned the chancellor. "I should have made no bones about the reason, for I've found that the best way with Leopold is to blurt out the whole truth and fight him—my experience against his will. If advice and warning hadn't sufficed to restrain him from insulting the girl who is to be his wife and injuring the reputation of the girl who never can be, I would have devised some expedient to thwart him for his own good. I'm not a man to give up when I feel that I am right."

"Neither is he," Egon added, "but since you seem so determined to nip this dainty blossom of love in the bud we'll hope it's not yet too late for a sharp frost to blight it."

"I sent for you," said the chancellor, brushing away metaphor with an impatient gesture, "to show me the precise spot on which to lay my finger."

"I'll do my best to deserve your confidence," responded Egon gracefully. "Let me see—where shall I begin? Well, as you know, it's simpler for the emperor to see a good deal of the woman he admires at a friend's house than almost anywhere else in his own country. This particular woman risked her life to save his, and it's so natural for him to be gracious in return that people would be surprised if he were not. There's so much in their favor at the commencement.

"Miss Mowbray and her mother arrived at Lyndalberg before the emperor, had made friends there and were ready for the campaign. The girl is undoubtedly beautiful—the prettiest creature, I think, I ever saw—and she has a winning way which takes with women as well as men. Not one of her fellow guests seems to put a wrong construction on her flirtation with the emperor or his with her. The other men would think him blind if he didn't admire her as much as they do, and none of the women there are of the sort to be jealous. So, are you sure, Lorens, that you're not taking too serious a view of the affair?"

"It can't be taken too seriously, considering the circumstances. I've told you my plans for the emperor's future. Princesses are women, and gossip is hydra headed. When the lady hears—she who has been allowed to understand that the emperor of Rhaetia only waits for a suitable opportunity of formally asking for her hand—for she will surely hear, that he has seized this very moment for his first liaison, I tell you neither she nor her people are likely to accept the statement meekly. She's half German—on her father's side a cousin not too distant of William II. She's half English—on her mother's side related to the king through the line of the Stuarts. And in her there's a dash of American blood which comes from a famous grandmother who was descended from George Washington, a man as proud and with the right to be as proud as any king. All three countries would have reason to resent such an ungallant slight from Rhaetia."

"The little affair must be hushed up," said Egon.

"It must be stopped, and at once," said the chancellor.

"Ach!" sighed the young man, with as much meaning in the long drawn breath as the elder might care to read. And if it did not discourage it at least irritated him. "Go on!" he exclaimed sharply. "Go on with your sorry tale!"

"After all, when one comes to the telling, there isn't a very great deal one can put into cut and dried words." explained Egon. "At table the emperor has his hostess on one side and his fair preserver on the other. The two talk as much together during meals as etiquette allows and perhaps a little more. Then, as the emperor has been often at Lyndalberg, he can act as cicerone for a stranger. He has shown Miss Mowbray all the beauties of the place. He gathers her roses in the rose garden; he has guided her through the grottoes; he has piloted her through the labyrinth; he has told her which are the best dogs in the kennels and has given her the history of all the horses in the baron's stables. I know this from the table talk. He has explored the lake with Miss Mowbray and her mother in a motor boat. Perhaps you saw the party? And, whether or no he brought his automobile to Lyndalberg on purpose, in any case he's had the Mowbrays out in it several times already. One would hardly think he could have found a chance to do so much in such a short time, but our emperor is a man of action. Yesterday we had a picnic at the Seebachfall to see Thorwaldsen's Undine. Leopold and Miss Mowbray, being splendid climbers, reached the statue on the height over the fall long before the rest of us. At starting, however, I was close behind with the baroness and overheard some joke between the two about a mountain and a cow. The emperor spoke of milking as a fine art and said he'd lately been taking lessons. They laughed a great deal at this, and it was plain that they were on terms of comradeship. When a young man and a girl have a secret understanding, even the most innocent one, it puts them apart from others.

"Last night there were fireworks on the lake. The emperor and Miss Mowbray watched them together, for everything was conducted most informally. Afterward we had an impromptu cotillion, with three or four pretty new figures invented by the baroness. The emperor gave Miss Mowbray several favors, and one was a buckle of enameled forgetmenots. This morning there was tennis. The emperor and Miss Mowbray played together. They were both so skillful it was a pleasure to watch them. At luncheon they ate a double almond out of one shell, had a game over it, and Leopold caught Miss Mowbray napping. That brings us to the moment of my coming to you. For the afternoon I fancy the baroness was getting up a riding party, and this evening, unless they're too tired, she'll perhaps get up an amateur concert at which Miss Mowbray will sing. The girl has a delicious voice."

"The creature must be a fool or an adventuress," pronounced the chancellor. "If she has kept her senses she ought to know that nothing can come of this folly—except sorrow or scandal."

Egon shrugged his stiffly padded military shoulders. "I have always found that a woman in love doesn't stop to count the cost."

"So! You fancy her 'in love' with the emperor?"

"With the man rather than the emperor, if I'm a judge of character."

"Which you're not!" Iron Heart brusquely disposed of that suggestion. "The merest schoolgirl could pull the wool over your eyes if she cared to take the trouble."

"This one doesn't care a rap. She hardly knows that I exist."

"Humph!" The chancellor's eyes appraised his young brother's features. "That's a pity. You might have tried cutting the emperor out. Her affair with him can have no happy ending, while you, in spite of all your faults, with your good looks, our position and my money, wouldn't be a bad match for an ambitious girl."

"Your money?"

"I mean should I choose to make you my heir, and I would choose if you married to please me. Who are these Mowbrays?"

"I haven't had the curiosity to inquire into their antecedents," said Egon. "I only know that they're ladies, that they must be of some consequence in their own country or they couldn't have got the letters of introduction they have and that the girl is the prettiest on earth."

"Mechtilde talked to me, I remember, a good deal about those letters of introduction," the chancellor reflected aloud. "But Rhaetia is a long cry from England, and letters might be forged. I've known such things to be done. Fetch me a big red volume you'll find on the third shelf from the floor at the left of the south window. You can't miss it. It's Burke's Peerage."

Egon rose with alacrity to obey. He was rather thoughtful, for his brother had put an entirely new and exciting idea into his head.

Pays for itself in fuel saved

Don't allow a few extra dollars to prevent you from taking the perfect-cooking, sure-baking, easily-regulated Pandora in place of a cheaper stove. In a season or two Pandora will pay the difference in the fuel it will save—and it will keep on saving until it has paid for itself.

Pandora special flue construction makes fuel do double duty. Wide fire box is another fuel-economizer. The steel oven heats quicker than a cast oven, thus saving still more fuel. Further economizing features will be explained by the McClary Agent.

PROFITS—There is a good profit in this Ink. There are 12 or 15 Ink Companies in the United States paying dividends of from 12 to 20% per annum.

THE KEARNS INK CO. of Toronto was organized two years ago to manufacture the new CANADIAN WRITING INKS, invented by J. J. Kearns. The past two years has been spent in experimenting and improving quality and to-day it stands among the top notchers in the Ink world. This Ink has met with such spontaneous approval from users, and the trade has shown such willingness to buy in quantities, that the managers deem it wise to enlarge their operations and make a big staple business enterprise out of this Company, hence offer to the public. The total capital is only $40,000, so that you can see that this is no inflated and watered wild cat scheme, but a first-class legitimate investment offered to you—one where a dollar invested to-day will be worth at least two ina year and will pay 10 per cent. income on this.

Some Orders That we Received as to the Sale of Kearns' Ink. We found the demand practically without limit; we receiving orders and inquiries far beyond our ability to supply the goods. Orders came from such houses as Parson's Fair Syndicate 17 stores in Ontario, Central Business College, Ontario Government, King Edward Hotel, Grand Trunk Railway Co., National Trust Co., Toronto Railway Co., Separate Schools of Toronto and Peterboro', Imperial Accident & Guarantee Co., Central Canada Loan & Savings Co., Consumers Gas Co., Toronto Elec. Cloth Gowns for Afternoon Wear.

FOREREAU or princess lines will undoubtedly form the basis for the majority of handsome afternoon costumes of the season.

Closely allied to these are the various basic draperies, assuming a new aspect every day, as it seems. The short apron front is much favored, so also is the fichu drapery arranged at the side or side front. Another style softly hangs over the underskirt in a pronounced oblique fashion, forming a drapery of six inches over the left hip and sweeping across the centre until it reaches the hem on the opposite side.

The princess form swings in a wide with the modifications of the Moyen Age styles; the plaited or gathered skirt is mounted on the long, princess, cut-off in straight lines or sloping well to the back.

For the more supple cloths as cashmere de soie, the washerwoman's draperies, claimed to be a forerunner of the Louis XVI styles, will be exploited. A better appreciation of the sartorial outlook may be gained by scrutinizing the sketches appearing on this page.

The first costume is of olive green broadcloth in princess form, with centre panel and sides fitted to the figure in a wrinkless fashion. The top of the princess is cut circular, banded by galloon of silk net, with mountings of self-toned satin in arabesques, outlined with narrow black silk cord, the centres being overlaid in padded designs in darker shades of green silk. Here and there among these rich, subdued colors is a hint of silver thread.

The sides of the princess are cut off in deep cut-away lines, ending in a point in back and outlined with a wide band of embroidered galloon.

The lower skirt is laid in shallow, pressed plaits. The sleeves are snug fitting with deep, shaped cuffs of the embroidery. The chemisette is of tucked mousseline, the stitches being done in black, outlined in silver thread.

The saucy little toque is of olive green satin with black plumes clustered low on the right side.

The second model shows the stronghold which scarf effects maintain even on cloth gowns. Here the model is in crepe cashmere (a very new and exquisite material) made princess with a most unique arrangement of scarf ends in soft satin. These spring from the bust line, cross in the centre, softly draping the hips and ending in a large bebe bow in back. A band of satin outlines the chemisette of tucked chiffon, the sleeves are close fitting, made in two sections, the lower one being of satin extending beyond the wrist.

The hat, of silk braid, is massed with satin on top, forming a curious loose drapery. The crown is enveloped by a circle of black novelty feathers.

The last gown is a very graceful model of its kind, exploiting the draped princess tunic. Ceil blue chiffon broadcloth has been chosen, combined with narrow black velvet banding and cut jet buttons. The fullness is cleverly disposed of at the sides where it is drawn into two large buttons of cut jet, oval in shape. The tunic carries a deep bias band of self-material.

Silk mull forms the high collar and the double fichu that springs from the sides. The sides of the bodice are gracefully shaped, taking the form of the collar, then falling into straight lines. These are outlined by narrow bands of black velvet, supplemented by rows of closely set jet buttons.

The long, slightly gathered sleeves (mousquetaire) carry a centre trimming of the velvet bands and silk mull frills.

Black velvet covers the large, picturesquely shaped hat which is massed with ceil blue feathers, which shade to grey and are strikingly relieved by numerous long, black tines. These novelty feathers will be tremendously smart and correspondingly expensive.

Less costly materials than those suggested, would be satisfactory for these models. Soutache, rat tail and flat braid being substituted for the galloon in the second sketch. Silk or crepe de chine would be equally attractive as cloth for the grey and blue gowns.

Speaking of braid, recalls the fact that weaves of every description are the smart mode. Wide silk basket weaves are employed for coats and coat dresses, either in matching or contrasting tones. Soutache is still retained, but wise ones declare that the silky little rat tail and embroidered braids are fast usurping its place of honor. Tubular and flat braid combined, one set is very attractive.

The greatest variety prevails in braid ornaments. There are pendants forming loops, frogs, buttons and even tassels. The large crochet braid motifs are particularly smart. There is a print to color, in the novelty braids.

Gold and silver threads form designs and plaided effects are much sought. A new trimming is an inch wide braid with an inset design of gold braid.

MARJORIE.

Told to Mothers

GIVE baby quite a tiny pillow. The head really needs to be raised very little indeed, and to get into a habit of sleeping with a very high is very bad.

Give castor oil in this way: Take a small tumbler and squeeze into it about a tablespoonful of orange juice, next pour in the oil, then add more of the juice.

The oil will form a globule in the centre of the juice, and can generally be swallowed without being detected.

Children under two years of age should on no account be allowed to eat meat unless it be very finely minced, and even then only occasionally. Good gravy or beef tea, however, may be given in the middle of the day for dinner, and a little vegetable finely bruised down in it.

Young girls are sometimes rather busy and inclined to lead a sedentary life. Where this is the case they should be encouraged to take up some kind of sport or outdoor exercise. Games such as tennis, hockey and badminton played in moderation—are excellent for growing girls, and do much to strengthen the muscles and develop the figure.

Fencing is quite the best exercise for giving suppleness to a figure [illegible]

Sometimes, especially in [illegible] weather when over-excited children find it impossible to go to sleep directly they are put to bed.

When this is the case—instead of scolding the little wide-awake—it is a good plan to rearrange the bed-clothes, they generally get very hot and uncomfortable when the child has tossed and turned for some time, and turn and shake up the pillows.

Before going back to school allow the children to have a party or a picnic as a sort of finale to their vacation. Children will resume their studies and accept with better grace this new order of things when allowed to wear [illegible]

GRAND RALLY

BOYS

WANTED

THE

EXAMINER

WE WONDER if it ever occurred to the boys of Peterborough that the selling of papers was a stepping-stone to a successful business career in future years.

DO they recognize the fact that this little business offers them an opportunity to

MAKE

100 Per Cent ?

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

BOYS buy the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each ; or in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive ten cents from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 62 2-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts ?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say that the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

A NEWSBOY'S EXPERIENCE IN A LARGE CITY. Why can't a local Boy be benefitted proportionately ? This story is taken from the Saturday Post :

MONEY IN NEWSPAPER ROUTES.

Another boy was only thirteen when his father died, leaving two hundred dollars insurance, a widow and four younger children. The insurance money was loaned out to a neighbour at six per cent., as a sort of reserve fund, and while the widow did plain sewing, the boy carried newspapers morning and evening. After three months' experience with this work he borrowed twenty-five dollars and purchased the smallest newspaper route in town. Vigorous canvassing for new customers made that route so productive that in six months he paid back the loan. The lender offered another loan of fifty dollars, which the boy took, buying two more routes. These were covered by boys hired to do the work, however, because he felt that all his energy must go into the original route, so that he would at least be certain of good returns from that. Principles of management learned by this plan made him so successful that in less than five years he owned every newspaper route in his town. His mother's two hundred dollars was still intact, and his brothers and sisters going to school. A legacy of two hundred dollars fell to the family. This, with the original two hundred dollars and another hundred the boy had saved, was paid on a home costing twenty-eight hundred dollars, the balance to be cleared off at the rate of twenty-five dollars a month. Three furnished rooms were rented at a total of about twenty-two dollars monthly, and this money, it was agreed, should never be spent. Newspaper routes, odd jobs and the mother's contributions kept the family and paid the instalments. In four years the income from furnished rooms, put away in the bank, grew to more than one thousand dollars. The mortgage was finally cleared off, and the boy, now nearly twenty-one years old, started to get an education at the high school.

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily all selling the Examiner, but some easily make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Boys! Be Boys of Business

Get in the game. It won't hurt you, but will give you a right start. You will have money of your own to save or buy useful needs with.

BOYS ! Take your spare time between four and six o'clock and see what success you will have between now and Christmas.

NEWSBOYS' BONANZA

Boys, figure this proposition out for yourselves. Be ambitious. Good newsboys are always taken care of and recommended for future positions.

Only a very few of either class were on sale, a few feeding bulls being about all that was offered. Representatives of the distillery feeders were on the market.

Milkers & Springers.

Fred Rountree was on deck early and picked up a load of over 20 good to choice milkers and springers at prices ranging all the way from $45 to $65 each, and they were good ones at that.

Veal Calves.

Over 40 calves sold at the usual prices, $3 to $6 per cwt., with an odd one or two of extra quality at $6.50. Some of the calves were bought to ship west to a country town that is short of veal.

Sheep & Lambs.

Trade in sheep and lambs was about steady. Export ewes sold at $3.50 to $4 per cwt.; rams, $2.50 to $3; lambs, $5 to $5.75.

Hogs.

As far as we could ascertain from drovers and dealers generally, there is little change in the hog situation, the farmer being boss of the situation, as he has been all summer. That is, if prices are lowered he, the farmer, will not sell.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 20.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Sept. 18, were 2975 cattle, 3625 sheep and lambs, 2375 hogs, and 975 calves, while the supply for local consumption this morning consists of 1450 cattle, 2250 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 550 calves.

A weaker feeling developed in the market this morning for cattle and prices were fully ½c per lb. lower than a week ago. This was attributed to the increased receipts, the larger percentage of common stock and a lighter demand than last week.

The attendance of buyers was large on account of the fine cool weather and as they all wanted a few cattle a fairly active trade was done. A feature of the market was the display of a few loads of very choice northwest ranch cattle, which met with a good demand at $4.90 per cwt. There was no demand from exporters, owing to the fact that cables were again weaker and noted a further decline in prices of ¼c to ½c per lb., and even at this reduction trade in Liverpool was very slow. The top price realized in this market for choice Ontario steers was 5¼c; good, 4¾c to 5c; fair, 4c to 4¼c; medium, 3½c to 3¾c; bulls, 3¼c to 4¼c, and canners, 1½c to 2c per lb.

A somewhat easier feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, owing to increased supplies and prices, as compared with a week ago, show a decline of about ½c per lb. At this reduction there was a good demand from packers and dealers and a brisk trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $6.25 per cwt. weighed off the cars. Cable advices from Liverpool, London and Bristol reported trade in Canadian bacon slow and the feeling easier in sympathy with the weakness in other brands, but prices show no change, as compared with a week ago.

A feature of the market for small meats is the weaker feeling in lambs and prices have declined ½c to ½c per lb. since this day week on account of the very large receipts and the prospects of the same keeping up for some little time to come.

At the above reduction the demand from butchers was good and an active trade was done at 5¾c to 6c per lb. An easier feeling also prevailed in sheep and the top price realized was 3¾c per lb. The demand for calves was good, of which supplies were limited and the undertone to the market was strong, with sales of grass-fed stock at 3½c to 4¾c per lb.

At the Canadian Pacific livestock market the receipts for the week ending Sept. 18 were 4230 cattle for export account and 1850 cattle, 2150 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs, and 435 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale consisted of 750 cattle, 1555 sheep and lambs, 250 hogs and 175 calves.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., Sept. 20.—Cattle—Receipts, 4400 head; good, active and strong; common, slow and 10c to 25c lower; prime steers, $6.65 to $7; shipping, $6.75 to $6.80; butchers, $4.50 to $6.80; heifers, $3.50 to $5.50; cows, $2.75 to $5; bulls, $2.75 to $4.75; stockers and feeders, $3.25 to $4.60; stock heifers, $3 to $3.50; fresh cows and springers, $2 to $3 higher. $25 to $65.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

It is not likely that Sir John French will come to Canada to report on the militia until next May.

The Sovereign Grand Lodge of the I.O.O.F. of Canada and the U. S., is now in session at Seattle, Wash.

Peter MacRitchie, aged 35, an employe of the C.P.R. at Fort William, was killed yesterday, being struck on the head by a flywheel.

Mrs. Wesley Scott was formally committed on the charge of murdering Harvey Scott at the preliminary hearing of the case at London yesterday.

The London City Council last night decided to take a vote at New Year's as to whether or not the city shall in future be governed by a board of control.

John A. Brown of the Brown Manufacturing Co., Montreal, was found dead yesterday in a marsh near St. Louis, Mo., after writhing there unattended for a week.

An earthquake of moderate intensity occurred at 3.29.33 Sunday afternoon, and continued an hour, according to the record taken from the seismograph at Washington.

Alben Anderson, 13 years old, dead at Shortsville, N.Y. While performing gymnastic exercises in his father's barn on a rope tied to a ladder, he accidentally hanged himself.

Word has been received at St. John, N.B., that the bark Fram, 1,100 tons, has gone ashore on Tatimintac Beach, near Chatham, N.B. She struck on sandy beach and if a storm arises will undoubtedly be a total loss. The crew is still standing by.

Scientists and ethnologists are said to have become much interested in the findings of Prof. A. C. Bouser of Spokane, Wash., College, of a geingko leaf buried near Spokane. Prof. Bouser says this confirms the theory that North America and Japan were connected by land centuries ago.

With the city of New Orleans entirely stripped of wire communications since 3 p.m. yesterday from the world, and reports trickling in from points along the gulf of high tides and hurricanes, it is apparent that the gulf storm has scored heavily in property damage if not in loss of life.

Making Money In Swindle.

New York, Sept. 21.—Postoffice inspectors made an unannounced call yesterday in an eastside tenement and arrested Dominico Forte, a young Italian, and the reputed head of the European-American Transfer Co., a concern through which it is alleged that a petty swindle was conducted in which hundreds of Italians throughout the United States were victimized.

According to the inspectors, letters were sent out by Forte to credulous foreigners, stating that a package of jewelry consigned to them had been received, and that the "European-American Transfer Co.," as agent had paid $1.95 duty thereon. The package would be forwarded to its destination upon receipt of $2.95.

The inspectors say that the names of 10,000 prospective "customers" were found in Forte's rooms. The prisoner made a full confession, it is alleged, saying that he was the sole proprietor and that he "was making money as fast as Rockefeller."

Northcliffe Gives News Service.

Victoria, B.C., Sept. 21.—Lord Northcliffe, editor of The London Times, as a result of his personal visits to Canada, announces that in order that the Canadian press may organize a thoroughly satisfactory world press service, he will place gratuitously at the service of a selected Canadian press agent in London, advance proofs of all London Times and Daily Mail specials five hours in advance of publication. He will also assist in organizing a first-class Canadian press service.

There is a probability of Lord Northcliffe establishing a series of papers in Canada.

Their Favorite Did Not Stay.

Windsor, Sept. 21.—Rev. Joseph Ryerson, descendant of Egerton Ryerson, founder of the Ontario educational system, will not be returned to the pastorate of Gratiot avenue Methodist Church, Detroit, although 180 of the 225 members want him back, and threaten to withdraw if their wishes are not acceded to. District Superintendent Sweet is authority for the statement that Ryerson will be assigned to some other church. He took farewell of his congregation Sunday.

Two Liberals In Field.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—LaPierre, straight Government, endorsed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and championed in the hustings by Hon. R. Lemieux, has been nominated in Montcalm for the Commons against D. Lafortune, who is also a strong Liberal. The Conservatives did not put a candidate in the field. Polling will take place next Saturday.

Little Girl's Body Recovered.

Port Dalhousie, Sept. 21.—About 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon as a stranger was wheeling past the rubber factory he noticed a body floating in the water. Some men near by pulled it out and it was found to be the little Brissell girl, about four years of age, who was drowned there ten days ago.

Supplied Indian With Liquor.

Brantford, Sept. 21.—Alfred Patterson, bartender at the Kerby House, was fined $25 and costs for supplying W. P. Cook, an "Indian lister," with liquor. The latter was fined $10. Patterson pleaded ignorance.

Watching Her Daughter.

Windsor, Sept. 21.—Mrs. Sarah Austin came to Detroit yesterday and had the police watch the Windsor ferry to stop her two daughters, who, she said, had eloped, from coming to this side to get married.

Ratepayers Decline.

Welland, Sept. 21.—The paving by-law to make the rate 70 per cent. to the property owners and 30 per cent for the town was defeated yesterday popular feeling favoring 60 and 40 per cent.

No Commission for Thaw.

Pittsburg, Sept. 21.—Without comment on the petition, Judges Cohen, Swearingen and Carnahan, handed down a decision yesterday refusing to appoint a commission to determine if Harry K. Thaw is insane.

Soap That is Best for the Baby's Bath

Baby's skin is very sensitive to soap; some soaps soothe and nourish, while others inflame and irritate.

It is of the utmost importance that you know what soap to use, and to do this you must know what is in the soap.

So let us explain how we make Infants' Delight. We first go for pure vegetable oil to France. There we pay often double what we might pay. But the oil we get is pure enough to use on your table.

Then we go more than 12,000 miles to the isle of Ceylon for pure cocoanut oil. Both oils are carefully tested by chemists and doubly boiled.

Next they go through our own special milling process and fall like flakes of snow into enormous bins. Then they are crushed under a weight of 30 tons to press out the moisture.

Finally they pass through granite rollers and come out in miles of silky ribbons. Then they are dried eight times and stamped into oval cakes that just fit the hand.

Isn't it worth while to have soap like this for your baby? Why risk using common soaps when this excellent kind costs no more than others?

This lovely soap leaves the baby's delicate skin as soft as velvet and as smooth as silk. Even the baby knows the difference in this delightful soap—so we call it Infants' Delight.

Baby will like the perfume too. It is so dainty and fragrant—only the exquisite scent of the rose. If this soap is pure enough for the baby's skin it surely is best for your own. Try one cake—you owe it to baby and yourself.

How to Bathe the Baby

Rinse the body with clear, warm water and then rub in a rich lather of Infants' Delight. Then rinse off the lather with a cloth dipped in lukewarm water and wrung out over the skin. Pat the baby's skin dry with a cloth but never rub with a towel for it coarsens the texture of the skin.

Midland Losses.

Midland, Sept. 21.—While the losses of Sunday's lumber fire have not been accurately compiled, it is not thought they will total over $200,000.

The heaviest sufferers are the Graves, Bigwood Co. of Buffalo, who lose about 4 1-2 million feet of lumber, valued at upwards of $60,000. It is well insured. J. L. Burton & Son, Barrie, lose $50,000, including 11,000 railway ties, partially insured; and Burton Bros., Barrie, about $35,000, partially insured. Munns & Cochrane of Sudbury lose $6,000, fully insured. The Log Picking Association had only about 40,000 feet of lumber burned, and the loss will be about $1,000. Chew Brothers lose about half a million feet of lumber, and several hundred cords of slabs and edgings, the loss being placed at around $9,600.

Montreal Gets the Grain.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—"So far this year Montreal has had 60 per cent. of the grain exported from the North Atlantic points," declared G. W. Stephens, president of the Montreal Harbor Commission, who has just returned from a trip to New York.

OUR EXHIBIT of Pianos and Organs at the Fair and at our Show Rooms attracted great attention and admiration for their beauty of design, perfect action and purity of tone.

ONE MUSICIAN a graduate of one of the best colleges of music in Canada remarked that "The Newcombe Piano is one finest tone Pianos I ever heard.

OTHERS admired the tone of the Evans Bros.' Piano.

AND SOME others prefered the Sherlock-Manning—each and every one produce perfect tones but of different qualities.

WE WOULD be pleased to discuss tone quality and Piano construction with you. There are reasons for different qualities and there are good, bad and horrible Pianos. Let us tell you about them before you buy.

PETERBOROUGH TUESDAY SEPTEMBER 21 1909

RETURNED HOME AGAIN

Mr. Robert Mantell Has Spent Month or More in Western Ontario Visiting—His 100 Years No Deterrent.

IS IN FINE HEALTH

Mr. Joseph Mantell, Peterborough's centenarian has returned home after an extended visit to Toronto, London, Port Stanley and Tilsonburg. Although past the 100-year mark he is in good health, the trip having been apparently beneficial to him. He left Peterborough a month ago to make the journey unaccompanied and he has thoroughly enjoyed the meeting of friends and relatives in the cities and towns he visited. Mr. Mantell's feat is a remarkable one as it is something seldom heard of these days from anoyne to reach their 100th birthday. He has received many congratulations upon the vigour and cheerfulness he shows and which enables him to enjoy to the full his declining years. He resides with his daughter Mrs. J. C. Edwards, 492 Charlotte street.

EXPORTING CEMENT

Mexico, Indies and South Africa Want Material—Canada to Find Big Market.

Montreal, Sept. 21.—The announcement that Canada is destined to become an important factor in the cement industry of the world by being able to export to a number of different countries, was made yesterday by J. N. Kilbourne, the managing director of the Lakefield Portland Cement Company.

Mr. Kilbourne stated that among the counrties that Canada would be able to export to and meet the competition of the world were Mexico, the West Indies and South Africa, all of which have large growing markets for cement. The export business would be handled from the monster Vulcan and Lakefield plants at Lougue Pointe, outside of Montreal, both of which are situated on deep water.

FAIR DIRECTORS

Meeting Called for Friday Night to Settle Accounts.

A meeting of the Peterborough Fair Association has been called for Friday night for the purpose of settling up all business in connection with the fair, and to discuss plans for next year's show. The directors are now very enthusiastic and feel that they have something to work for. All who have accounts against the association are requested to have them in the secretary's hands at once.

INSPECTOR MILLER HAS NOTHING TO SAY OF THE SPRINGVILLE CASE

Detective From the Attorney General's Department Refuses to Discuss the Mystery---Was at Springville Yesterday and Had the Body Exhumed---Is Making Further Investigations To-day.

"I have nothing for publication," was all that an Examiner reporter could learn from Detective Miller of the Attorney-General's Department of what he had been able to find out about the Springville mystery which he is here for the purpose of investigating. "Have you found any theory as to the case?" asked the reporter. "There are many theories in circulation down there," he replied, "but I do not wish to say anything about anyone that I may have formed. "There are a number of things I have found that I could tell you in confidence but which it would not be wise to publish just now." Inspector Miller was at Springville yesterday and had the body exhumed from the cemetery and made a careful examination of the remains and of the clothing.

He returned to Springville this afternoon after having provided himself with a magnifying glass with which he will go over the clothing again in the hope of obtaining a clue as to the identity of the body.

Dr. Carmichael Returns Home From Trip To Pacific Coast

Dr. Carmichael has returned home from the west having enjoyed a trip through to the coast, after attending the sessions of the Medical Association in Winnipeg. He continued the journey through the wheat belt with his brother and also visited Calgary, Banff, Vancouver, Seattle, and other towns and cities. The wheat crop has all been cut and while in most of the places the grain is in stooks, threshing is going on everywhere and looking from the car windows the tell tale smoke is seen rising from many farms denoting the toil that forms the last act of gathering in the harvest that has been carefully watched since the grain first sprouted in the spring. One of the most striking features in the West to-day is the great influx of Americans. They are booming land and business and this tide is sweeping throughout the country. Farms that were purchased a few years ago at a few dollars an acre are now valuable enough to make their owners wealthy.

Dr. Carmichael was favourably impressed by the Seattle Exposition. He visited it on Labour Day when the attendance was 117,000, the biggest since the opening day. In Vancouver he met Dr. Chas. S. McKee, bacteriologist in the Vancouver Hospital and practically everywhere he went the doctor met Peterboro friends and acquaintances. He enjoyed the trip, liked the country and returned impressed with the vastness of the country which is Canada's greatest Eldorado.

Farmers Injured At Barn Raising Are All Recovering

Examiner Special.

Cobourg, Sept. 17.—Special physicians say that the men injured on Thursday in the barn raising upon Matthew Linton's farm will all recover. Charles Jibb, who was among the most seriously injured, has suffered from brain concussion, but is some better. Archie Bowman had both feet injured, and was cut about the head. Richard Nelson was badly shaken up and bruised. James Thompson was lifted up unconscious from beneath a pile of lumber, but is better. Hampton Minifie is suffering from a broken nose and ribs. Harry Bristin has a gash in the shoulder and other injuries. Austin, the school teacher at S. S. No. 16, has a broken arm.

About a month ago when Mr. Linton was recovering from an operation for appendicitis, his barn was struck by lightning and burned with all of the season's crop, entailing heavy loss. The barn which was being raised was to replace this structure, and prominent farmers of Hamilton township were on hand to help. "The bountifully spread tables were in readiness when the accident occurred," said a well-known agriculturist after the accident, "but no one felt like eating."

People May Be Given Chance To Decide On New Hospital

If the recommendations of the Property Committee are accepted a bylaw will be prepared to submit to the people next January re the Isolation hospital. The council has authority to spend $15,000 without going to the people but it was decided last night that it would be proper to give the people an opportunity of saying whether or not they want to spend that much money and whether or not they are prepared to be taxed for the annual expense of maintenance which will run from $2000 upwards according to the amount of sickness there is in the city.

The committee met last night and went over the specifications with Architect Blackwell. It took a lot of time but they are ready now for the council. Then the question of what to recommend to the council came up. Ald. Morgan wanted it to go to the people, claiming that that was the only fair way to do. Some of the committee were content to have the work gone on with at once, but when it was pointed out that practically no work could be done this year anyway, they all agreed to Ald. Morgan's suggestion.

The council will decide the matter at the next meeting.

Sergt. Kerr Is Thankful To The Officers Of The 57th Regiment

Dr. J. H. Eastwood has received the following letter from Mayor F. W. Hall, of Perth in connection with the accident which occurred there during the visit of the Peterborough Rangers on Labour Day in which Sergt. Geo. T. Kerr, of Perth was badly burned by powder. The letter will be read with interest here.

"Dear Doctor Eastwood. — On account of the kind offer from the officers of the 57th to take care of Sergt. (Geo. T. Kerr, who was so badly burnt with powder on Labour Day, and the deep interest taken by you in him, I am writing to let you know that Sergt. Kerr was placed in the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, on the 8th inst, and one of his attending physicians, Dr. Keenan, was surgeon with the Strathcona Horse in South Africa, at the same time Kerr served with the Strathcona Horse, and the doctor knew Kerr very well so that it has been very pleasant for Kerr from the moment he arrived in the hospital. The doctors report that the left eye is good and there may be some little difficulty in restoring the sight in the right eye, although Kerr can see slightly out of the right. His left arm will be all right but the right arm is giving considerable trouble as the wrist is apparently broken in two or three places, and it is pretty hard to treat the breaks until the arm is healed.

I have received a letter from Kerr written by his nurse, in which he wishes me to extend to Lieut. Col. Stevenson and the officers of the 57th his grateful thanks for their interest and their very kind offer to look after him in the Peterborough hospital.

With kindest regards, yours sincerely,

F. W. Hall.

ROOSEVELT AT SYDNEY

Peary's Steamer Arrives To-day Amid the Tooting of Whistles on the Boats and the Ringing of Bells on Shore.

A GREAT RECEPTION

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

Sydney, Nova Scotia, Sept. 21, 09—The Arctic exploration steamer, Roosevelt with Commander Peary and the members of his expedition aboard arrived in port this morning. A great reception was given the vessel. Nearly the entire population of the place were out to greet her and those aboard. A fleet of steamers and tugs escorted the Roosevelt into the harand the tooting of whistles on the boats and ringing of bells ashore made a terrific din.

KANSAS CORN

Wonderful Growth as Told in a Paper From Kansas City.

Kansas, Sept. 21.—This is the tallest corn story of the season, and is being told among the travelling men over the state. It is sai dto have been in a letter written home by an Eastern visitor: "Most of the Kansas streets are paved, grains of corn being used for cobblestones, while the cobs are hollowed out for sewer pipe. The husk, when taken off and stood on end, makes a nice tent for the children to play in. It sounds queer to hear the feed man tell the driver to take a half dozen grains of horse feed over to Jackson's livery stable. If it were not for soft, deep soil here I don't see how they would ever harvest the corn, as the stalk would grow up as high in the air as the Methodist church steeple. However, when the ears get too heavy, their weight presses the stalk down in the ground on an average of 92 feet; and thus brings the ear near enough to the ground to be chopped off with an axe'

AN EASTER LILY IN BLOOM NOW

An Easter Lily out in bloom in the month of September, is a thing we don't see every day, however, Mrs. J. Smyth, 532 Bolivar St., has one. Some of the prominent florists have declared that they never heard tell of such a thing and cannot explain the phenomenon.

Important Meeting Of The Peterborough Presbytery To-day

The most important question before the Peterborough Presbytery to-day was the coming Evangelistic campaign which will be inaugurated the first of October and will be continued throughout the entire Presbytery. It is stated that this is the first time in the history of the Presbytery and in fact of the Presbyterian Church in Canada that a campaign of this kind was undertaken and every effort will be made to crown it with splendid success. There was a good attendance of the members of the Presbytery and elders. Rev. Mr. Skeene of Baltimore occupied the chair. Permission was granted to Knox Church to proceed with the construction of their new edifice and to secure the necessary money. Rev. Brokenshire was appointed to Mill Street Church, Port Hope for one year at a stated salary. Reports of Home Missions were read by Rev. Mr. Thompson, Dr. Marsh and Rev. Mr. Burns. Students who have been on mission work all summer were certified to college. Letters were received from the ministers of the Presbytery supporting the coming campaign and offering their services to help make it a success. The Presbytery is divided into two parts through Millbrook. The north half extends as far as Omemee and the southern half extends as far south as the lake shore between Port Hope and Brighton. The campaign will be held in the northern section during the first two weeks in November and in the southern section during the last two weeks of that month. Services will be held every night in the week and a grand evangelistic effort will be made throughout the entire territory of the Presbytery.

It was decided that the next meeting of the Presbytery will be held in the Mill Street Methodist Church, Port Hope, on the second Tuesday in December.

The afternoon session was begun by a lecture on Evangelism by Prof. Kilpatrick.

Practical Farming Lessons At The Peterborough Exhibition

The Peterboro Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture which is located at Norwood, had one of the most interesting tents on the city fair grounds. The tent was at all times crowded and Mr. H. C. Duff, who is the representative of the Department was kept busy answering questions.

A wonderful display of insects and plant diseases appealed to everyone, citizens and farmers alike. A milk testing outfit pointed out to the farmers the value of taking steps to decide whether or not the individual members of a dairy herd are paying for their board. Weeds, nicely mounted on cardboard, formed an important feature of the exhibit, and many were the questions asked for the best means of eradicating some of the worst pests. Mr. Duff constantly pointed out the benefit of underdrainage in fighting weeds, particularly the Perennial Sow Thistle. The benefit to be derived from underdrainage was well illustrated by the samples of grain which were taken from drained and undrained land.

The distribution of bulletins to enquiring farmers added to the educational feature of the exhibit and printed signs showed in what way the farmers could make use of the Department.

HOW FALL FAIRS ARE CONDUCTED BY PEOPLE OF NORTH DAKOTA

Editor of The Examiner:

The Morton County Fair has just been held and it was a great success and that which contributed largely to its success was the co-operation of the whole city, and I think that the "Peterborough Industrial Exhibition" would be a great success financially and otherwise if there were a little more of the co-operation in Peterborough.

During the three days of the fair here the stores, banks and other places of business were closed from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. Everything was closed just as on a public holiday only more so. Even the pool and billiard balls closed. This allowed everybody to go to the fair. As a result they had from two to three thousand people there each day. An entrance fee of 50 cents was charged and 25 cents for the Grand Stand which holds about 1,500 and which was taxed to its utmost capacity. In view of the fact that this is a place of about 4,000 and the country round about is sparsely settled, I think it is a pretty good record.

If the merchants and others in Peterborough would take this interest in their fair, what a grand success it would be! They put on a very good Western performance which I found very interesting. I am enclosing a copy of the programme for the last day.

Although I am far from home and in the United States I am still a good Canadian and very much interested in the happenings at home. I might mention that the Indians who took part in the performances are from a reservation forty miles south of here and the stage coach was the one that run to Deadwood, South Dakota, and is the original thing.

Although Peterborough cannot attempt to have a display of that kind, the attractions there are just as good in their line.

Yours very sincerely,

EDWARD H. WOOD

IT MAY END SPAIN'S WAR

Fierce Engagement With Moors Was in Favour of the Spanish Troops and Helps Government's Side.

MAY TERMINATE TROUBLE

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

Madrid, Sept. 21, 1909.—In a terrible battle the Spanish forces under Gen. Marinas have defeated the Moors. Driving them from their positions and throwing a line of troops clear across the Morocco peninsula from sea to sea effectually blocking the tribesmen's advance and cutting them off from further operations in the North West. Both sides sustained heavy losses although the Spanish casualties were lighter than the Moorish. Gen. Orozco by a flank movement captured Mount Medan and moved forward driving the Moors from Acebenrabo towards Seeluan.. It is officially believed here that the present engagement will terminate the war in favour of Spain.

BAD CHIMNEY BLAZE

Four Chemicals Required to Extinguish It at Noon.

Just at twelve o'clock to-day the fire brigade was called to the residence of Mrs. Ferguson, 463 Stewart St., where a very bad chimney fire had caused some alarm. It required the use of four chemicals before the blaze was extinguished. The firemen had to work with it for nearly an hour. However not much damage was done.

To be Underwritten in Toronto for Healey Falls Power.

J. A. Culverwell, managing director of the Northumberland-Durham Power Co., lessee of the Healey Falls power, announces that he has completed arrangements with a leading financial corporation for the underwriting of $2,500,000 bonds for development. Power will be transmitted to Belleville, and the cement mills; Deseronto, Napanee and Kingston; also to Port Hope and Cobourg, and north to Hamlet, Norwood and the Blairton iron mining districts.—Toronto World.

A LETTER TO GROCERS

To the Editor of the Examiner:

At the Red Rose Tea booth at the Toronto Exhibition this year a charge of five cents was made for a cup of tea, but the money was handed right back in the form of a coupon worth five cents at any store as part payment for a package of Red Rose Tea. Each coupon was numbered and bore on the face of it in red ink a facsimile of my own signature. I wish to state to every grocer and merchant who sells Red Rose Tea that these coupons when accepted as part payment for a package of Red Rose Tea will be promptly redeemed at their face value by any Red Rose Tea traveller, or when sent within three months to my Toronto Branch, 49 Wellington St. E.

EXHIBITION SUCCESS

A letter printed in another column from Mr. Edward Wood, a former Peterborough boy, giving as a reason for the success of a local exhibition in North Dakota, the co-operation of all citizens of all classes, is instructive to those interested—and that includes everybody—in the success of the Peterborough Central Exhibition. This year, owing to a concurrence of favourable circumstances the Peterborough Exhibiton was more successful than usual, but without unkind criticism, it fell far short of what it can be made if there is more general and energetic co-operation of those concerned, materially and morally, in its success. In the North Dakota case it appears that literally everybody became an active agent in the interests of the Exhibition. Something like that would mean a great deal in the way of success in Peterborough. It is evident that the business and citizen elements are not sufficiently interested. It is true there are city representatives on the board of managment but are they truly representative of the spirit and interest of the citizens? Do they not rather represent their own public spirit and enterprise rather than the united and active interest of the general business community?

The City of Peterborough should be represented in promoting the success of the Exhibition, not alone by delegated individuals, but by the whole people. Everybody should talk exhibition and do exhibition; adopt it as something to be worked for and made an irresistible success. The National Exhibition, held in Toronto has grown great because the people of Toronto, the press of Toronto were all interested in "booming" it. This policy pursued, this hearty co-operation operating through a generation of men, has resulted in making the National Exhibition one of the greatest events of its kind in the world, an annual exhibiton of colossal proportions, both in magnitude and success. We may do the same in Peterborough in a lesser, but equally pronounced degree.

In addition to popular co-operation it may be suggested that one other important condition operating against success is evident, to an extent that could be remedied with advantage, that is insufficiency and, therefore, inefficiency of publicity features. There does not seem to be enough money spent in printer's ink; the special features, the attractions to the multitude, are not sufficiently made known. Solid-thinking members of the management seen to entertain the idea that money spent upon pure amusement features is wasted—diverted from the proper objects of an exhibition. But they are indirectly, but vitally necessary to the greatest success of its legitimate objects. The prizes offered, liberal as they may be, are in many cases not sufficient to induce as large a display as possible of solid exhibits. The finances must be strengthened before the prizes can be increased. The chief source of income is the gate receipts. They depend upon the attendance of the general public, and that depends upon both the general features and the special attractions. Without elaborating these ideas their force should appeal to those interested. The success of the exhibition depends upon general and active co-operation and upon the energy and enterprise of the management in providing the conditions that make for success.

PAROCHIAL JOURNALISM

The Toronto News, speaking of the development of the North, attributes the prosperity of that section to the construction of railways. Incidentally it is stated that the National Transcontinental and the Canadian Northern are building in Northern Ontario, and that while the former will carry products to eastern points, the Temiskaming Railway and the Canadian Northern when built from Sudbury to Nepigon will divert traffic to Toronto. The News says—

"In view of these considerations alone, the older portions of the province will support the Ministry (Sir James Whitney's ministry) in any proper step that may be taken to hasten the opening up and developing of this region."

That is, the News will support any scheme of railway subsidy to be paid by the people of the whole province of Ontario, if it can be shown that the benefit will go to Toronto. This is the warped view entertained by the Toronto News. Anything that will benefit Toronto should be supported without regard to the rights of the other portions of the province entitled to the same consideration. Provincial rights is a purely local affair to the Conservative press of Toronto.

SIR WILFRED LAURIER

The Toronto Telegram in making a reference to Sir Wilfred Laurier as a small and petty tyrant, who is bigoted, intolerant and unjust, says that "Canada never had a Premier more prone than Sir Wilfred Laurier to rest content with the undoubted cleanness of his own hands and life."

One of Sir Wilfred Laurier's chief characteristics is his tolerance, perfect fairness and lack of bigotry. His whole life has been devoted to the task of cementing the races in harmony and cementing self-respect. In this he has earned the unstinted support of both races in Canada. The tribute to the integrity of his personal life and public record was unnecessary. The man is unborn who can charge Sir Wilfred with a dishonest or unjust act throughout his official life. The advent of Sir Wilfred Laurier to the premiership was not only the dawn of great material prosperity for Canada, but the dawn of a day of higher ideal, of more robust and nobler ambition, and national uplift in every way.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

During the twelve months of the years 1895-96, under a Conservative administration, the total gross cash receipts for Dominion lands was $174,509. Under a Liberal administration, the receipts from this source for the single month of June, 1909, was in excess of the total income for one year of Conservative rule, the receipts for the further months of the present fiscal year amounting to $829,817.90, or the monthly average was fifty times greater under Liberal rule. Yet our Conservative friends tell us that they are better qualified to govern the country. A tree is known by its fruits.

POLITICS AND THE TARIFF

(London Advertiser)

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association has declared in favour of the appointment of a permanent tariff commission, and will press its views upon Parliament.

The question is an interesting one, upon which there will be sharp differences of opinion. The advocates of a commission say that their object is to take the tariff out of politics. It is pertinent to ask whether it is possible to take politics out of the tariff. Is there any conceivable tariff into which politics will not intrude?

There are many manufacturers who are not satisfied with the present tariff, but a fiscal policy framed to suit them would not be meekly accepted by a large body of Canadians. So long as people are dissatisfied with the tariff, so long will it be in politics. To invent a tariff that would please everybody is beyond human ingenuity, although the Fielding tariff comes nearer to it than anything Canada has had.

Parliament would humiliate itself if it delegated any portion of its supreme function, the taxing power, which is one of the prerogatives it won after a long struggle with the crown. The framing of a tariff affects the pocket of every citizen, and every citizen should have the right to hold someone responsible for it. A tariff commission might be useful in collecting information and giving advice, but the decision must rest with the elected representatives of hte people, whom the people can get at. Would the members of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association care to pledge themselves to abide by even the rulings of a tariff commission?

DR. GRENFELL'S MISSION

(London Standard)

The Rev. Neil Herman, of Windsor, who has returned from Labrador, travelled in all 3,600 miles by water. Speaking very briefly of the trip, Mr. Herman said: "The Grenfell mission is by far the greatest deep sea mission on this continent, and one of the greatest sea missions in the world. One can hardly estimate what Dr. Grenfell means to the Labrador fishermen. His name is sacred. The arrival of his ship is the signal for the heartiest demonstrations, and then the sacrifice of the men and women on behalf of the cause of suffering humanity! Surgeons of note and trained nurses from the leading hospitals of the continent, brilliant students from the best medical schools in America. All these giving their services free—even paying their own way to these hospitals and missions. Dr. Grenfell himself is the greatest living example of pure unselfishness. Backed up by no large salary—with no income worth speaking of—this man is giving body and soul for the lone fishermen."

GUARDIANS OF MILLIONS

(London Standard)

It is a heavy responsibility that the 1,055 police of the City of London force undertake in guarding the wealthiest area in the world. Within their "beats" are contained the banks and other financial institutions and stores and shops in profusion which might be liable to attract the thief. Yet so efficient is their watch that the city is far from being a happy hunting-ground of the criminal. The report of the commissioner of police for 1908 shows how little variation there is in the amount of crime from one year to another. The number of people arrested was 3,513, as compared with 3,545 in 1907, and the number of indictable offences was 1,017. But this splendid body of men perform other duties than the apprehending of ill-doers. What visitor from overseas but has stood and watched in amazement the facility with which the city policeman disentangles and regulates the traffic at the Mansion House or at Ludgate Circus. And they are also the Good Samaritans of the world's busiest streets. The number of persons taken to hospital by the police suffering from illness or accident during the year was 2,053, as compared with 1,910 in 1907. Of the 2,053 cases, 1,289 were conveyed to hospitals in the electric ambulance, which performed most excellent work.

THE MAID AT SWEET SIXTEEN

Winning, pensive, and sweet, with delicate grace and charm in every movement, but that lovely color that once shone so rosily has gradually faded away. Her eyes are expressive but listless, that lightness of step and buoyancy of spirit which once were hers are gone.

This girl is in danger. Her system demands nourishment; her blood must be renewed. She needs Ferrozone—needs it badly—because it will bring back the nerve energy which rapid growth and study have exhausted. New strength and old-time vigor return with Ferrozone. The delicate maid is energized and given the endurance and vigor that means health.

SHE NEEDS FERROZONE

Parents, think it over. In Ferrozone there is wonderful power for strengthening and rebuilding. Every child needs it—every boy and girl will improve on it. Get a few boxes, 50c each, or six boxes for $2.50. Sold by all dealers.

CHURCH SERVICES

ST. LUKE'S

The first sewing meeting of the W.A will be held at the Children's Shelter on Thursday afternoon. The members are requested to meet at the Post Office at 2.30.

The Rector spoke at both services on Sunday regarding the New Book of Common Praise and asked the people to cease from buying Hymns, A and M., as the New Hymnal, which is authorized for use by the General Synod, would be adopted in the course of time.

ALL SAINTS' NOTICES.

Tuesday,2.30—First regular monthly meeting of the W. A. at Mrs. Hoopers, 181 Dalhousie. The W. A. will be "At Home" from 4 to 6, and from 7 to 10 at the same place.

Wednesday, 8.00—Choir Practice for Harvest Thanksgiving service. Members are asked to come both afternoon and evening and help to decorate the church for this service.

Thursday, 2.30—Chancel Guild; 8.00 Harvest Thanksgiving service, preacher, Rev. Canon Dixon, of Toronto. Congregational meeting after this service to take action on the new hymn book.

No confirmation class this week.

ST. JOHN'S NOTICES

All the Societies are getting into shape for the winter's work. The Girls Auxiliary meets on Monday at 7.30 p.m. The Anglican Young People's Association hold their annual meeting for election of officers on Monday, September 27th. The W. A meets on Tuesday at 3 p.m., Girls Guild Tuesday, 8 p.m. Mrs. Palmer's Devotional and Social hour for women will again meet on Wednesdays, 3.30 to 4.30 p.m., and hearty personal support should be given to this most excellent work.

On Wednesdays at 8 p.m., the weekly evening service will be held. In this connection it is expected that the lectures on "First Aid" and "Home Nursing" will be given from 8.30 to 9.30 p.m. on Wednesdays, and those attending the course should consider it their duty to be present at the weekly service.

The choir has resumed its practices at the regular winter hours. The boys on Mondays at 4.15, Thursdays at 7.30, Saturdays at 9 a.m. Full choir meets on Thursdays at 8 p.m., and choristers are asked to be punctual, as nothing does so much harm to choral practice as members either coming in irregularly or late. The choir is now in good shape and the singing at the Harvest Festival was of a high order. The Mission Band will meet on Friday of this week, conducted by Mrs. Dutton and Miss V. Foote, at 4 p.m.

The Sunday school is now in full swing, but the Superintendent would be glad of several more teachers. Mrs. Macfarlane Wilson holds her Bible class in the Guild Room at 3 p.m. on Sundays and the men's Bible class with Rev. Canon Davidson teaching meets in the upper vestry at the same hour. The Junior Brotherhood St. Andrew met last Sunday at 4 p.m

The new Hymn Book of Common Praise is now in use in the choir, and it is a wonderfully useful work, containing within its covers hymns, responses, canticles, chants and index for the communion office. At the New Hymnal will very shortly be used instead of Hymns Ancient and Modern, every family is urged to purchase the edition with music at 75c., as the new hymns will be introduced gradually. This important step taken by the church in Canada should lead to a great improvement in our responses and congregational singing, so strongly urged by Rev. Canon Davidson last Sunday morning.

The A. Y. P. A. has undertaken to carpet the upper vestry, and the Executive committee hopes it will be done in about a week.

All our young people are asked to join this association this season and attend the first meeting next week in large numbers.

BIRTHS.

WESTBROOK.—In Peterboro, on Tuesday Sept. 14th, the wife of Mr. Charles Westbrook, 268 London St. of a son.

Dr. D. N. Carmichael has returned from his trip West, from Dominion Medical Association. While there he visited Seattle Exhibition and Canadian West and returned by the Crow's Nest. He then went to Rochester and Minnesota to see the May's Clinic and operations.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETY MEETS

In the absence of Mr. Patten, the president, Mr. Gordon Hall presided. After the devotional exercises and business had been transacted, the chairman called upon the Rev. H. J. hymn was sung by the young people was on the life and work of the late Dr. George Mathieson, one of Scotland's greatest preachers. At the age of eighteen his eyesight failed him and thinking first of being a lawyer he decided finally to become a minister. He became a writer of magazines and books, a hymn writer etc. He was a well learned scholar of his day. The speaker read an article out of the British Weekly, admiring the life work of the late Doctor. A hymn was sung by the young people before closing, having with it an incidence given by the speaker. A special invitation was extended to the young men who had arrived lately from Scotland, who were present, to join the Society's ranks.

THE PAINS OF THE AGED

Are usually due to the tendency of the kidneys to wear out as age advances, giving rise to the accumulation of poisons in the blood and causing backache, lumbago, aching limbs and rheumatism. Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are particularly prized by aged people because they can be relied upon to invigorate the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels, and so remove the cause of pains and aches.

THE PRODIGAL

By Stuart B. Stone.

The little morning-glory-mouthed phonograph crackled and rasped and sputtered, then blared jerkingly into "Way Down upon the Suwanee River." Old man Stevens knocked the embers from his pipe and sighed heavily. Aunt Letitia, his buxom wife, echoed the sigh.

"That there air was always Bud's favorite musical piece," she murmured. "And now I guess he's out on the wide, blue sea wishin' he could sit here at home and hear the phonograph play it."

A pretty black-haired girl allowed a soft light of fond remembrance to creep into her dark eyes. "Bud was the nicest fellow in Huckleberry Hollow," she declared. "I'll bet he's a grand man by this time, running around over the world, seeing queens and world's fairs and battleships and Indians. I'd sure like to see Bud."

"There's where my heart am turnin' ever—" crackled the little phonograph. Everyone lapsed into silence dreaming of the beloved absentee. The pretty, black-eyed Beattie stepped out upon the porch to drink in the warm fragrance of the moonlit, balmy night. When she reentered with a hysterical little shriek, the company started up.

"What's the matter?" they cried in frantic chorus.

"A man! A man!" screamed pretty Miss Bettie.

The girl pointed shudderingly into the darkness. "Out there, skulking behind the trees—hiding like a robber."

The old man jerked up his double-barrelled shotgun. The male guests sprang outside and seized heavy limestone missiles. Out among the moonlit cedars the figure of a man flitted between the trees.

"Bang!" roared the old man's gun. Clatter-Clatter! rattled a terrific volley of limestone.

"Don't shoot—look out—it's —" came in hoarse tones from the flitting figure.

"Bang!" went Farmer Stevens' other barrel. Clatter-patter! rattled the second limestone volley. The figure in the cedar clump bounded away with the speed of a frenzied gazelle. Old man Stevens reloaded and hurried after. The calm, moonlit night was rended with the yells and cries of blood lusting men. Clatter-rip-thud! went the limestone missiles after the fugitive. Pretty Beattie hurried after Somebody went after Constable Jeff Skaggs. The man in front ran madly, desperately. The 13 Stevens hounds joined in the chase. It was too much for the skulker in the night, and by a foot's margin he obtained the refuge of a tall oak ahead of a panting hound.

"We've got him!" shouted the excited pursuers. "Come down, you prowlin' highwayman!"

Up in the leafy recesses the fugitive emitted something between a growl and a chuckle. "Got whoy, your precious crazies! Can't you let a fellow surprise you!"

"It's Bud!" cried old Mrs. Stevens, "come out of the deep, blue sea!"

"Bud!" yelped Tommy and Sammy —"Bet he's killed a million Sioux chiefs!"

"It's Bud!" sighed pretty Beattie. 'And I tore my new Chambray jumping rail fences!"

"Come down, Bud!" quavered old man Stevens. "I've wasted some good shells, but I'm plum-dab glad to see you, boy!"

Ten minutes later as they brought out the fatted calf, the morning-glory-mouthed phonograph crackled—

"There's where de old folks stay"—

Mr. G. G. Wainwright has been appointed manager of the Bank of Ottawa in Peterborough in the place of Mr. Hollingshead, who has obtained extended leave of absence. Mr. Hollingshead has not been well and has been advised by his physician to take a few months' rest.

SHORT FALLING IN MILK PRODUCTION

August records received at Ottawa from members of cow testing associations indicate that in most districts the flow of milk is well up to the average. In some localities there is but a very slight decrease from July yield of milk so slight that the increasing richness shows a trifle higher yield of fat.

In other localities, unfortunately, there is a very marked increase, as much as 120 pounds and even 180 pounds of milk per cow less than in July. Many dairy farmers have accordingly vowed that next year will not see them caught without any provision for maintaining the flow, but they have determined to provide some soiling crop, and if possible to build a silo, so as to ensure succulent feed for probable hot spells in July and August. Such men are wise.

Some districts have as high averages as 870 lb. milk, and 29 lb. fat in August. Such wise dairymen have made provision of suitable feed. Others, less provident, had to be content with a yield of 580 lb. milk and 21 lb. fat per cow; while here and there the average yield was down to 390 lb. milk and 16 lb. fat. Such men might well copy the methods of their brother farmers who regularly secure the larger yields. Selection of the best cows can be made intelligently when records are kept of each cow.—Ottawa, September, 1909.

CONSIDERING THE PURCHASE OF GROUNDS

Aldermen May Introduce Question of City Owning Exhibition Grounds.

Several of the aldermen have of late been talking of purchasing land for Exhibition purposes, and there is some likelihood that at the next meeting which has been called for Wednesday night the subject will be introduced. It is not known whether any member of the Council has a definite idea to suggest, but there are several propositions that have been voiced within the precints of the City buildings.

One is to buy land near Crawford's Grove and the other lot is between Peterboro and Lakefield. The price demanded for the Exhibition grounds is $30,000 and this is felt to be too great a sum to be expended for fair purposes. The idea is to have the city own the grounds and the management of the fair be placed in the hands of a commission. Whether the Council really intends to take action in the near future will be decided in the course of the next few meetings

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

THE DEBTORS

Digby Bell began a week's engagement at the Royal Alexandra last night and according to the press accounts the play is full of genuine amusement. It comes to the Grand next week.

De Wolf Hoffer who appeared last year in "What Happened Then," was given a good reception last night at the Princess in Toronto in a musical comedy entitled "A Matinee Idol." It has been running but two weeks and will soon make its Metropolitan appearance in New York. Manuel Klein has given the production a number of catchy songs, the hit apparently being "I am Looking For a Husband."

Here Direct from the Royal Alexandra Theatre, Toronto

The offering at the Grand Opera House, Monday, Sept. 27th will be "The Debtors," which is said to be one of the best comedies presented here this season. The co-stars of the piece are Digby Bell and Kathleen Clifford. The cast which is a large one, includes Courtney Foote, one of the leading juveniles of London, who has been brought over especially to play the lead.

"The Debtors," is based on Charles Dickens' "Little Dorrit." It was originally produced in the German language and had a successful run of two years in Berlin where it was lauded as one of the great comedies of the day. The German version has been translated by Miss Margaret Maye, and for over a year the big managers of New York city have been in litigation over the right to produce the piece. Klaw and Erlanger first secured the legal right, but the German author made the reservation that the stars must be acceptable to him.

Klaw and Erlanger engaged a cast but could not find a woman small enough to satisfy the author's ideal and were compelled to drop the piece. It was then taken up by the Allison-Siegler Company who had Miss Clifford under a long-term contract. Miss Clifford is one of the smallest women on the American stage. She is only four feet seven inches tall, and weighs only 97 pounds.

In "Little Dorrit," Charles Dickens tells the story of the old English custom of imprisonment for debt. "The Debtors," is based on that tale and includes a few bright songs by Miss Clifford, and such comedy as as the modern idea can find in those old English customs and the romance of that day.

WEDDING BELLS

LAUGHLIN—MORROW

A very pretty wedding was solemnized this morning at six o'clock at St. Peter's Cathedral when Miss Josephine Morrow, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Morrow,, 469 Water street, was united in marriage to Mr. Edward Laughlin, of Winnipeg, and Western representative of Greenshields Ltd., of Montreal. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father McColl in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The bride who was given away by her father entered the church to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Doherty. She looked very pretty in a dress of white broadcloth. She wore a white picture hat with plumes. The bridesmaid, Miss Stella Morrow, sister of the bride, was beautifully attired in a dress of old rose, her hat was of the same shade. Dr. McCauly of Montreal was best man.

After the ceremony, the party drove to the home of the bride's father where hearty congratulations were bestowed on the young couple and a dainty wedding breakfast partaken of.

Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin left on the 8 o'clock C. P. R. train for Owen Sound where they will take the boat en route to Winnipeg and the Pacific coast. After their honeymoon they will take up their residence in Winnipeg. Mrs. Laughlin travelled in a tailored suit of wine colour shade with a hat to match.

Among the guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Gough, Mrs. John O'Brien and Mrs. Walker, Lindsay, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Gough and Misses Kathleen and Lillian Gough, Toronto and Mr. John Morrow of Montreal, Que.

WILDMAN—GEROW

A quiet wedding was solemnized at the Methodist parsonage on Wednesday afternoon, September 15th when Miss Annie Wildman, daughter of Mr. Joseph Wildman, of Centre Dummer, was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. Gerow, of Belmont. Rev. G. W. Marvin, D.D., performed the ceremony. The bride was assisted by Miss Florence Snider while Mr. C. A. Radcliffe performed the duties of best man. The happy young couple left immediately for their future home at Belmont.

OBITUARY.

JOHN THORNDYKE

The death occurred yesterday at half past twelve at his late residence, 234 Murray street, of John Thorndyke. About four months ago the deceased suffered from a paralytic stroke and last Thursday had another one from which he never recovered. He was sixty-seven years of age and was born in Hope Township. He had lived here for the past thirty-six years. He was well known and highly respected and many friends will learn with deep regret of his death.

He leaves to mourn his loss, his wife, one daughter, Mrs. Wilton Metheral, and one son Mr. Albert Thorndyke of this city. Six brothers and one sister also survive him. The brothers are Messrs. Robt. of Toronto, Thos and Edward in Michigan, and Wm. and David and James in the West. The sister is Mrs. Darroche also residing in the West.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday at two o'clock from the family residence, 234 Murray street, to the Little Lake Cemetery. Friends are requested not to send flowers.

JEAN FRANCES MORRISON

Much sympathy will be felt for Mr. and Mrs. Jos. F. Morrison, 270 Reid street, who lost their seven-year-old daughter, Jean Frances, who passed away on Sunday afternoon. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon at two o'clock, the remains being interred in Little Lake Cemetery.

WAS INJURED TO-DAY

Curtis Johnston Met With Accident at New Public Library.

Curtis Johnston, a workman on the new Public Library at George and McDonnel streets met with a slight injury on Monday afternoon about two o'clock. He fell from the top of the stone work into the cellar. He was hurt about the neck and back. He was removed in the Dan Spence Ambulance to his room at the Grand Hotel where Dr. McGrath attended him. He will be able to be around again in a few days.

GLOVE FOUND

GRAND CONCERT

To be Given at St. Andrew's Church on Thursday, October 7th.

The ladies of St. Andrew's Church are giving a grand concert in the Church on Thursday, October 7th. Such well known artists as Mr. Harold Jarvis, vocalist, and Miss Helen Wynck Shafor, entertainer have been engaged and a programme of rare excellence will be given. Mr. Harold Jarvis has appeared here on previous occasions and his numbers are always well received and greatly enjoyed.

If You Rid Poisons FROM THE BLOOD

By awakening the liver and kidneys, you will be freed of pains, aches and the tired spring feeling.

Poisons only accumulate in the blood. Pains and aches have the same cause.

Poisons only accumulate in the blood when the liver and kidneys get torpid and slow in action and when, as a result, the bowels become constipated.

Get the liver and kidneys working right and away go the poisons. That is their work, to rid the blood of poisons.

When they fail because of the excessive accumulation of poisons in the spring, use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and they will soon resume their natural functions with renewed energy and vigour.

No other organs of the body can filter the poisons from the blood so you must get the liver and kidneys active if you are going to restore healthful digestion, regular bowel action and free the body of pains, aches and feelings of fatigue and depressing.

It is only natural that the liver and kidneys should give out in the spring, when the blood is usually loaded with impurities, but you can quickly and certainly set them right by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

This is the greatest of spring medicines because it is unique in its direct and combined action on the liver and kidneys.

Put it to the test this spring, and you you will be astonished at its wonderful prompt and thorough action on the digestive and excretory systems. You can be certain that it will move the bowels, awaken the action of the liver and kidneys and completely purify the blood. One pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

POST CARD COLUMN

Peterborough, Sept. 18.

Sir,—Perhaps we should consider where we are in Athletic matters. How is it that foreigners won everything recently at Montreal. Except in the shortest races and perhaps in the very long ones we are not in it in Ontario. With perhaps the exception of Victoria Harriers meet, there has been nothing worthy of consideration lately in Peterborough and even then the know-alls, intruders and hooligans had it nearly as they liked. Generally speaking, I conclude that those in charge are controlled by mercenaries, who know worse than nothing of sports, and have only in view the prostitution of Athletics to unworthy ends.

A Clear Concise Outline of the Fashion Tendencies Marks Our Showing of the Fall Suits : : : :

¶ Better than any perusal of the best fashion magazines is this comprehensive display of handsome garments. Here with a wealth of colour and richness of trimming and fabric have been pictured in a most vivid manner the dominant note in the fashions for this coming season.

¶ The styles are a unique intermingling of the Moyen Age and of the Eighteenth Century Modes. So wide is their scope that every woman will find here a model suited to her particular figure. In tailoring they are superb, representing the highest type of the tailor's art. Never have our Suits better illustrated our supremacy in the stylish garments for women than in this Fall showing for 1909. : : : : :

Exciting Romance Of Hero Of Harvard And A Society Belle Ends In Divorce

Tom Graydon, Star Full Back of Football Squad, Married Dashing Beryl Whitney After Sensational Elopement — Wife Asked for Freedom on Ground of Neglect and Dissipation.

GRAYDON PROVED FAILURE

New York, Sept. 21.—Who would have guessed only six short years ago that the exciting romance of Tom Graydon, the football hero of Harvard, and the dashing Beryl Whitney, of San Francisco, would end in a setting so completely commonplace, so utterly drab, as it did in the divorce court.

If ever there was a real romance in modern American life patterned to a "T" after the good old-fashioned novels that our grandmothers used to love here it was furnished to us with all the accompaniments of unrelenting parents, stern duennas, a rich and beautiful young heiress immured in a boarding school, a hero, handsome like Apollo and muscular like Hercules the ladder improvised from the young lady's bedclothes, the slide down from her chamber window into the strong arms of her lover waiting underneath, the elopement and quick race through three States to tie the knot, the secret wedding and, finally, the parental forgiveness.

Not an element of the picturesque and the uncommon was wanting in the setting of this stormy love story of young Graydon and Beryl Whitney.

And to-day not even a ghost of it all remains, not even a shadow.

Not long ago in the Superior Court in California the girl for whom Tom Graydon, the football fullback rushed the barred walls of the Misses Ely's School for Young Ladies in New York and actually stole her and ran away with her, asked that she might be separated from him forever on account of idleness, dissipation and neglect.

Gowned in a modish walking suit of gray and wearing a hat of gray tones that accorded well with her dark hair, Mrs. Tom Graydon, who created such a furor by her sensational runaway with Harvard's hero, told in court how the glitter of the attachment had become entirely disillusioned in her husband.

Her testimony was very brief, very energetic. As she was leaving the stand the judge turned to her and asked, "Do you want any alimony?"

"Oh, no, indeed;" she answered languidly. "I do not care for any at all."

After the young elopers had finally been forgiven they had settled down in Cincinnati, Tom's old home, while Tom himself, he was so much in love, buckled down to be a cobbler. He wanted to make as successful a career in work as he had made as Harvard's fullback while at play, and he selected the shoe business as his means of livelihood. He would begin at the very bottom and work up to the very top. And Beryl's very rich father, T. Parker Whitney, learning of this spurt, sent on $25,000 for the uses of their first year as an incentive.

But, however brilliant and redoubtable as a fullback and a lover, young Graydon may have been, as a business success and husband he turned out a failure.

NEGLECTED HIS WIFE.

In fact, it is said that the glamour and public adulation while he was a college god had spoiled him; that he couldn't get himself to look on life as a serious proposition, and that he soon began to miss the plaudits and flattery he had become so used to, and gradually to neglect the pursuit of dollars for his own personal amusement. In pursuing this primrose path of pleasure he next began to neglect his wife and at last to be utterly unequal to provide her with the nice ordinary comforts of life, even many of its necessities, while she herself from her abbyhood had been used to having her every whim of luxury gratified, every wish of hers satisfied by a draft from her father's copious bank account.

Finally Papa-in-Law Whitney got disgusted. He never quite approved of Tom Graydon anyway. Being a man of great energy himself he had no use for a drone of a son-in-law. Graydon's indolence and lotus-eating grew upon him and listlessly he saw his wife's affection and respect for him slowly dwindling. And the pity of it is that he atched this dissolution it is that he watched this dissolution apathy.

Then a strange thing happened. No more money came from Papa-in-Law Whitney, Tom Graydon had no wherewithal to meet this hidden emptiness in the cupboard. And Beryl's pin money at hand was woefully inadequate to the situation. There was nothing now to do but look things in the face squarely. And they looked disheartening. Matters with the Grawdons were out at the heels. The cobbler's art, so far at any rate, had not proved self-sustaining. Beryl's funds were low. And papa-in-law refused to hand over another penny to the menage. His daughter could come back home if she wished. And that's just what it all came to.

Cupid was starved to death.

It was a year ago that Mrs. Graydon went back to the coast, ostensibly to visit her people. She never returned to the big blonde hero of her schoolday dreams. For it is not reported that Tom Graydon has stuck to his last..

Congregating Of Men On The Streets And Policeman's Duty

Dealt With in Following Letter—Writer Considers Police Should be More Active in This Regard —Disgusted With Conditions as They Exist.

ASKS FOR A CHANGE

Peterborough, Sept. 21.

To the Editor:—

Dear Sir,—I wish to enter a protest, as vigorous as it is possible, to do so, against the wanton administration of the police force of this city. I have from time to time during the past few months, especially on Sunday evening the 19th instant. At taking a walk, accompanied by a lady friend, on some of our principal thoroughfares and the state of affairs that presents itself to the pedestrian is, to say the least, shocking.

Let me describe as briefly as possible what George St. looked like on Sunday eevning the 19th instant. At the corner of Charlotte and George—as it constantly is—were to be seen thirty-five young men actual count, standing in double file, one file with their backs to the building, the other on the outer edge of the sidewalk. Proceeding north and immediately in front of the City Hotel the exact same conditions were found. Continuing north to Hunter St. in every store door entrance were to be seen from three to eight loungers. At the intersection of George and Hunter—the north-east corner—a crowd had taken complete possession of the whole sidewalk, and were holding a post mortem examination over the remains of a plate glass sign which had been wrenched from off the wall of the building and smashed to pieces, and it was with no small difficulty that a passage was effected through the rabbling crowd. The return journey down George St. presented the self same appearance.

Now, Mr. Editor, I would ask the Chief of Police of this city if this state of affairs should be allowed to continue to exist, for let me say that the conditions as stated above have been in evidence throughout the whole summer. If the pedestrian was allowed to go on his or her way unmolested it would not be so bad, but this seems to be out of the question where groups of young men are to be found together. This applies particularly to the young lady who might be without an escort, for I have time and again seen them insulted. I now come to the question, when is a policeman supposed to be on duty? for this is the pivotal point of the whole situation. During the numerous strolls which I have taken this summer never but once did a "cop" put in an appearance on George St. between the hours of seven and eight o'clock, and here is where I maintain that the Chief is lax in his duty. I have spoken to him in the police station on three different occasions about this matter but the deaf ear has been turned to my pleadings.

In conclusion I submit that the taxpayers of this city are paying good big salaries to our force, and are not receiving anything like the protection that the situation demands. Furthermore, if the existing state of affairs is not remedied at once I shall bring the whole matter before the proper authorities,—Yours truly,

CITIZEN.

New Ladies' College To Be Opened In Peterborough

A Ladies' College is to be opened in Peterborough and will be run in affiliation with the Peterborough Business College and will be under the business management of Messrs. Spotton and McKone. These gentlemen consider that there is a splendid opening for such an institution here and their enterprise is bound to meet with success.

All the subjects taken up at a Ladies' College will be taught. A competent lady Principal, who is an university graduate has been secured. She is a woman of wide experience and strong personality. She will teach English, French and German. Thorough courses in the above subjects, mathematics and penmanship, and art and physical culture will be given. The quarters recently occupied by the Peterborough Club will likely be used as the college. It is the intention to open its first season as soon as the rooms are in readiness.

CITY SHOULD OWN EXHIBITION GROUNDS IS OPINION OF MR. J. J. TURNER, SR.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear,—I was very pleased to read the remarks in your paper on Monday of Mr. James Peat of Petrolea, that Peterborough should own her own Exhibition grounds. I believe so too and have always been of the same opinion. I hope that the matter will be brought before the people again and voted upon next January to buy our present Exhibition Grounds. If the City owned the grounds, then there would be some encouragement to go ahead and put up suitable buildings, and a first class grand stand. I feel sure that we could run our Exhibition for one week and the merchants and the public know what that would mean to our city. It would be the means of bringing a great many people to our beautiful city and they would certainly leave a good many dollars. We all know what the Exhibition at Toronto means to that city generally, Well, our Exhibition in Peterboro would mean the same in proportion. This year's Peterboro Exhibition has been the best of all in every way, and I feel sure that the people have got confidence now that the President and Directors are doing their best to make our Exhibition the very best by providing good honest races and good clean attractions and getting the farmers and others to make their exhibits, and giving in return, good large prizes as an inducement to get the very best. I feel sure that everyone who visited the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition this year went away pleased and satisfied and I feel sure that if the city will buy our present Exhibition Grounds, they will never have any cause to regret it. These grounds are the finest in this part of the country with one of the very best half mile tracks all made. The stables are on the grounds and the grounds are all fenced, and with a few hundred dollars spent on the building and grand stand, can be greatly improved, and it only requires the united efforts of the manufacturers, the merchants, the farmers, and the public generally to help make the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition one of the best in the Dominion.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I remain,

Respectfully yours,

J. J. Turner, Sr.

FIRST GAME IN THE JUNIOR RUGBY LEAGUE ON SATURDAY

The first games in the Junior City Rughy League will be played on Saturday afternoon when the Rough Riders will meet the T. A. S. and the Collegiate Institute clash with the Y. M. C. A. The teams are practising faithfully for the opening and the season of 1909 should be ushered in with some good Rugby. There are many comers in the ranks of the juniors and last season's showing indicates that the games are well worth seeing. A number of good men were uncovered who should be stars this season and the games should be all the more interesting on this account. This season the games will likely be played at Riverside Park and there should be a big crowd out for the opener.

ATHLETICS TAKE THREE OUT OF FOUR FROM THE TIGERS

Philadelphia, Sept. 21.—Philadelphia defeated Detroit 4 to 3 to-day in the final game of the series, making three victories for the former to one for Detroit. It was the fourteenth victory for Philadelphia in the twenty-two games played with Detroit this season.

Barry of Philadelphia was accidentaly spiked on the leg between the knee and ankle by Cobb of Detroit, who attempted to slide to second. Barry had four stiches put in the wound and was then taken to his home. The club's physician declared that Barry probably will be out of the game the rest of the season.

The Philadelphia players bunched safe drives with battery misplays by Detroit, while the visiting players also made the majority of their hits count. An error by McGinnis, who succeeded Barry at shortstop, gave Detroit a chance for a rally and three of their safe hits were made in the sixth inning after the side should have been retired, and scut two runs over the plate. Delehanty was unable to play to-day and O'Leary did splendid work at second base for Detroit. The total attendance for the four games of the present series was 117,208. Score:

Philadelphia	2	0	2
Detroit	3	6	1

Batteries—Plank and Livingstone; Summers and Stanage. Umpires:—Perrine and O'Loughlin.

TORONTOS KILL NEWARK'S CHAMPIONSHIP CHANCES

Newark, N.J., Sept. 21., (Special)—Toronto put the kibosh entirely on Newark's pennant chances to-day by taking another fall out of the Tigers, the score being 3 to 2. As Rochester again exterminated the Skeeters it may safely be said that the firm of McGinnity and Company has met its Waterloo.

There's no use crying over the spilt pennant chances. Newark was simply beaten and there is little consolation in the fact that the Leafs scored the winning run on an error by Zimmerman, who wore a Toronto uniform once upon a time. Owned McGinnity refused to be interviewed after the game on advice of counsel.

For a while it appeared that Newark would get away with the game. The Tigers scored first in the opening inning. Louden was nearly knocked out of the league by a pitched ball from Rudolph. A referee could have counted ten before Bill was able to remember his name and address. After a long delay Louden took first-base, then dashed all the way home on a two-bagger by Jack Kelly. The latter came to grief in trying to stretch the hit into a triple. A single by Louden and a double by Schafly netted Newark another run in the third.

All was peaches and cream for the Tigers until the fifth, when the Leafs tied the score by putting two runs over. Mullen started the trouble with a hit through short, Lee singled, and both runners moved up on Vandegrift's sacrifice. Mullen scored while Rudolph was being retired, and Lee dented the pan on Manager Kelly's drive to left.

The "blow that killed father" was struck in the sixth inning. Grimshaw biffed a safety to centre, and travelled to third on Mahling's sacrifice and Mullen's infield out. Zimmerman then fumbled Lee's easy grounder, letting Grimshaw score the winning run. That was all and enough.

HARRY BURRIDGE BACK IN CITY

After a Successful Season With the Edmonton Professional Team.

Harry Burridge, catcher for the Peterborough Midland League team, two years ago, who left here in May to join the Edmonton team of the North-western League, arrived home on Sunday after finishing the season in the West and will remain here for the winter. He reports a very successful season in the Western League, although Edmonton finished in the cellar position. The long jumps interfered somewhat with the financing, but the League proved a success nevertheless. Harry had the misfortune of having his arm badly hurt, through his spikes catching in a base, and has just returned from Youngstown, O., where Bonesetter Reese has attended to his injuries. His arm will come round all right. Jerry Edmunds with Peterborough last year, has reached Toronto, and will be here in a few days. He, like Burridge, has come to look upon Peterborough as his home, and will come here for the winter.

ROLLER HOCKEY TEAM

A roller hockey team has been formed in connection with the Brock St. Roller Rink, and the following officers have been elected:

President—J. Meharry.

Secretary-Treasurer — Jack. Seymour.

Manager—Prof. Genno.

Executive Committee — Harvey Staunton, Al Spenceley, F. D. Craig, Prof. Genno and the captain.

The captain is to be selected after the first game.

W. Trotter will be trainer of the team and the first practice will be held to-night between 6.30 and 7.30 o'clock.

A meeting of the Junior Rugby club of St. Peter's T. A. S. is called for this evening at eight o'clock. All players are asked to be present.

Returned to Peterborough.

Those of our citizens who are interested in and amused by good moving pictures, will be pleased to learn that Mr. Milton Bartlemen, one of the most experienced operators and electricians in all Canada, has returned to the city, and will hereafter reside in Peterborough.

Mr. Bartlemen is the gentleman who installed the complicated and perfect electric system at the Crystal, Peterborough's leading place for cheap, clean amusement. He has been installing and operating moving picture places in Nova Scotia during the past few months. Mr. Edwards, proprietor of the Crystal, has been fortunate enough to secure the permanent services of this gentleman for the Crystal, so that his patrons may now be sure that the pictures, as well as the service there will hereafter be the very best possible. To-night the pictures are of the highest order including the latest Biograph entitled "The Cardinal's Conspiracy," an historical romance, "The Stampede," an exciting cowboy story, and "Spring Has Come." Don't fail to see these pictures presented by Mr. Bartlemen.

Why continue to suffer when help is so freely offered. Don't wait any longer—get this free bottle of Ponso and get started on the upward pathway leading to genuine health and happiness.

Why Ponso is So Good

It is different from any medicine you ever used. It is a new discovery that acts on a new principle. It is the latest achievement in medical science.

Medical authorities have proven that nearly all the diseases—particularly the more common ones—those that the most people suffer from are germ diseases. That is, they start with a poisonous germ. These germs are taken into the system from the air you breathe, the water you drink, the food you eat. They are of a vegetable character and quickly decompose, thus developing into some dangerous disease or other.

It is easily understood, then, that a remedy which will promptly destroy these germs (which multiply by the thousands in a very short time) is sure to be more successful in restoring health than remedies which do not have this important feature.

Ponso Kills Germs

Ponso is a tonic-germicide. That means as a germicide it kills—destroys the germs and its tonic qualities start a reconstruction of the wornout tissues. It begins to build you up at the same time it begins to destroy the cause of your trouble. That's the secret of its great success. It goes to the root of the trouble—removes the cause and in addition gives you strength to quickly throw off the disorder.

Ponso is Different

It derives it virtues from oxide gases. It kills any form of disease germs it comes in contact with that are of vegetable origin. Yet, to the body it is perfectly harmless. There's where it differs from common germicides. They are poison when taken internally.

Ponso is also exhilarating. You can feel its vitalizing, purifying influence in a very short time. It gives you new life, new energy, vigor and vitality. Puts elasticity into your step—makes you full of "go" and makes life worth living.

Now, all of this is at your command. All of this is yours and the proof of it is free for merely signing and mailing the coupon below.

Will you do it today or will you continue to drag yourself through—waiting for disease to conquer, or will you conquer the disease with the aid of Ponso?

It is for you to say.

Fill Out Coupon Now

If you have any of the disorders mentioned in the left-hand corner of this advertisement, or if you are all run-down, weak, debilitated—blood out of order—get this free bottle and be convinced that in Ponso there is hope and health.

Millions of bottles have been used and its splendid health-restoring qualities are now offered to you in a way you should not let pass. Now, don't put this off. Here's health, strength and happiness awaiting you. Why suffer longer when it costs nothing to find out how you can quickly get well.

PREPARES BIG ARMY

At Annual Cost of Twelve and a Half Million Dollars Australia Will Provide a Force of 250,000 With a Second Line of 115,000 Expeditionary Force For Emergency Call—Will Exchange Troops.

Melbourne, Australia, Sept. 22.—(C.A.P.)—Minister of Defence Cook moved the second reading of the defence bill in the House of Representatives, giving effect to the decisions of the Imperial Defence Conference.

He said that in addition to the announced naval proposals, the scheme would eventually give a force of 250,000 well-trained soldiers, with a second line of 115,000. A compact expeditionary force would be provided for overseas service. The estimated total annual cost will be $12,500,000. All the military and naval forces will be interchangeable with the forces of other states of the Empire. Compulsory service at first will be limited to the closely-populated areas.

O.J.C.'s RACES.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—The sun continues to shine on the Ontario Jockey Club's autumn efforts at Woodbine Park. Tuesday for the third successive day weather conditions were perfect, and favorites had an innings. There were seven races with the Michaelmas handicap, $1,500, for two-year-olds at 6 furlongs as the feature, and the impressive win by Amelia Jenks, carrying 115 pounds, shows that Mrs. Livingstone has a high-class filly.

First race—For maiden three-year-olds and up, 6 furlongs, purse $600—Gold Dust, 1; Imitate, 2; Elgin, 3. Time, 1.14 4-5.

Second race—Michaelmas Handicap, 6 furlongs, purse $1,500, for two-year-olds—Amelia Jenks, 1; Detroit, 2; Bob Co, 3. Time, 1.14 4-5.

Third race—Selling, 1 1-8 miles, purse $500, for three-year-olds and up—Golconda, 1; Ontario, 2; Monsignor, 3. Time, 1.56 3-5.

Fourth race—One mile, purse $500, for mares, all ages—Jeanette M., 1; Chilla, 2; Tasley, 3. Time, 1.43.

Fifth race—Coventry Steeplechase, handicap, about 2 1-2 miles, purse $800, for four-year-olds and upward—Steve Lane, 1; Byzantine, 2; Sir Wooster, 3. Time, 5.03.

Sixth race—Purse, $600, 1 1-16 miles, for three-year-olds and up—Cave Adsum, 1; Jack Parker, 2; Green Seul, 3. Time, 1.48 3-5.

Seventh race—Six furlongs, purse $500, for maiden three-year-olds and up—Soil, 1; Charivari, 2; Nick o' Time, 3. Time, 1.15 4-5.

Husband Placed Bomb.

Toronto, Sept. 22.—The bomb episode which ended so disastrously for Sam Lee's restaurant at 209 York street last week, was pretty well cleaned up in the Police Court yesterday, when Herbert Wilkinson and Trooper George Woodward were released, and William Smith, husband of one of the waitresses in the eating house, was committed for trial to the sessions. This was done on Smith's confirmation of the story of the other two men that Woodward had given the bombs to Smith earlier in the evening, and that Smith had told them later that he had set off one in the restaurant and thrown the other into the hallway.

Galt May Buy Plant.

Galt, Ont., Sept. 22.—Galt Council is considering a proposition to buy the local electric lighting plant, referring the matter of an estimate of its value to F. B. Mervill, C.E. The price asked by the Galt Gas, Light Co. is $67,000. This does not include the waterpower at the dam, an auxiliary property earning $1,474 a year in rentals. The town could make good use of this power in connection with its municipal-owned waterworks.

The council have decided to enlarge the market and to experiment with oil on the roadways.

Fined For Selling Cocaine.

Montreal, Sept. 2.—James Brennan, who was arrested on a charge of selling cocaine on St. Catharine street to a young girl, was found guilty by Judge Leet and fined $5 or ten days.

Canadian Immigration.

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—The total immigration into Canada for July was 16,291, as compared with 11,330 for the same month of last year, 8,493 of these people arrived at ocean ports, and 7,348 from the United States. Those from the United States increased 64 per cent. and there was a 31 per cent. increase at ocean ports.

COOK WILL BRING WITNESSES TO PROVE HE WAS AT THE POLE

Declines to Speak of Peary Until the Latter Returns to New York and Can Defend Himself—Ten Dollars for His Autograph—Proceeds for Future Explorations.

New York, Sept. 22.—"I have come from the Pole. I have brought my story and my data with me. I have not come home to enter into arguments with one man or with fifty men, but I am here to present a clear record of a piece of work over which I have a right to display a certain amount of pride.

"I am perfectly willing to abide by the final verdict on this record of competent judges. That must be the last word and that alone can satisfy me and the public.

"Furthermore, not only will my report be before you in black and white, but I will also bring to America human witnesses to prove that I have been to the Pole."

Such is the sum and substance of the first message Dr. Frederick A. Cook brought home in person to America yesterday.

At five o'clock in the morning, the explorer was on deck. There was an anxious wait at quarantine while the tugs bobbed nervously about, the newspapermen on board them shouting broken queries through megaphones at the black sides of the Oscar II., high above them. Dr. Cook lowered a signed statement in a pail to The Associated Press and resumed his walk to and fro, to and fro, up and down the landward rail.

The tug bearing Mrs. Cook and her two daughters came alongside, and, while the heavy swell running ground her fender against the plates of her big sister, Dr. Cook clambored nimbly down the Jacob's ladder, and with no concern for the cameras trained on him, made a rush for his wife. For the moment, he even missed the children, who stood a few feet away, until his wife silently led him to them. Then, as he lifted his youngest daughter to his shoulder, the silent, watching crowd that lined the rails of the Oscar II. broke into a storm of cheers.

As he stepped ashore it was noticeable that no representative of the nation, the state, or the city was there to greet him. Bird S. Coler, president of the Borough of Brooklyn, had welcomed him on the Grand Republique for that borough, but the city of New York sent no official representative. But sincere and enthusiastic to the point of tumultuousness, his welcome may be best described as a neighborly affair, devoid of official significance.

Brooklyn's reception of Dr. Cook had all the element of a riot except violence. From the moment the Grand Republique moored up to her landing and the explorer, flanked by militiamen and police, fought his way into an automobile, until he left the Bushwyck Club last night for the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, the surging crowds taxed the capacity of the police and frequently got out of order.

Among the five miles or avenues through which the explorer passed the mounted police were continually fighting a way for Dr. Cook's automobile, when they were not stemming the massed thousands who seemed to have only one object—to break loose and embrace Dr. Cook.

After an hour's rest, during which Mr. and Mrs. Cook were entertained at luncheon by a women's committee, the club house doors were thrown open and a public reception began.

Outside the police did the best they could to mould the crush of people into a single file. Those who were not squeezed out of line got into the front door of the club, filed through the billiard room, where Dr. Cook stood, a wreath of flowers about his neck, and passed out the back door. It had been decided that there should be no handshaking. Dr. Cook bowed pleasantly to everyone, occassionally breaking through and grasping the hand of some old friend.

The crowd disposed of, there remained the newspaper men. John R. Bradley, Dr. Cook's backer, who had taken affairs in hand, said Dr. Cook would grant the reporters just three minutes.

"What reply have you to make to Commander Peary's assertion that you did not reach the Pole?" was the first question.

"None whatever. I will have nothing to say about Commander Peary in any form until he returns to New York and is here to defend himself." Cook's answer was delivered in a decisive tone.

"I intend to stay in New York for the present. There I will complete my work. I shall not make any arrangements for lectures, and I have not yet decided whether I shall deliver any before my work is done.

"As to further explorations, much will depend on Mrs. Cook. I shall, however, probably not go again to the North Pole, although I may proceed on a northern expediiton for the exploration of the new land we saw on our journey. That is a task which must be carried out."

Dr. Cook has decided that owing to the overwhelming demand for autographs, he will make a uniform charge of $10 each, the proceeds to be divided equally between Explorers and the Arctic Clubs, to be utilized for future explorations.

Cook Thanks Canada.

Ottawa, Sept. 22.—The following message has been received at Government House:

"Steamship Oscar II., via Cape Race, Sept. 17, 1909. Governor-General of Canada, Ottawa: I wish to thank you for sending ship Arctic, 1908, Captain Bernier, with supplies. Kindly express to the people of Canada my heartfelt appreciation for their liberal help. (Signed) Dr. Cook."

CATHOLIC HIERARCHY EXPRESS THEIR LOYALTY TO THE CROWN

Quebec, Sept. 22.—Yesterday's proceedings of the plenary council opened with a synodical mass in the Basilica, at which the celebrant was Mgr. Meunier, administrator of the diocese of London, Ont., which see is at present vacant. At 9 o'clock the fathers of the council went into secret conclave, and at noon left for Spencer Wood, where they were entertained at luncheon by his honor the Lieutenant-Governor, together with Sir George Garneau, mayor; Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier, and members of his Cabinet, and Chief Justice Sir Francis Langelier.

A joint toast to the King and the Pope was proposed by the Lieutenant-Governor, who, in pointing out that it was the custom to propose only the royal toast, said: "But owing to the solemnity—yes, the solemnity—of the occasion, I feel that we may depart from custom. His Excellency the Apostolic Delegate, in his reply to the address of the citizens of Quebec the other day declared that the union of the religious and civil authority contributed not only to the salvation of souls, but also to the prosperity of the country.

The orchestra played the national and papal anthems, and Mgr. Sbarretti, apostolic delegate, replied, endorsing the remarks of Sir Alphonse Pelletier. He was happy to say that the Province of Quebec gave to the whole world an evident proof that a cordial understanding between the church and the state was advantageous to the temporal as well as the spiritual welfare of nations.

"I am pressed to declare again, said Mgr. Sbarretti, "that the church has always taught this perfect submission to the civil authority. I wish to give new proof in the message of loyal fidelity that the archbishops and bishops of the Dominion assembled in plenary council, have addressed to His Majesty King Edward VII., and in the reply that His Majesty has deigned to send us himself."

His Excellency then read the following message to the King and his Majesty's reply:

"To His Majesty King Edward VII., London:

"The apostolic delegate and the Catholic archbishops and bishops of Canada, in plenary council assembled in the city of Quebec, desire to convey to Your Majesty the expression of their own loyalty and that of all your other Catholic subjects in the Dominion, as well as their grateful appreciation of the religious and civil liberty which they enjoy under your gracious rule, all pray that your reign may be long and peaceful.

(Signed) "Monsiegneur Sbarretti, "Apostolic Delegate."

The following was the reply received from His Majesty direct:

"Thank your excellency and the archbishops and bishops associated with you for your telegrams of loyalty, which is in all the best traditions of the church of which you are the hierarchy and of the Dominion, where you are assembled. It is my constant desire that religious and civil liberty should always be enjoyed by my subjects in all parts of the Empire."

Finds New Tribe Of Eskimos

Live on a Point of Prince Albert Land—Are Tall and Like North American Indians.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 22.—On board the whaler Jeannette, which arrived in this port, heavily laden with furs, blubber and tales of the frozen north, was V. J. Bower, an Arctic explorer, who reports the discovery of a new tribe of people never before seen by the eyes of a white man.

The new tribe of Eskimos, according to Bower, live on a point of Prince Albert Land. They call themselves Nunanemotics, are tall, and look like the North American Indians. The explorer was cordially welcomed by the strange tribesmen, and he procured many rich furs from them. On this trip Bower lost one eye through the bite of a spider.

THE Princess Virginia

By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON,

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor," "Rosemary in Search of a Father," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY McCLURE, PHILLIPS & CO.

Presently the red volume was discovered and laid on the desk before the chancellor, who turned the leaves over until he found the page desired. As his eye fell upon the long line of Mowbrays his face changed, and the bristling brows came together in a grizzled line. Apparently the women were not adventuresses, at least in the ordinary acceptation of the term.

There they were. His square tipped finger pressed down upon the printed names with a dig that might have signified his disposition toward their representatives.

"The girl's mother is the widow of Reginald, sixth Baron Mowbray," the old man muttered half aloud; "son, Reginald Edward, fifteen years of age daughter, Helen Agusta, twenty-eight. Aha! She's no chicken, this young lady. She ought to be a woman of the world."

"Twenty-eight!" replied Egon. "I'll eat my hat if she's twenty-eight."

"Doesn't she look it by daylight?"

"Not an hour over nineteen; might be younger. Jove, I was never so surprised to learn a woman's age! By the bye, I heard her telling Baron von Lyndal last night, apropos of our great Rhaetian victory, that she was eleven years old on the day it took place. That would make her about twenty now. When she spoke I remember she gave a look at her mother across the room as though she were frightened. I suppose she was hoping there was no copy of this big red book at Lyndalberg."

"That thought might have been in her mind," assented the chancellor, "or else she"— He left his sentence unfinished and sat with unseeing eyes fixed in an owlish stare on the open page of Burke.

"I should like to know if you really meant what you said about my marriage a little while ago"—Egon ventured to attract his brother's attention —"because if you did"—

"If I did"—

"I might try very hard to please you in my choice of a wife."

"Be a little more explicit. You mean you would try to prove to Miss Mowbray that a captain of cavalry in the hand is worth an emperor in the bush —a bramble bush at that, eh?"

"Yes; I would do my best. And, as you say, I'm not without advantages."

"You are not. I was on the point of suggesting that you made the most of them in Miss Mowbray's eyes until you brought me this red book."

The large forefinger tapped the page of Mowbrays, while two lines which might have meant amusement or a sneer scored themselves on either side of the chancellor's mouth.

"And now you've changed your mind?" There was disappointment in Egon's voice.

"I don't say that. I say only wait. Make yourself as agreeable to the lady as you like. But don't pledge yourself, and don't count upon my promise or my money until you hear again. By that time—well, we shall see what we shall see. Keep your hand in. But wait—wait."

"How long am I to wait? If the thing's to be done at all it must be done soon, for meanwhile the emperor makes all the running."

The chancellor looked up again from the red book, his fist still covering the Mowbrays as if they were to be extinguished. "You are to wait," he said, "until I've had answers to a couple of telegrams I shall send tonight."

CHAPTER TEN.

THE first and second dressing gongs had sounded at Schloss Lyndalberg on the evening of the day after Egon von Breitstein's visit to his brother, and the grand duchess was beginning to wonder uneasily what kept her daughter when ringed fingers tapped on the panel of the door.

"Come in!" she answered, and Virginia appeared, still in the white tennis dress she had worn that afternoon. She stood for an instant without speaking, her face so radiantly beautiful that her mother thought it seemed illumined from a light within.

It had been on the lips of the grand duchess to scold the girl for her tardiness, since to be late was an unpardonable offense with an imperial majesty in the house. But in that radiance the words died.

"Virginia, what is it? You look—I scarcely know how you look. But you make me feel that something has happened."

The princess came slowly across the room, smiling softly, with an air of one who walks in sleep. Hardly conscious of what she did, she sank down in a big chair and sat resting her elbows on her knees, her chin nestling between her two palms, like a pink white rose in its calyx.

"You may go, Ernestine," said the grand duchess to her maid. "I'll ring when I want you again."

The elaborate process of waving and dressing her still abundant hair had fortunately come to a successful end, and Ernestine had just caused a diamond star to rise above her forehead. She was in a robe de chambre, and the rest of her toilet could wait till curiosity was satisfied.

But Virginia still sat dreaming, her happy eyes far away. The grand duchess had to speak twice before the girl heard and started a little. "My daughter, have you anything to tell me?"

The princess roused herself. "Nothing, mother, really, except that I'm the happiest girl on earth."

"Why, what has he said?"

"Not one word that any one mightn't have listened to. But I know. He does care. And I think he will say something before we part."

"There's only one more day of his visit here after tonight."

"One whole long, beautiful day together."

"But, after all, dearest," argued her mother, "what do you expect? If in truth you were only Miss Mowbray, marriage between you and the emperor would be out of the question. You've never gone into the subject of your feelings about this quite thoroughly with me, and I do wish I knew precisely what you hope for from him, what you will consider the—the keystone of the situation."

"Only for him to say that he loves me," Virginia confessed. "If I'm right, if I've brought something new into his life, something which has shown him that his heart's as important as his head, then there will come a moment when he can keep silence no longer, when he'll be forced to say, 'I love you, dear, and because we can't belong to each other day is turned into night for me.' Then when that moment comes the tide of my fortune will be at its flood. I shall tell him that I love him too, and I shall tell him all the truth."

"You'll tell him who we really are?"

"Yes, and why I've been masquerading—that it was because, ever since I was a little girl, he'd been the one man in the world for me; because, when our marriage was suggested through official channels, I made up my mind that I must win him first through love or live single all my days."

"What if he should be vexed at the deception and refuse to forgive you? You know, darling, we shall be in a rather curious position when everything comes out, as we have made all our friends here under the name of Mowbray. Of course the excuse for what we did is that our real position is a hundred times higher than the one we assumed, and all those to whom we've been introduced would be delighted to know us in our own characters at the end. But Leopold is a man, not a romantic girl, as you are. He has always had a reputation for pride and austerity, for being just before he would let himself be generous, and it may be that to one of his nature a wild whim like yours"—

"You think of him as he was before we met, not as he is now, if you fancy he could be hard with a woman he really loved," said Virginia eagerly. "He'll forgive me, dear. I've no fear of him any more. Tonight I've no fear of anything. He loves me—and—I'm empress of the world."

"Many women would be satisfied with Rhaetia," was the practical response which jumped into the mind of the grand duchess, but she would throw no more cold water upon the rose flame of her daughter's exaltation. She kissed the girl on the forehead, breathing a few words of motherly sympathy, but when the princess had flown off to her own room to dress she shook her diamond starred head doubtfully.

Virginia's plan sounded poetical and as easy to carry out as to turn a kaleidoscope and form a charming new combination of color, or so it had seemed while the young voice pleaded, but when the happy face and radiant eyes no longer illumined the path the way ahead seemed dark.

To be sure, the princess had so far walked triumphantly along the high road to success, but it was not always a good beginning which led to a good end, and the grand duchess felt as she rang for Ernestine that her nerves would be strained to the breaking point until matters were definitely settled for better or for worse.

Virginia had never been lovelier than she was that night at dinner, and Egon von Breitstein's admiration for her beauty had in it a fascinating new ingredient. Until yesterday he had said to himself, "If she be not fair to me, what care I how fair she be?" But now there was a vague idea that she might, after all, be for him, and he took enormous pleasure in the thought that he was falling in love with a girl who had captured the emperor's heart.

Egon glanced very often at Leopold, contrasting his sovereign's appearance unfavorably with his own. The emperor was thin and dark, with a grave cast of feature, while Egon's face kept the color and youthfulness of the early twenties. He was older than Leopold, but he looked a boy. Alma-Tadema would have wreathed him with vine leaves, draped him with tiger skins and set him down on a marble bench against a burning sapphire sky, where he would have appeared more suitably clad than in the stiff blue and silver uniform of a crack Rhaetian regiment.

Leopold, on the contrary, would never be painted except as a soldier, and it seemed to Egon that no normal girl could help thinking him a far handsomer fellow than the emperor. For the moment, of course, Miss Mowbray did not notice him because his imperial majesty loomed large in the foreground of her imagination, but the chancellor had evidently a plan in his head for removing that stately obstacle into the dim perspective.

Egon had not heard Miss Mowbray spoken of as an heiress. Therefore, even had there been no emperor in the way, he would not have worshiped at the shrine. But now behold the shrine, attractive before, newly and alluringly decked! Egon wondered much over his half brother's apparently impulsive offer and the contradictory command, which had a little later enjoined waiting.

He was delighted, however, that he had not been forbidden to make himself agreeable, and his idea was as soon as dinner should be over to find a place at Miss Mowbray's side before any other man should have time to take it. But, unluckily for this plan, Baron von Lyndal detained him for a few moments with praise of a new remedy which might cure the chancellor's gout, and when he escaped from his host to look for Miss Mowbray in the white drawing room she was not there.

From the music room adjoining, however, came sounds which drew him toward the door. He knew Miss Mowbray's soft, coaxing touch on the piano. She was there "playing in a whisper," as he had heard her call it. Perhaps she was going to sing, as she had done once or twice before, and would need some one to turn the pages of her music. Egon thought that he would much like to be the some one and was in the act of parting the white velvet portieres that covered the doorway when his hostess smilingly beckoned him away.

"The emperor has just asked Miss Mowbray to teach him some old fashioned Scotch or English air (I'm afraid I don't quite know the difference) called 'Annie Laurie,'" the baroness explained. "He was charmed with it when she sang the other evening, and I've been assuring him that the song would exactly suit his voice. We mustn't disturb them while the lesson is going on. Tell me—I've hardly had a moment to ask you—how did you find the chancellor?"

Chained to a forced allegiance, Egon mechanically answered the questions of the baroness without making absurd mistakes, the while his ears burned to hear what was going on behind the white curtains.

Everybody knew of the music lesson now and chatted in tones of tactful monotony, never speaking too loudly to disturb the singers, never too cautiously, lest they should seem to listen. Once, and then again, the creamy mezzo soprano and the rich tenor that was almost a baritone sang conscientiously through the verses of "Annie Laurie" from beginning to end. Then a few desultory chords were struck on the piano, and at last there was silence behind the white curtains in the music room.

Were the two still there? To interrupt such a tete-a-tete seemed out of the question, but not to know what was happening Egon found too hard to bear, and the arrival of a telegram for Lady Mowbray came as opportunely as if Providence had had his special needs in mind.

Evidently it was not a pleasant tele-

DOCTOR ADVISED OPERATION

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Canifton, Ont.—"I had been a great sufferer for five years. One doctor told me it was ulcers of the uterus, and another told me it was a fibroid tumor. No one knows what I suffered. I would always be worse at certain periods, and never was regular, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. I was very ill in bed, and the doctor told me I would have to have an operation, and that I might die during the operation. I wrote to my sister about it and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Through personal experience I have found it the best medicine in the world for female troubles, for it has cured me, and I did not have to have the operation after all. The Compound also helped me while passing through Change of Life."—Mrs. Letitia Blair, Canifton, Ontario.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has proved to be the most successful remedy for curing the worst forms of female ills, including displacements, inflammation, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, and nervous prostration. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result has been worth millions to suffering women.

After contracts are awarded the successful tenderers must submit designs of all superstructures with stress sheets all to be in accordance with the Specifications of the Department of Railways and Canals of the Dominion Government, 1909. The class of load to be used is that designated "Heavy" in the said specifications.

Tenders will be received for one or more of the structures required.

Each tender must be signed and sealed by all the parties to the tender, and witnessed, and be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of the Dominion of Canada payable to the Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway, for a sum equal to five per cent. (5 p.c.) of the amount of the tender.

The right is reserved to reject any or all tenders.

By order,
P. E. RYAN,
Secretary.

The Commissioners of the Transcontinental Railway.

gram, for as she read it the Dresden china lady showed plainly that she was disconcerted. Her pretty face lost its color; her eyes dilated as if she had tasted a drop of belladonna on sugar. She patted her lips with her lace handkerchief and finally rose from her chair, looking dazed and distressed.

"Playing in a whisper."

"I've had rather bad news," she admitted to Baroness von Lyndal, who was all solicitude—"oh, nothing really serious, I trust, but still disquieting. It is from a dear friend. I think I had better go to my room and talk things over with Helen. Would you be kind enough to tell her when she comes in that she's to follow me there? Don't send for her till then; it's not necessary. But I shall want her by and by."

It was clear that Lady Mowbray did not wish her daughter to be disturbed. Still, Egon von Breitstein thought he might fairly let his anxiety run away with him. As the baroness accompanied her guest to the door he took it upon himself to search for Miss Mowbray—or now if the emperor should curse him for a spoil-sport he would have the best of excuses. Lady Mowbray was in need of her daughter.

He lifted the white curtains and peeped through a small antechamber into the music room beyond. It was empty, but one of the long windows leading into the rose garden was wide open.

The month of September was dying, and away in the Rhaetian mountains winter had begun. Yet in the lap of the low country summer lingered. The air was soft and sweet with the perfume of roses—roses living and roses dead in a potpourri of scattered petals on the grass. It was a garden for lovers and a night for lovers.

Egon went to the open window and looked out, but dared not let his feet take the direction of his eyes, though he was sure that somewhere in the garden Miss Mowbray and the emperor were to be found.

"They will come in again this way," he said to himself, "for they will want people to think they have never left the music room, and for that very reason they won't stop too long. They must have some regard for the conventions. If I wait"—

He did not finish the sentence in his mind. Nevertheless he examined the resources of the window niche with a critical eye.

There was a deep inclosure between the window frame and the long, straight curtains of olive green satin which matched the decoration of the music room. By drawing the curtains a few inches farther forward one could make a screen which would hide one from observation by any person in the room or outside in the garden. So Egon did draw the curtain, and, framed in his shelter like a saint in a niche, he stood peering into the silver night.

The moon was rising over the lake, and long, pale rays of level light were stealing up the paths like the fingers of a blind child that caress gropingly the features of a beloved face.

Egon could not see the whole garden or all the paths among the roses. But if the emperor and his companion came back by the way they had gone he would know presently whether they walked in the attitude of friends or lovers. It was so necessary for his plans to know this that he thought it worth while to exercise a little patience in waiting. Of course, if they were lovers, goodby to his hopes, and he would never have so good a chance as this to make sure.

All things in the garden that were not white were gray as a dove's wings. Even the shadows were not black, and the sky was gray, with the soft gray of velvet under a crust of diamonds which flashed as the spangles on a woman's fan flash when it trembles in her hand.

Starvation Treatment a Failure

The Sensible Cure for Indigestion is "Little Digesters"

Probably because the taking of food causes such intense discomfort, many dyspeptics shirk that by abstaining from this and that—practically starving themselves—they can cure the trouble.

Of course, where Indigestion is caused by sheer gluttony, cutting down the food would no doubt do good. But in most cases Indigestion is caused, not by overeating, but by lack of physical exercise, and consequent lack of vigor in the organs of digestion. Partial starvation still further impairs the bodily vigor, and makes the trouble worse.

The dyspeptic needs plenty of good, wholesome food. He can eat it, and DIGEST IT, TOO, if he takes a "Little Digester" after each meal. "Little Digesters" help the weakened stomach to do properly that which it cannot do alone—digest and assimilate the food needed to build up the system.

White moths, happily ignorant that summer would come no more for them, drifted out from the shadows like rose petals blown by the soft wind. On a trellis a crowding sisterhood of pale roses dropped their heads downward in memento mori. It was a silver night, a night of enchantment.

Leopold had meant to take Virginia out only to see the moon rise over the water, turning the great smooth sheet of jet into a silver shield, for there had been clouds or spurts of rain on other nights, and he had said to himself that never again perhaps would they two stand together under the white spell of the moon. He had meant to keep her for five minutes, or ten at the most, and then to bring her back, but they had walked down to the path which girdled the cliff above the lake. The moon touched her golden hair and her pure face like a benediction. He dared not look at her thus for long, and when there came a sudden quick rustling in the grass at their feet he bent down, glad of any change in the current of his thoughts.

Some tiny winged thing of the night sought a lodging in a bell shaped flower whose blue color the moon had drunk, and as Leopold stooped the same impulse made Virginia bend.

He stretched out his hand to gather the low growing branch of blossoms, which he would give the girl as a souvenir of this hour, and their fingers met. Lake and garden swam before the eyes of the princess as the emperor's hand closed over hers.

Her great moment had come, yet now that it was here, womanlike, she wished it away, not gone forever—oh, no—but waiting just round the corner of the future.

"The flowers are yours—I give them to you," she laughed, as if she fancied it was in eagerness to grasp the disputed spray that he had pressed her fingers.

"You are the one flower I want—flower of all the world," he answered in a choked voice, speaking words he had not meant to speak. But the ice barriers that held back the torrent of which he had told her had melted long ago and now had been swept away. Other barriers which he had built up in their place—his convictions, his duty as a man at the head of a nation—were gone too. "I love you," he stammered. "I love you far better than my life, which you saved. I've loved you ever since our first hour together on the mountain, but every day my love has grown a thousandfold until now it's greater and higher than any mountain. I can fight against myself no longer. I thought I was strong, but this love is stronger than I am. Say that you care for me—only say that."

"I do care," Virginia whispered. She had prayed for this, lived for this, and she was drowning in happiness. Yet she had pictured a different scene, a scene of storm and stress. She had heard in fancy broken words of sorrow and noble renunciation on his lips, and in anticipating his suffering she had felt the joy her revelation would give. "I care—so much, so much! How hard it will be to part!"

"If you care, then, we shall not be parted," said Leopold.

The princess looked up at him in wonder, holding back as he would have caught her in his arms. What could he mean? What plan was in his mind that, believing her to be Helen Mowbray, yet made it possible for him to reassure her so?

"I don't understand," she faltered. "You are the emperor, and I am no more than"—

"You are my wife if you love me."

In the shock of her ecstatic surprise she was helpless to resist him longer, and he held her close and passionately, his lips on her hair, her face crushed against his heart. She could hear it beating, feel it throb under her cheek. His wife? Then he loved her enough for that. Yet how was it possible for him to stand ready for her sake to override the laws of his own land?

"My darling—my wife!" he said again. "To think that you love me!"

"I have loved you from the first," the princess confessed, "but I was afraid you would feel, even if you cared, that we must say goodby. Now"— And in an instant the whole truth would have been out, but the word "goodby" stabbed him, and he could not let it pass.

"We shall not say goodby, not for an hour," he cried. "After this I could not lose you. There's nothing to prevent my being your husband, you my wife. Would to God you were of royal blood and you should be my empress—the fairest empress that poet or historian ever saw—but we're prisoners of fate, you and I. We must take the goods the gods provide. My goddess you will always be, but the empress of Rhaetia even my love isn't powerful enough to make you. If I am to you only half what you are to me you'll be satisfied with the empire of my heart."

Suddenly the warm blood of Virginia's veins grew chill. It was as if a wind had blown up from the dark depths of the lake to strike like ice into her soul. An instant more and he would have known that she was a princess of the blood, and through his whole life she could have gone on worshiping him because he had been ready to break down all barriers for her love before he guessed there need be none to break. Now her warm impulse of gratitude was frozen by the biting blast of disillusionment, but still there was hope left. It might be that she misunderstood him. She would not judge him yet.

"The empire of your heart!" she echoed. "If that were mine I should be richer than with all the treasures of the earth. If you were Leo, the chamois hunter, I would love you as I love you now, because in yourself you are the one man for me, and I'd go with you to the end of the world as your wife. But you're not the chamois hunter; you are the man I love, yet you are the emperor. Being the emperor, had you talked of a hopeless love and a promise not to forget, having nothing else to give me because of your high destiny and my humbler one, I could still have been happy. Yet you speak of more than that. You speak of something I can't understand. It seems to me that what a royal man offers the woman he loves should be all or nothing."

"I do offer you all," said Leopold, "all myself, my life, the heart and soul of me—all that's my own to give. The rest—belongs to Rhaetia."

"Then what do you mean by"—

"Don't you understand, my sweet, that I've asked you to be my wife? What can a man ask more of a woman?"

"Your wife, but not the empress. How can the two be apart?"

He tried to take her once more in his arms, but when he saw that she would not have it so he held his love in check and waited. He was sure that he would not need to wait long, for not only had he laid his love at her feet, but had pledged himself to a tremendous sacrifice on love's altar.

The step which in a moment of passion he had now resolved to take would create dissension among his people, alienate one who had been his second father, rouse England, America and Germany to anger because of the princess whose name rumor had already coupled with his and raise in every direction a storm of disapproval. When this girl whom he loved realized the immensity of the concession he was making because of his reverent love for her she would give her life to him now and forever.

Tenderly he took her hand and lifted it to his lips. Then when she did not draw it away, because he was to have his chance of explanation, he held it between both his own as he talked on.

"Dearest one," he said, "when I first knew I loved you—loved you as I didn't dream I could love a woman—for your sake and my own, I would have avoided meeting you too often. This I tell you frankly. I didn't see how in honor such a love could end except in despair for me and sorrow even for you if you should come to care. Had you and Lady Mowbray stayed on at the hotel in Kronburg I think I could have held to my resolve. But when Baroness von Lyndal suggested your coming here my heart leaped up. I said in my mind: 'At least I shall have the joy of seeing her every day for a time without doing anything to darken her future. Afterward, when she has gone out of my life, I shall have that radiance to remember. And so no harm will be done in the end, except that I shall have to pay by suffering.' Still I had no thought of the future without a parting. I felt that inevitable. And the suffering came hand in hand with the joy, for not a night here at Lyndalberg have I slept. If I had been weak I should have groaned aloud in the agony of renunciation.

"My rooms open on a lawn. More than once I've come out into the darkness when all the household was sleeping. Sometimes I have walked to this very spot where you and I stand now—heart to heart for the first time, my darling—asking myself whether there were any way out of labyrinth. It was not until I brought you here and saw you by my side, with the moon rays for a crown, that a flash of blinding light seemed to pierce the clouds. Suddenly I saw all things clearly, and, though there will be difficulties, I count them as overcome."

"Still you haven't answered my question," said Virginia in a low, strained voice.

BOXES AND BAGS FOR THE GIRL'S ROOM

How She May Dispose of Her Personal Belongings Where Closet Space Is Limited

A PAGE for MISSES

ONE of the problems which many girls have to contend with, especially when they are at boarding school, is how to secure enough closet room and other storage spaces for putting away their possessions so that they will be kept in good order and will at the same time not be too difficult to get at when needed.

In houses and apartments in large cities also there is frequently too little space in the bedroom which has been allotted to the girl of the family for her to find the disposal of her personal belongings an easy matter. The closets are small and there is no place for an additional wardrobe. In despair the girl who is to occupy the room sees her luggage unpacked. There seems absolutely no place for her dainty gowns where they will not be unmercifully crushed.

She regards her several hats, which before she had thought all too few, with a disapproving eye and almost resolves that she will give them all away and buy a comfortable folding Tam o' Shanter. Her boots and slippers are ranged along the wall in an obtrusive row. The accessories to her costuming—gloves, veils, collars and handkerchiefs—seem impossibly numerous. Usually at this stage the girl sits on the floor plunged in despair for a moment or two, then, if she be a sensible young person, she sets about inventing skilful methods of stowing things away.

There are two good fairies ready to come to her aid in this matter, and it is perfectly wonderful how they can help out. Their names are box and bag and their possibilities are endless. Girls who have tried it say that if necessary an entire bedroom can be furnished with boxes and bags with the exception of the bed and the mirror.

ONE of the first things to consider is a large box to go under the bed, in which dancing frocks and other best gowns may be kept. There is something untidy about thrusting ordinary boxes under the bed, but the daintiest girl will find a box made for the purpose admirable for fine gowns. This box may be nearly as long and as wide as the bed. It is of light wood fitted with castors, and has a lid which is cut down the middle and hinged at both sides, so that it opens in the middle, which is more convenient than at one side. The box may be stained to match the woodwork of the room or the floor, or it may be covered with enamel paint in a harmonious color. The lid should fit closely, so that the dust will not get in. The box is padded with cotton on the inside and lined with white cheesecloth, or it may be lined with flowered paper. It is best not to have it covered with chintz or denim on the outside, as this gathers dust.

In this box the gowns may be laid full length, with tissue paper between and several layers of tissue paper and perhaps a cheese cloth covering over the top. A padlock may be put on if desired. The use of several sachets in envelopes or bags is considered better for scenting the box than to have the lining scented, because then the sachet may more easily be kept fresh.

Any carpenter will make such a box at a moderate cost, and it is an easy matter to line it, using tiny tacks to fasten the edges.

After the fine frocks have been disposed of it is well to consider the hats, which are really a matter of much concern when closet space is not ample. Here again the box comes to the rescue and may be utilized in several forms.

If the room is large enough to afford the space a very simple way is to have a stand made into which hat boxes may be slipped. The stand consists merely of four uprights of enamelled or stained wood connected by horizontal strips of wood placed at equal spaces apart. These horizontal strips are fastened inside the uprights and are wide enough to form the resting place of the hat boxes.

NOWADAYS attractive beflowered hat boxes may be readily procured, and three, or if necessary four—all of the same size and design—are bought for the stand. A single box fits into each division. The hat boxes must all be the size of the largest hat, but if there are small hats two may be put into one box by fastening cushions to the sides of the box and pinning the hats to these.

If space is too limited to permit of this hat stand with the other necessary furniture a very acceptable hat box may be made in combination with the writing table. A writing desk will not do for this purpose, but a writing table is quite as useful and comfortable.

For this purpose a rectangular table is best. It should have no drawer and it is necessary that it be a four legged table. Of course a handsome mahogany table or one of other fine wood is not usually used for this purpose, but a table is selected which is to be enamelled or stained to match the room or which is already finished in a conventional way. It should have a shelf quite far down from the top, but if there is none one may be put in by a carpenter. The sides are then closed in, the front opening on hinges. In this box or closet are kept the hats. The outside is enamelled to match the table and the inside is papered or lined with cheesecloth or with flowered crêpe paper. A cushion is tacked to each side of the box, and, if there be room, to the bottom also, and to these the hats are pinned.

In order that the table may be comfortable for writing the top should come out some distance beyond the legs and the hat box. It is necessary to have a fairly good sized table for this, but as it is to serve two purposes, the room may usually be spared. The top of the table is fitted as a desk and a wall cabinet hanging directly over it, quite low down, may be used for the cubbyholes so necessary for a complete desk equipment, or a set of small rectangular boxes covered with flowered paper may be set on the back of the desk.

ORDINARY frocks and coats and underwear may usually be cared for in the closet and bureau or dressing table, which should always be provided with drawers in a room where space is precious. For shirt waists, neckwear, gloves, veils, &c., a set of rather large boxes, covered with flowered paper, chintz or linen, has been found almost indispensable in every boudoir. These boxes may be bought ready made in the frame if desired, or they are made to order to fit any space. They may be tall and narrow or rather low and wide. If there is no other place for them they may very well be placed against the foot of the bed. These boxes are finished in such a variety of ways that they really fit into almost any scheme of decoration without being made to order. There are those finished in plain colors, with decorations of French engravings; others covered with striped or flowered paper or chints, white moire and, indeed, an endless variety.

There remain the shoes to dispose of, for if the girl's room is to be the pink of perfection of order they cannot be left to the care of the closet. If there is room it is a good plan to have a window seat made. It may be quite small and serve as an attractive seat, having a couple of pillows for the back and an upholstery to match the room. The top lifts up and the shoes are kept inside on trees—of course each pair in its own particular place.

Less important, but still occupying a necessary place in the closetless room, or that which is well night closetless, are the various bags which serve as storage places. There is, of course, the laundry bag, or, if possible, two—one for fine neckwear, &c., which is small, and a larger one for heavier things. The bag may have an upper and lower compartment, the upper being shallow and the lower deep, which will serve these uses. Laundry bags that are most satisfactory for their decorative and laundering qualities are made of linen with a big conventional design in contrasting colors of stitchery or of unbleached cotton muslin with appliqué designs of linen.

ALMOST every girl has an embroidery bag or a bag for fine needlework, but it is also necessary, especially for the girl away at boarding school, to have a bag for heavier things—a darning bag, in which she can put the underwear she must mend and the stockings each week when they come from the laundry. A useful little bag also is one for lingerie ribbon, in which is kept, besides the ribbon of various colors, the bodkins of several sizes which are needed for putting it in. Many girls also like to keep their handkerchiefs in a bag, and this may be hung at the side of the dressing table, leaving the space in the drawers for other things.

It may be said that nothing has been described in this article which will take the place of the closet for ordinary suits, mackintoshes, &c, provided the room is absolutely closetless. The only thing to do with such a room is to build a closet, for there must be some place where ordinary clothes may be hung. The easiest way is to have a closet built across a corner, with a shelf at the top and a door inside of which is a pier glass. For a girl who does not wish to go to this expense a curtain rod may be put up across the corner, from which a straight curtain, preferably of the same shade as the wall paper, may hang. A disused door leading into another room, if the hollow space is on your side, also makes a good place for a closet.

Inverting Skilful Methods of Stowing Things Away

The Vogue of Red Morocco.

RED morocco is one of the fashionable leathers of the autumn. It is made up into desk sets, which include a portable inkstand, stationery holder, stamp box, scissors and paper cutter case and pen rack and a pen wiper shaped like a Hibernian hat, trimmed with a silken shamrock and fitted with green flannel leaves. It also furnishes the covers and backing for various attractive looking desk pads, some of which are handsomely embossed with gilt or silver, and for portable folding writing desks containing morocco bound books for notes, cash and addresses, and morocco covered pen and stamp boxes and safety ink cases.

A clipping file, the red morocco covers of which, embellished with a design worked out in gold, are bound together with morocco laces, encloses ten envelopes of natural colored grass linen labelled "music," "poetry," "drama," "recipes," &c. Of the same pelt are envelope shaped note cases holding on one leaf a quantity of stationery secured by morocco laces. On the opposite leaf is a blotting paper pocket, having an ivory paper cutter secured to its outer side, and through the centre of the book is thrust a rubber tipped pencil. Miniature copies of these envelopes, used for handbag memorandum books, are filled with leaves instead of with stationery, and equipped with an indelible pencil.

Red morocco is used for a book-shaped convenience the covers of which, threaded together with morocco strips, protect a telephone index consisting of a number of cards alphabetically arranged.

Collar, glove and veil boxes of red morocco are of both permanent and collapsible style. There are dainty cases for toilet brushes, bottles and pin sets and flexible bags for the accommodation of folding skirt and coat hangers.

Travelling conveniences in red morocco include box buffers, which hold complete manicure sets—nail scissors, nail files, emery boards, polishers and orange sticks—mending rolls, which may be crushed into odd corners of the travelling bag, silver drinking cups that collapse into leather nests and key ring cases fitted with a flat ring having a snap catch.

The girl who wishes to present her grown brother with a birth anniversary gift may select a shaving pad having a perpetual calendar set into its red morocco cover, a jewel case lined with heavy suede and fitted with compartments for a watch, stickpin, studs, collar and cuff buttons or a bridge whist outfit consisting of two packs of cards and a score pad enclosed in a sliding drawer equipped case.

Work for Girl Who Embroiders

MOST attractive is the latest form of needlework, which is a combination of appliqué work, ribbon embroidery and silk stitchery. This work has also the advantage of being much more quickly accomplished than either ordinary embroidery or ribbon work. The appliqué part of the work consist in the application of flowers, petals, leaves, &c., which come already stamped and may be had at some of the fashionable shops. The flowers are sewed to the background with French knots, which form the centres representing the pistils or stamens of the blossoms. Silk embroidery in the shaded tones is used for stems and tendrils, and sometimes for leaves, and the ribbon work is used for bowknots, little French wreaths, and sometimes for small leaves or designs in diamonds, circles, &c., within which the floral design is placed. The work admits of charming variety and the exercise of much individual taste, both in the coloring and the carrying out of the design with different materials. The background on which the decoration is to be placed is stamped as for any piece of embroidery.

For a cushion cover of blue moire silk an attractive design was of wild roses and their leaves enclosed in a trellis work of dark green ribbon. The ribbon trellis was stitched on perfectly flat, having a narrow edging on either side of gold braid. The cushion was square, with a plain border of green silk, inside which the design was set in four triangles so that the middle of the cushion was a four pointed star. Inside each diamond of the trellis work was a group of the wild roses, with their silk embroidered tendrils and leaves.

For a heart shaped cushion the design was a bouquet of pansies and maidenhair ferns. The cushion was in a dull pink silk with a narrow gold fringe outlining the edge. The flowers, in applique, were fastened with French knots, the ferns being also appliqued; the stems and a narrow vine-like tracery were done in silk. The flowers were tied with a narrow gold ribbon.

Photograph frames, sachets, table covers and all the various boxes which now are needed for the dressing table are decorated in this manner. Basket and rose designs and allover designs are popular. Gold thread and ribbon, fringe, both in gold and silk; small ball fringe, colored braid and, for very dainty cushions, lace is used to supplement the appliqué work and embroidery.

FOR THE MOTOR DOG.

MASTER Bow-wow when touring about the country in a motor car is completely equipped with automobile togs and as well protected from the ravages of travel as is his mistress, for he wears a little dust coat in blanket form, while his face is completely covered by a mask with goggles, which serves the double purpose of screening him from dirt and of permitting him to enjoy the landscape as the motor tools along. He is an odd looking little mite thus arrayed sitting up in grave state beside his mistress, but being a pampered pet, accustomed to all the luxuries, he takes naturally to his motor costume, which he wears with apparent comfort and perfect composure.

PRACTICAL TALKS BY THE APRIL GRANDMOTHER

"ARE you sure that you have eaten enough breakfast, my dear?" inquired the April Grandmother, as her youngest granddaughter prepared to leave the morning room. "A schoolgirl should begin her day's work with a meal that includes something more substantial than a cup of coffee and a roll. A dish of cereal, an egg and a glass of rich milk is not too much sustenance for a young person who expects to walk a half mile to a class room in which she is to spend four or five hours. Please take this," she urged, extending a big red apple. "Everybody should eat at least one apple daily, and young girls should eat several of them, as they are not only nourishing to the system but beautifying to the complexion.

"The girl who studies hard needs a generous diet. She should eat largely of fresh fish, fowl, vegetables and fruit and even indulge occasionally in warm biscuit and maple syrup. A very little pure candy every day is not harmful, providing that it is thoroughly masticated, as sweets help to develop the chest.

"Pepper and highly spiced table sauces such as are used to impart piquancy to staple foods should be avoided, as they sometimes cause eruptions or a flushed face. The best rule is to eschew all condiments save salt—that wonderful ally of the digestion and beautifier of the complexion.

"Clear coffee—one cupful at breakfast time—is not injurious if weakened with hot water instead of with cream, but tea, whether clear or mixed with milk, is not a beauty beverage. On the other hand it is a nerve agitator as well as a complexion destroyer, but if a girl has become a slave of the tea drinking habit she would better choose the black than the green brands, which in time will dry and tan her cuticle until it resembles dark brown leather.

"From four to twelve pounds of clear, pure, non-iced water should be daily taken into the system in order to keep it in healthy working condition and to make the blood sufficiently liquid to circulate easily. A glass of salt seasoned boiling water sipped just before breakfast will flush the stomach and prepare it for its day's work, while a glass of cool water, flavored with lemon, taken the last thing before going to bed, will keep the breath sweet and ward off an incipient headache.

"The schoolgirl who goes in enthusiastically for out of door sports is such an exceedingly busy young person that she can scarcely spare the time to eat and drink regularly. Consequently she either subsists upon an insufficient diet or she positively 'bolts' a quantity of food, and by the time she is ready to make her formal bow to society has innocently ruined her digestion and her complexion."

DRESSING SACQUES.

FRENCH flannel or cashmere may be used for the dressing sacque which every schoolgirl needs for the cool mornings of early autumn. One good model of the collarless order, which may be put together in a few hours, is cut in two pieces, including the sleeves, the only seams being over the shoulders and under the arms.

Half silk shantung is a favorite material for laundrable dressing sacques. Many of these have loose fronts, half fitted backs, kimono necks and bishop sleeves, but a newer model has a straight back and a diagonally shaped front which fastens at the edge of the left shoulder and slants sharply toward the right lower edge of the garment.

Attractive looking dressing sacques made of Oriental patterned or flower figured wool challis have Japanese sleeves and shirred girdles, and among the belted garments are many of plain China silk, bordered with Persian silk or with bands of contrasting satin. They are on the short kimono order, have square or surplice shaped necks and are fastened with frogs of silk braiding.

A morning sacque of albatross, veiling or crêpe which may quite properly make its appearance at the home breakfast table has a square yoke finished with a little turn back silk faced collar, a ribbon belt and Japanese sleeves that are gathered into a band at the wrist.

SIMPLE PRIZES.

FLOWER receptacles are charming prizes for a young girl's card party. They are chiefly in the form of small baskets, oblong, round or square shape, and are made of Swedish burned wood, decorated with wide ribbon bows; of stained and enamelled willow or rafia; of painted porcelain and of crystal inlaid with silver.

Sterling silver is employed in the development of a number of dainty card prizes of a useful order. There are wishbone shaped sugar tongs, grape scissors with repoussé handles, paper knives with silver blades and pearl handles, hatpin vases of calla shape and velvet mounted pin cushions reproducing clubs, spades, hearts and diamonds.

Among crystal card prizes are perfumery bottles with cut glass stoppers, miniature cream pitchers, whipped cream bowls, cheese and cracker plates suitable for the five o'clock tea table and hand mirrors with crystal backs and ebony handles.

In brass are quarter pound capacity octagon shaped tea caddies, card trays, photograph frames, holders containing two packs of cards, score pads and the necessary bridge equipment and trump markers with square celluloid leaves.

Desk candlesticks make especially acceptable prizes, and among these are some dainty affairs in Dresden and Austrian porcelain, in crystal, of bronze in Colonial design and in copper relieved by oxidizing, reproducing the famous cobra model.

New Ideas for Pillow Covers.

SOFT, silken looking burlap in tan, gold blue, taupe and dull green makes serviceable as well as artistic coverings for sofa pillows. Such covers are embroidered with coarse silk in conventional flower patterns, in arabesque designs or in a combination of small flowers which fill the centre of the slip, while squares and scrolls done in black, dark reds and greens form the border.

Covers of heavy gray linen carrying patterns lightly outlined with gray and white floss are washable and artistic and make an excellent background for other pillows covered with slips of vividly colored linens carrying heavy embroideries in Pompeiian red, dull blue, madder brown and reseda, outlined with gold thread. Also of gray linen are the mission pillows, with cotton cordage finished edges and four wide bands of white linen appliquéd with conventionalized fleur de lis cut out of dark red, blue, green, yellow and brown linen and outlined with black floss. Another type of mission pillow, so called, is of chocolate colored coarse linen ornamented with a design worked out in leaf green, red-brown and gray-blue floss and outlined with Japanese gold thread, and a third is of sheepskin or any desired shade appliquéd with college letters or with personal initials and laced all round with leather thongs.

Madras curtain cloth of bold design and vivid coloring lined with white sateen makes a most effective pillow cover, which at a short distance looks as though it were of white silk heavily embroidered. There are any number of less expensive semi-transparent colored window drapings which may be utilized in the same manner as is madras, notably white scrim broadly barred with pale blue, rose and green.

A single Japanese patterned Java cloth square is sufficient to cover a pillow of ordinary size, and for one of extraordinary dimensions the square need only be placed out with a wide band of dull green or brown linen or denim and edged with white or black cordage.

Lingerie pillow covers for the couch are of handkerchief linen, hand embroidered in daisies; of half bleached linen worked with Empire wreaths and inset with Cluny medallions, of Irish linen hand wrought in Japanese drawn work and of sheer lawn inset with Valenciennes lace bands.

Burlap, denim, heavy linen and cretonne are used to cover the aromatic pillows filled with clover, bay leaves or balsam pine and these rarely have any decoration beyond a big bow of ribbon set at the upper left hand corner.

Elaborate pillow covers are made of pale tints of pink, blue, mauve, maize or green satin ornamented with Wallachian and solid work, of Roman scarfs overworked with gold thread outlining, of dark hued heavy silk embroidered with the Chinese imperial dragon, Japanese designs or the Persian chain stitch. Less elaborate, but quite as effective, are the slips of boldly patterned brocade edged with gold cordage or with five-inch wide satin ruffles, headed with silver soutache.

Uses for Odds and Ends of Lace

SINCE time immemorable the tradition of a lace box in which collections of real lace are treasured from one generation to another has been a universal one. But these lace collections were for older women rather than for girls and comprised large and valuable pieces of real lace, handed down from mother to daughter and then to granddaughter. The young girl who is fond of fine needlework should nowadays have her own individual lace box in which she should treasure not alone really valuable pieces of lace which happened to have been a part of her costumes, but as well all the tiny pieces of real lace or even fine imitation lace, if the pattern is beautiful and not too usual, which have been left over from fashioning summer gowns, lingerie blouses or under garments, or which may have been used perhaps once without damage to its attractiveness.

There is no bit of lace too small, provided it is really a charming pattern, to be of use for some of the handiwork that is now popular. A single lace flower may be used on a collar to form the centre of the piece of embroidery or in the same fashion as a central motif in a doily or pincushion cover or some other article for the dressing table. A lace leaf or wreath is equally useful, and tiny bits of embroidery, even machine embroidery if it is very fine and on a sheer background, may be worked in in a similar manner.

No bit of lace edge or insertion, either, is too short to be of use. For the ends of joints or to form a design in small articles for the dressing table, &c., the small bits of insertion are very useful. It is not in the least necessary that the various kinds of lace be all of one design. On the contrary, this would not be the case with the finest hand made articles which were constructed of material bought for the purpose. Provided the design is attractive, the material fine and the stitching of the most dainty, the use of half a dozen patterns of lace on the same cushion cover or handkerchief bag would not detract in the least from the beauty of the article.

NEW UMBRELLAS.

UMBRELLAS which can be folded to fit into a twenty-four inch dressing case are the only type which now appeal to the college girl who does not like to be burdened with more than one package when travelling. These folding umbrellas come in black, tan, taupe, dark red, blue, brown and green twilled silk, mounted upon steel frames and usually have wooden handles. Among the newest umbrella handles is one of flattened top, shaped somewhat like a huge button and about two and one-half inches across. Other wooden handles are carved to represent the heads of cats, dogs, owls and butterflies. They are usually of natural colored oak, ebony or mahogany, but occasionally one is stained to match the silk covering of its frame. Very smart umbrellas which particularly appeal to girls of artistic as well as extravagant tastes have satin finished white wood handles, with tops of onyx, jade or carved dull red quartz. They are decorated with narrow ribbon bows or with tasselled loops through which the wrist may be thrust.

GRAND RALLY

BOYS

WANTED

THE

EXAMINER

WE WONDER if it ever occurred to the boys of Peterborough that the selling of papers was a stepping-stone to a successful business career in future years.

DO they recognize the fact that this little business offers them an opportunity to

MAKE

100 Per Cent ?

or in other words, to double the money invested in selling the EXAMINER to transient buyers.

BOYS buy the EXAMINER at one cent each and sell it for two cents each ; or in the case of weekly patrons, they pay six cents per week and receive ten cents from the subscriber, thus making a profit of 62 2-3 per cent.

DO you know of any business in the city that pays such profits with as little chance for bad debts ?

IT only requires a Boy to HUSTLE, the same thing that is required when he gets into a bigger business world.

OF course we do not mean to say that the Boy, to become a successful business man, must be a newsboy, but we do say that the successful newsboy has gained an experience that is of much service to him in after years.

A NEWSBOY'S EXPERIENCE IN A LARGE CITY. Why can't a local Boy be benefitted proportionately ?This story is taken from the Saturday Post :

MONEY IN NEWSPAPER ROUTES.

Another boy was only thirteen when his father died, leaving two hundred dollars insurance, a widow and four younger children. The insurance money was loaned out to a neighbour at six per cent., as a sort of reserve fund, and while the widow did plain sewing, the boy carried newspapers morning and evening. After three months' experience with this work he borrowed twenty-five dollars and purchased the smallest newspaper route in town. Vigorous canvassing for new customers made that route so productive that in six months he paid back the loan. The lender offered another loan of fifty dollars, which the boy took, buying two more routes. These were covered by boys hired to do the work, however, because he felt that all his energy must go into the original route, so that he would at least be certain of good returns from that. Principles of management learned by this plan made him so successful that in less than five years he owned every newspaper route in his town. His mother's two hundred dollars was still intact, and his brothers and sisters going to school. A legacy of two hundred dollars fell to the family. This, with the original two hundred dollars and another hundred the boy had saved, was paid on a home costing twenty-eight hundred dollars, the balance to be cleared off at the rate of twenty-five dollars a month. Three furnished rooms were rented at a total of about twenty-two dollars monthly, and this money, it was agreed, should never be spent. Newspaper routes, odd jobs and the mother's contributions kept the family and paid the instalments. In four years the income from furnished rooms, put away in the bank, grew to more than one thousand dollars. The mortgage was finally cleared off, and the boy, now nearly twenty-one years old, started to get an education at the high school.

THERE are a number of Boys in Peterborough making four and five dollars per week, not necessarily all selling the Examiner, but some easily make three dollars per week selling the Examiner exclusively.

Boys! Be Boys of Business

Get in the game. It won't hurt you, but will give you a right start. You will have money of your own to save or buy useful needs with.

BOYS ! Take your spare time between four and six o'clock and see what success you will have between now and Christmas.

NEWSBOYS' BONANZA

Boys, figure this proposition out for yourselves. Be ambitious. Good newsboys are always taken care of and recommended for future positions.

JOHNSON IS DEAD.

Minnesota's Democrat Governor Succumbs to Operation.

Rochester, Minn., Sept. 22.—Governor John A. Johnson, three times elected governor of Minnesota, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President in 1908, and looked upon by many throughout the country as the probable Democratic national standard bearer in 1912, died at St. Mary's Hospital at 3.25 o'clock yesterday morning, following an operation last Wednesday.

His last words were to his wife:

THE LATE GOVERNOR JOHNSON.

"Well, Nora, I guess I'm going; we have made a brave fight."

John A. Johnson was the first native Minnesotan to be chosen governor of the state, and of that distinction he was prouder than of any other feature of his career.

He was born near St. Peters, Minn., 48 years ago, of Swedish parents. In his early days he had a very hard row to hoe, his father, who was a Swede, well connected, becoming a worthless drunkard, leaving the boy to help care for his hardworking mother and sisters. The governor was born in 1861.

PEARY AT SYDNEY.

Explorer Declares That He Will Have No More Receptions.

Sydney, N.S., Sept. 22.—Commander Robert E. Peary will accept no invitations to receptions and no public honors until the question of the discovery of the North Pole has been decided by scientific authorities. This he made known last night in a statement for publication. He is acting upon the advice of Gen. Thomas H. Hubbard and Herbert L. Bridgman, president and secretary respectively of the Peary Arctic Club.

Commander Peary was asked when the public was likely to get a decision on this subject and he replied: "I do not know, but what I have to say will not be very long delayed. Whether my statement will be issued in one week or two weeks, depends on circumstances."

The explorer left Sydney at seven o'clock this morning and will reach his home on Eagle Island on Friday morning.

The reception of Commander Peary yesterday began when the Roosevelt edged her way past Low Point, eleven miles down the bay, and continued all the way to the harbor and until the commander reached the Sydney Hotel, where he made a short speech.

"Eleven times I have left Sydney for the north," said the commander. "Once I brought back the largest meteor ever found; the last time I brought back my farthest north, and this time I have brought back the North Pole." A civic address was then presented.

Three Killed In Wreck.

Patee, N.H., Sept. 22.—Three were killed early yesterday when the Montreal express, from Montreal for Boston, crashed into the rear of the disabled Quebec express, Quebec for Boston, near this station. The dead are: Engineer John P. Callahan, Fireman George Parmenter and an unknown tramp.

The trains were traveling only five minutes apart, and when the auxiliary engine on the Quebec express gave out the following train could not be warned.

"Inspired" to Burn Barn.

Cornwall, Sept. 22.—Walter William Hull of Matilda, who is in jail here on a charge or arson, came before Judge O'Reilly to elect for trial. Asked if he was guilty he said that in a way he was, as he had been inspired to burn A. H. Beckstead's barns and rambled along something to the effect that there was scriptural authority to suck the eggs, burn the barns and marry the girl. He was remanded for examination as to his sanity.

Boys In Accident.

Sarnia, Sept. 22.—Thomas, the nine-year-old son of Conductor Thomas Finan, who runs through the St. Clair Tunnel, had his left arm cut off near the shoulder. The lad was running on the top of a freight car. A few weeks ago an older brother was so badly burned by getting in contact with some of the electrical equipment at the tunnel that one of his hands had to be amputated at the wrist.

Big Timber Deal.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 22.—President Shaughnessy to-day will take up with the principals a big deal for timber at Cowichan Lake. A. B. Kurtz, president of the American Financial Securities Co., is the principal, and 5,400 acres are involved. The cost will be about $7,000,000, and half a million more in developing. This deal will dispose of practically the last heavy timber in Cowichan Valley. The price of logs advanced a dollar during last week. The C.P.R. has let additional contracts for clearing 6,000 acres of agricultural land in Vancouver Island, near Trench Creek.

OUR EXHIBIT of Pianos and Organs at the Fair and at our Show Rooms attracted great attention and admiration for their beauty of design, perfect action and purity of tone.

ONE MUSICIAN a graduate of one of the best colleges of music in Canada remarked that "The Newcombe Piano is one finest tone Pianos I ever heard.

OTHERS AND SOME others prefered the Sherlock-Manning—each and every one produce perfect tones but of different qualities.

WE WOULD be pleased to discuss tone quality and Piano construction with you. There are reasons for different qualities and there are good, bad and horrible Pianos. Let us tell you about them before you buy.

HAD BEEN CLERK OF COUNTY COURT NEARLY THIRTY YEARS

Mr. John Moloney Passed Away on Tuesday Afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, After an Illness Which Was First Felt Last March—The Passing of a Respected Citizen.

FUNERAL HELD TO-MORROW

Following an illness that had gradually wasted his vitality since its first appearance in March last, Mr. John Moloney, for thirty years clerk of the County Court of Peterboro and registrar of the Surrogate Court passed away yesterday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, at his late residence, 172 Brock street in his seventy-fourth year. The deceased first mentioned an internal trouble when winter was breaking in March and about the first of May he secured three months leave of absence. Mr. Moloney, however did not improve as was expected. His condition gradually became worse and he slowly sank until his relatives realised that he was past recovery, and yesterday afternoon he succumbed to a malignant intestinal trouble.

The late John Moloney was born in Cashel, Tipperary County, Ireland in the year 1836 and was the son of the late Michael Moloney. In 1859 Mr. Moloney came to Canada and making Peterborough his home resided here continuously up to the present watching the city grow from a small town to a flourishing city. He was one of the citizens who took an active interest in public affairs during his early manhood and played no small part in the early development of Peterborough.

The first twenty years of his life in this city found him in the lumber and mercantile business, his first office being in the old Henthorn block on Hunter street. He afterwards moved to the Burnham block opposite the Arcade on George street. About thirty years ago Mr. Moloney was appointed clerk of the County Court and registrar of the Surrogate Court and had held that position until his failing health forced him to ask for leave of absence. His position brought him into intimate relations with the members of the Peterboro bar who without exception held him in high esteem and looked upon him as a competent clerk. He had been a member of the city council and was one of the city fathers who received King Edward VII in 1860 when as the Prince of Wales he visited Peterborough while touring the Canadian cities. In the year 1868 Mr. Moloney was married to Maria Ambrose, daughter of John Ambrose, who resided near Lindsay.

The late Mr. Moloney is survived by his wife, three sisters and one brother. They are Mrs. Wm. Tierney of New York, Mrs. Thos. Egan of Otonabee, Mrs. J. B. Dunn of this city and Mr. Daniel Moloney of Montreal. Mr. Moloney was in religion a Catholic and a member of the local Council of the Knights of Columbus. He had resided in his late home since 1863 when he first moved into it.

The funeral will be held on Thursday morning at nine o'clock from the family residence Brock street to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery..

BURT COMPANY SECURITIES

Subscriptions Exceed the Amount Offered.

A. E. Ames & Co., Limited, state that subscriptions were received up till close of books at four o'clock on Tuesday afternoon for 7,847 shares Preference stock of the F. N. Burt Company, Limited, as against the 7,500 shares offered. They hope to arrange with two or three of the largest subscribers so that allotment may be made in full up to 100 shares on each subscription. Allotment notices will be mailed on Thursday.

In all 285 subscriptions were received principally from Ontario, Quebec, the Martime Provinces and New York State. Subscriptions were received for not exceeding 25 shares each from 228 subscribers.

As all shares of the Burt Company are of the par value of $100 each, a full Common share is available only as against each 5 shares of Preference stock. The firm will buy or sell Common stock to adjust the new odd lots at $50 a share.

It is understood that, in connection with this as with all previous flotations, A. E. Ames & Co., have not had to go back to an underwriter for a dollar, the public having always fully absorbed their offerings.

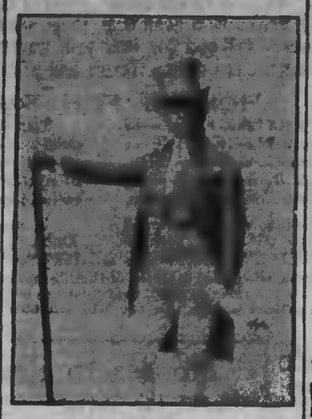
DIGBY BELL

in Margaret Mayo's Brilliant Comedy, "The Debtors."



Messrs. Allison and Ziegler's big production, "The Debtors" with Digby Bell and Kathleen Clifford, will be presented at The Grand next Monday evening, September 27tht. Mr. Bell was last seen in "The Education of Mr. Pipp," and Miss Clifford in "The Top o' the World." It is said that neither of these two well-known stars have ever had a vehicle more suited to their peculiar ideas of comedy. Courtney Foote, a well-known English leading man has been brought over here to play the straight character part, and it was with a good deal of difficulty that Mr. Allison succeeded in inducing George Edwards to permit Mr. Foote to come to this country to originate the role.

SAMPLES OF EVERBEARING ALPINE STRAWBERRY

Mrs.Dr. Gowan has left with the Examiner a cluster of the Alpine everbearing strawberry, laden with ripened berries such as the plants have been bearing since early summer and such as will continue to bear until sharp frost comes, the ripened berry and the bloom appearing upon the same stalk. The plants were grown from imported seed by Mrs. Gowan and children, 168 Brock street The plants are of different habit of growth from the ordinary strawberry and greatly resemble the indigenous plants found on the margins of swamps and in low ground in our outfields and bush pastures. The fruit laden plants of this strawberry have the delicate delightful perfume of the wild strawberry that takes one back to childhood days in the sleepy afternoons of summer days.

HAD TO SHOW HIM THE WAY TO GO HOME

Last night about twelve o'clock, a resident on Mark street, was awakened from sleep by some loud knocking on his door. He went downstairs and found a man, who had to all appearances imbibed well but not wisely. He said that if he could find his way to Hunter street, he thought he would be able to get home. The citizen, whose rest had been molested, took him to the corner and got him started on his way, but the man had only returned to his home and retired when back came his midnight caller and acknowledged that he was completely lost and would like to be taken home.

His good friend got dressed and between twelve and one o'clock got the lost man to his home near the G.T.R. station.

COLEMAN BROS. PAINTERS

The Coleman Bros., painters and decorators, have had a very busy summer's trade, and are still favoured with a lot of work for the fall. They expect to have their hands full until the snow flies. LEFT FOR THE WEST

Mr. W. G. Lendrum Has Gone to Strathcona, Alta., to Look After His Property—Has Rapidly Increased in Value.

BOOM IS RESPONSIBLE

Mr. W. G. Lendrum left yesterday for Strathcona, the Ashburnham of the city of Edmonton, Alta., to look after his property. That district has enjoyed such prosperity, has been so rapidly built up and has consequently increased in value to such an extent that the first purchase price would hardly be recognized. Mr. Lendrum's property has benefitted by the boom and it is learned that a handsome offer has been made for it. Mr. Lendrum's visit is in regard to his property.

300 LIVES WERE LOST

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

New Orleans, Sept. 22.—Details of the terrible havoc wrought by the hurricane which swept the gulf states were brought here today by refuges who arrived with the first news from the scene of the devastation and declared that 300 persons had lost their lives in one portion of Louisiana struck by the storm.

WILL A MERCHANT WHO IS WISE EVER CEASE TO ADVERTISE?

Yes—when the trees grow upside down.
When the beggars wear a crown.
When the ice forms on the sun.
When the sparrows weigh a ton.
When fish forget to swim.
When Satan sings a hymn.
When girls go back on gum.
When the small boy hates a drum.
When the drummer has no brass.
Then the man that's wise will neglect to advertise.—McVille Journal.

KILLED IN A FLIGHT

Capt. Ferber of the French Army Meets Tragic Death While Attempting to Ascend in His Bi-plane.

A FAMOUS AVIATOR

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

Paris, Sept. 22nd.—Captain Ferber of the French Army was dashed to death to-day when his voison biplane crashed to earth while attempting a flight at Boulogne sur Ner on the French coast. Capt. Ferber was one of the figures in the great international aviation week at Rheims and made several splendid flight there with his biplane.

INQUEST IN SPRINGVILLE TO RE-OPEN NO CLUE TO THE IDENTITY OF THE MAN

The inquest on the body of the unknown man whose skeleton was found in the strip of woods near Kendry station a week ago last Sunday will be resumed to-morrow night at Springville.

Detective Miller of the Attorney-General's department has notified Coroner Dr. Gray to go ahead with the inquest as far as possible, to have the body exhumed again and a post mortem examination made. If this is carried out and the testimony of the men who found the body is taken, there remains little else that can be done just now.

Detective Miller visited Springville again yesterday afternoon when representatives of the local press were also on hand. The inspector however, when asked about the case appeared rather reserved and would not talk very much about his impressions although he intimated that he was up against an almost impossible case. He will devote every effort towards trying to discover the identity of the man as that point must be cleared up before any further action can be taken.

The case is even more difficult than the famous Barton murder in which the woman who was shot has never been identified although in that case the authorities were enabled to secure photographs of the woman and send them broadcast throughout this continent and in England.

The detective went over the body thoroughly yesterday in the hope of discovering some means of indentification but his task would seem to an outsider a hopeless one. There is absolutely nothing about the body to show who the man was or to indicate how he met his death. The flesh was almost all off the bones with the excepion of a little around the hips and the clothes were rotten from their exposure to the elements. There was not a mark around the clothing that might serve as a clue. On not a single piece of clothing can there be found anything to indicate the manufacturer or the dealer who sold them.

Detective Miller was hopeful that with a magnifying glass he might be able to find a number on the boots which will give him a clue as to the manufacturer and thus cut down the field of inquiry considerably. A diligent search yesterday however failed to reveal any such number. The boots were new and had evidently not been worn for longer than half a day. The soles were intact with the black leather on the outside intact. They were number sixes of a good quality, different from the heavy boots generally worn by labourers.

The clothes too have evidently been of good material and not worn very long as the button holes and pockets were found to be in good condition indicating that they had not long been used. The clothing was such as would be worn in the fall or spring as the man wore a heavy undershirt and drawers, while the rest of the clothing was such as would be worn in the summer, strongly pointing to the fact that it was not during the very cold weather that the man came to his death, as he was not prepared for winter weather. There was no overcoat in evidence nor any signs of mits or gloves. The hat found nearby had evidently been a good felt one although of course it was badly out of shape. A careful examination of the hat failed to show any manufacturer's or dealer's mark inside. In fact the band itself was gone and was picked up some distance away by Detective Miller. Nothing in the pockets offered a clue as to the man's identity. There were twenty-three five cent pieces, a ten-cent piece and a five cent piece in silver and a quantity of money in bills which were wedged together as if they had been through a fire and crumbled at a touch. There were a number of one and two-dollar Canadian bills which could be distinguished by their colour, while a bill of another colour was mixed with them. This bill might have been a five, ten or twenty dollar bill, just what denomination it is impossible to say so badly disfigured are the remnants of the currency.

The razor which was found in the palm of the man's hand is very badly rusted. An examination of the razor reveals the word "Bee" but that was all that could be found on it. There was a package of "T and B" smoking tobacco manufactured by the Tucketts of Hamilton but it is impossible to discover where that was bought as the tobacco is sold all over the country. If it had been a package of cigarettes it might have been possible to discover the district in which they were sold as the boxes are numbered, the consignee for each district having a different number.

There was a can that had contained Paris Green found, but it was some distance away from the body and was in a better shape of preservation than was the skeleton. It is possible that the can might have been flung there by some person in passing and that it has no connection with the case.

It is a wonder that the body, if it was there last winter was not discovered as one would think from looking over the ground that when the leaves were off the trees the spot could easily be seen from the C.P.R. tracks. It is only twenty-five paces away from the track and the trees are fairly thin so that it looks as if the body would be in plain view of the track in the winter time.

Certain features of the case would lead one to suppose that the body was that of an Englishman. The clothing would indicate this as it is evidently not of Canadian manufacture and it is thought that the razor was also manufactured in England. Foreigners as a rule smoke only the cheapest kind of tobacco so that the presence of a well known brand might be supporting evidence of the theory that the man was not a foreigner.

The contention is advanced by some Springville people that the right leg of the man had been broken and a theory has been promulgated that the man might have been riding on a train and fell off, and broke his leg and then dragged himself into the woods. It might have been a cold night, the spot was a lonely one and there did not seem any hope of help coming and rather than die there of cold the unfortunate man cut his throat with the razor. This theory has some supporters but of course there are fifty theories that might be made to fit the facts of the case.

A quantity of hair found on the lower jaw should effectually clear up the question of the sex of the body. It is evidently the remains of a small man with a very small mouth and fine teeth.

Coroner Dr. Gray will re-open the investigation at 5 o'clock to-morrow night acting under instructions from Inspector Miller who is still here working on the case.

BY-LAW TO PROHIBIT DISCHARGE OF RIFLES ON RIVER IS SUGGESTED BY A MAGISTRATE

The following letter from County Police Magistrate Moore of Victoria County, is to the Ops Township Council:

William E. Agnew, Esq.,
Township Clerk of Ops,
Lindsay, P. O.

Dear Sir,—I would ask you to call your council's attention to the indiscriminate and dangerous use of firearms of late along the Scugog river. Since the unfortunate killing of young Spratt in this town a few days ago, many persons have spoken to me about the matter. Many of them have described how near bullets and shot have whizzed past them while working in their fields near to, or while passing along our river.

The public I feel are becoming alarmed and think some action should be taken to put a stop to the careless use of firearms on it. There is no game that I know of on the Scugog or on Sturgeon Lake requiring a rifle to kill it. The firearm is merely used by the shooter in wanton destruction of the bird life, which birds are of no earthly value to anybody after being killed. Is any human being to be put in danger simply that some fool may have the senseless pleasure of killing something with a gun? I need not tell your council that there is no knowing where a bullet fired from a modern rifle will go, or who it may kill before it stops. In fact in regard to all shooting on this river I would strongly advise your council to pass a by-law prohibiting the use of any kind of a firearm on it except shot guns, at game birds in the open season. The use of guns at any other season for any other purpose is as dangerous as it is senseless.

You will find the power of your council to pass such a by-law as I mention in section 586, sub-section 9, of the Municipal Act.

Yours truly,
F. D. MOORE,
Police Magistrate,
County of Victoria.

PRICE OF CEMENT HAS INCREASED MATERIALLY SINCE CONROY BROS. TENDERED FOR NEW BRIDGE

A short session of the Board of Works was held last night when the contract for the Smith street bridge was again brought before the members. It appears that the price of cement has advanced materially since Messrs. Conroy put in their tenders and they now ask the city to bear two-thirds of the additional cost. Mr. W. H. Moore, representing the contractors addressed the Board of Works but the Board took no action in the matter as they had previously accepted Messrs. Conroy's tender as submitted.

W. H. Moore, on behalf of Messrs. E. and F. Conroy, said that since their tender was put in, and the tender of Begy & Co. was accepted the price they had got for cement was lost and the price had gone up 30 cents per barrel and he would enter the contract by bearing one-third of the loss.

The chairman informed the board that he and the engineer in accordance with the authority given by the board, had appointed Wm. J. Martin, inspector of construction on the Smith street bridge.

Mr. Walter Scott was heard and asked that he be given a part of the south end of Stewart street and he would run a lane through to Lake street and build houses on Park street instead of Lake street with houses backing up in front of the church.

The matter was referred to the chairman and engineer, and the engineer is to prepare a sketch of the property.

HORSE KILLED AT DRIVING PARK GERALD DUNFORD THROWN 30 FEET

CAPT. FERBER,
Of the French Army, who was killed to-day through an accident to his biplane while attempting a flight at Boulogne-sur-Mer.

Whitton's Billy W Was Worked Out This Morning in Preparation for the Lindsay Fair—Took Fright at Paper, Turned Somersault and Was Killed Almost Instantly.

DRIVER'S NARROW ESCAPE

A peculiar accident happened this morning at the driving park which resulted in the death of "Billy W" the horse that was purchased in St. Catharines by Mrs. Wm. Whitton, Lundy's Lane. Mr. Gerald Dunford was driving "Billy W" around the track for a workout and for the purpose of finding out whether he was in condition to enter the races in Lindsay on Friday and Saturday of this week. A number of heats had been run and another was being finished. Billy W came down the stretch towards the grand stand on what proved to be his last finish, and was stepping along at a 2.30 clip. He had reached a point almost in front of the judge's stand when a piece of paper was blown across the track and passed close in front of the horse. Just what happened cannot be well explained. It was all over in a few seconds and Gerald Dunford who had the reins did not realize just what did occur until he picked himself out of the dust 30 feet away after a monoplane stunt from the seat of his sulky. Billy W became so frightened by that papery flash across the horizon of his vision that he simply turned a somersault apparently alighting on his head. A few convulsive kicks and the last spark of Billy W's sporting vitality had fled and he fell over on one side, dead. Gerald Dunford had a narrow escape. He was caught off his guard and shot from his seat as if from a catapult.

Billy W had a fair mark and as a driver and "stepper" was a good piece of horse flesh. It will be a decided loss to Mr. and Mrs. Whitton.

FASHIONABLE FURS

Are Being Shown in the Leading Stores The Fall Ideas.

The fashionable colour in furs this year will be black according to the statement of a leading George street furrier. Black lynx, fox, etc., will be a la mode, although brown furs will be extensively worn. The tendency however is towards black. Stoles, and throw scarfs are in favour as well as the rug muff. Persian Lamb and seal are always popular.

They are like gold, the standard by which other furs are valued. The fashionable length is from 30 inches to 48 inches.

The weather is not yet quite cold enough for furs but the leading stores have very classy showings and the ladies will find garments to suit purses of all kinds.

ASTERS IN BLOOM

Mr. Jos. Mitchell Has Beautiful Bed at His Residence.

Mr. J. Mitchell of Mitchell Bros., barbers has a beautiful bed of asters now in full bloom at his residence, 101 Romaine street. The colours are rich and numerous and different classes are shown. As an amateur horticulturist, Mr. Mitchell takes a just pride in his flowers which receive his attention from the first budding of the tulips in the Spring until in the fall he plants bulbs for the next year.

BODY MAY BE THAT OF AN ENGLISHMAN

From the inquiries that Detective Miller is making in connection with the Springville mystery it would seem that he is looking for information concerning a missing Englishman. He has evidently come to the conclusion that the body found was that of an Englishman who may perhaps have lived in Peterborough or in some town nearby for a short time. There are many newcomers from the old country who board for a week or two at some place and then move on and nothing perhaps is thought of them again This might have been the case with this man and perhaps there are people in Peterborough who might have been acquainted with him and might be in a position to furnish information. The only description that might be given of the man was that he was small in stature.

THIEVES AT WORK

Entered House of Mrs. Martin, 224 Dublin Street, the Other Day and Stole a Sum of Money—Daylight Robbery.

SPECTACLES TAKEN

Sneak thieves have been operating around Dublin street, according to the experiences of Mrs. J. S. Martin, who lives at 224 Dublin street. A day or two ago Mrs. Martin went into the house of one of the neighbours, leaving her own house open. When she returned shortly afterwards she found that a thief had been at work. She had left her pocket book containing forty-five cents in silver in the dining-room and on her return found that the money was gone and the other articles were scattered around the room. A five-cent piece was picked up afterwards and had evidently been overlooked by the thief. As far as could be learned there was nothing else taken then.

This is the second time that the house has been entered lately. On another occasion a pair of spectacles were taken.

ANNUAL MEETING

Of Young Men's Guild of St. Andrew's Church.

A meeting of the Young Men's Guild of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church for the purpose of reorganization was held last night. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

President—Ernest Reid.
Vice-President—E. Curry.
Rec.-Sec.—T. Donaldson.
Cor.-Sec.—H. McCullough.
Treasurer.—V. Tully.
Councillors — Messrs. Rutherford, Cornish, Langford and Richardson.
Finance Committee.—R. Patterson, R. Reid.
Sick and Visiting Committee.—F. Gillespie, E. Wegg, J. Sharpe and M. Rae.

After the officers were elected a very interesting conference was held on the best methods for assisting in the progress of the church.

At the next meeting of the Guild the new officers will be installed and the plans for the winter work outlined.

I was pale and weakly for years. Miller's Compound Iron Pills brought about a change.—Wm. Madill, Druggist.

MONTREAL'S EXAMPLE

In spite of untoward conditions, the City of Montreal has been growing and spreading; but its greatest triumph is the triumph achieved on Monday when it declared for clean city government, the most important factor in civic improvement. Shocked at the revelations by the Royal Commission of the orgie of corruption, which has prevailed, the electors have declared in the most emphatic manner for reform in the mode and methods of government. Montreal is composed of a mixed racial population and pessimists and prejudiced critics have declared that racial differences were unsubdued and that they presented an insurmountable barrier to common action in the interests of the public good. The result of Monday's voting has given the lie to suchclaims. The city press, whether printed in French or English, have stood gallantly to their guns in the battle for civic reform and in the voting the French-Canadian quarters of the city gave the largest majorities for the measures of reform submitted to them. The chief feature of Monday's voting is that it provides for a Board of Control, invested with extensive powers and a reduction of the number of Aldermen. Among the duties and functions of such a board will be: To prepare all yearly estimates; to make all recommendations involving the expenditure of money; to award all contracts and have all plans and specifications prepared for every contract to be granted for the maintenance, improvement or embellishment of the city. And so on. The decisions of the board are to be subject to approval by the council; but no decision can be reversed or report amended by the council except by an absolute majority.

This reform is an adoption of the principle which the Examiner has claimed should be applied to civic government in Peterborough, the relegation of the duties of the Board of Works to a commission; with the idea of securing more or less permanency of membership and the adoption of some effective system in the administration of the work of dealing with our streets, and the public services naturally associated with them. The people of Montreal apparently needed proved and corrupt wrong-doing on the part of their representatives to arouse them to a sense of the situation and of the necessity of reform. In Peterborough we have had before us, for a quarter of a century evidences of wrong-doing in regard to the administration of our streets. It is not to be charged by any means that this wrong-doing was at all corrupt, but it has been the result of our system of administration. With the yearly changing personnel of Street and Bridge Committees and Boards of Works, the adoption of a fixed policy, the devising and application of a system has been impossible. The results have been that large expenditures have been made without anything like adequate return. This has not been the fault altogether of individual councils; they may have done their best with the resources at their command, but money spent with an utter lack of system without any fixed policy, but with a policy changing from year to year was necessarily to a considerable extent, wasted. With a commission, elected to deal with our street and associated interests; more or less permanent in character—practically permanent as in the case of our Water Commissioners—the adoption of an effective system and fixed policy would result in the doing of civic business under the charge of a commission on business principles and gain corresponding results. Will any body venture to say that, if our Water works system had been in charge of a committee of the City Council, or probably seven different committees since the city acquired the Water Works in 1902, there would have been the splendid results that have attended the administration of the commissioners? It could not be truthfully said. If, therefore, a commission can, from the nature of things, administer our Water Works in a manner superior to that of a council committee, why could not a Street Commission give equally satisfactory results in regard to the administration of our streets? It is safe to say that a commission acting under a good system and applying business methods would, with much smaller expenditure, give results infinitely more satisfactory than is possible to be got now by the haphazard expenditure of a much larger sum. System, continuity in office, and application of business principles would work wonders—in comparison.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. E. H. Smallpiece will be congratulated by many out of Toronto with whom his business relations with the press have brought him in contact. His claim to a seat on the Toronto School Board has been confirmed. If Mr. Smallpiece's services as a trustee will be as good as his work in his business capacity, he should make a useful satisfactory public servant..

In the vote on the civic reform measure on Monday in Montreal the polls were kept open from 9 o'clock to 7o'clock, the closing being extended from five o'clock to the later hour. It is related that this additiopal opportunity to vote was largely taken advantage of by working men, who working till 5 or 6 o'clock had no other opportunity to enter their votes. It seems to be wise and right to permit full opportunity for the expression of public opinion.

The immigration from the United States to the Canadian West this year totals 70,000. The influx in previous years came chiefly from the middle Western States, but this year nearly every State of the union contributes its share. The favourite district of the incomers is the country in the vicinity of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. That forms a justification for the building of this line, which, even before its completion, is a magnet to attract settlement and provide for the development of the Agricultural resources of our hitherto unbroken West.

The Examiner has received from the St. John, New Brunswick, Board of Trade, a document setting forth the claims of that city as a Canadian winter port. A front page diagram shows that the steamship connections of that port are with Liverpool, London, Manchester, Havre, Antwerp, Glasgow, Bristol, Dublin, Belfast, Capetown, Port Elizabeth, West India Islands, Havana, Mexico, Boston and several Canadian ports. The figures supplied show the increasing importance of St. John as a winter port. Last month the shipments amounted to $24,564,000, a growth from $4,848,768 in 1897.

A BLESSING IN DISGUISE

(Stratford Beacon)

In the palmy days of the barley trade, before the Dingley bill put a prohibitive duty on Canadian barley entering the United States, the Bay of Quinte district lands were almost entirely devoted to barley, and the rewards were rich. The land was suitable, and the farmers learned the trick of getting the seed in early. The crop, therefore, matured early in July, before the rains set in, and was invariably of a bright colour. It was eagerly sought for by brewers and dealers in the United States, they sending their representatives to be on the spot when the threshing was completed. A handsome premium was paid for the Bay of Quinte barley over all others on this continent, $1.25 per bushel being about the average, though some seasons the price went over $1.50. The crop was early harvested, it not being bound, but brought loose to the thresher. When the U.S. tariff on barley was made prohibitive, this industry had to be abandoned, and the farmers thought they were on the verge of ruin. But the extension of the dairying industry coming about this time, they fell into line and soon became as adept at dairying as they were in barley growing. The result is that they are now drawing much larger returns from their dairies than they did from the barley crop, though, of course, with more labour. Amherst Island, is a small island in the Bay of Quinte, near Kingston and the U.S. consul at the port says that the islanders realize annually from their cheese $36,000 or over nine times as much as they realized formerly from barley. It was a blessing in disguise for Canada when the U.S. tariff put the farmers out of the barley business.

SANITARY CONDITIONS IN COBALT

The Cobalt Citizen has the following repulsive picture of the sanitary or rather unsanitary conditions in the mining town:

With reeking filth piled to an enormous height on the site of what is known as the "Cobalt Dump Pile," so thoroughly permeated with poison which its own rottenness had generated, all Cobalt has been exposed to an epidemic far more serious than merely typhoid fever. Health officials may put on the ban and glowingly smooth over the situation. They may say to the public that "rumours of a more serious contagion, etc., are unfounded," but the public knows the truth.

How in the name of High Heaven do the public officials expect the children will grow and thrive under a condition so filthy that hogs cannot?

When some men have made mistakes they try to discredit those mistakes. Different ones want the public to think there is no cause for alarm. The typhoid situation is improving, they say. We hope so. The disease is of a mild type, they remind you again. And now there is almost a death a day from this mild type. Three deaths this week in homes in addition to those reported from the hospital. And there were three at the hospital up to Wednesday morning.

There is no desire to continually recall just how bad the situation is, but inasmuch as Town officials are prone to make light of the situation while lives are being lost, the public has a right to know the true condition. Publicity is a sure cure for some ills. With the citizenship of a community, intelligent as to true conditions, public officials cannot get too far negligent. It is too revolting to recall the situation as health inspectors found them at the dump pile. Just think! Sanitary conditions were not propitious to hog life and yet human souls are expected to exist! When little children died by the score because impregnated from the start with germ life such as was found in the Cobalt dump pile, men thought nothing of it. That precious sacrifice did not prompt them to look for the cause of deaths. But when hogs died and lay by the roadside, they were forced to consider the situation.

Mayor Lang has given proof of the situation when he says that for months he urged the sanitary inspectors to act. They were afraid of making enemies. Conditions grew worse. The Mayor urged and scolded again and again. No action was taken. All the money necessary to keep Cobalt clean was offered. And still no one acted. No one was moved to work for the public good. If they offended some one, dollars would be lost to their pockets.

SOWING THE WHIRLWIND

The following from the Catholic Record merits being read and laid to heart, especially by mothers of young girls:

A most deplorable and unfortunately not uncommon sight, is a crowd of young people on the streets at night. It is bad enough to have young men with cigarette adorned faces ogling and tramping up and down as if they were in a tread mill, but it blurs the eyes to see the boys and girls taking a post graduate course in the school of the pavement. One might as well put them in a pest house. The bloom of purity disappears. Reserve and dignity perish in contact with the familiarity of the streets. Slang and worse creep in the vocabulary. Curfew bell ordinance is invoked to put a stop to the nuisance. But the source of this is in the home. If parents were not criminally careless there would be fewer scandals, fewer smirched reputations, less sport and talk and giggling foolishness. If they took as much care of their children as they do of the furniture in their homes, or of their animals, there would be less cause to be pessimistic.

PROTRUDING PILES

Read the evidence that this distressing ailment is cured by DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

Some people find it hard to believe that anything short of a surgical operation will cure protruding piles. The doctors have brought about this belief. There is any amount of proof that Dr. Chase's Ointment is a positive cure for this as well as all other forms of piles.

Captain Wm. Smith, Revelstoke, B. C., writes:

"It is with much pleasure I state that I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for itching, protruding piles of many years standing, and it has completely cured me. I had previously tried many other remedies but they did me no good. I would strongly recommend this Ointment to those suffering from this complaint, for it is a good and genuine cure."

Mrs. Captain Clinansmith, Salvation Army, Essex, Ont., writes:

"It is with pleasure that I write to you in praise of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Two years ago I was taken with a severe attack of protruding piles and became so bad that I had to keep my bed and could lie in no position except on my stomach. Doctors could give me no help and the various oils and ointments used proved of no avail.

"One Saturday night when I was suffering untold agony my husband went to the drug store for a box of Dr. Chase's Ointment, which I had heard of as a cure for piles. Although I had almost given up hope, to the wonder of those around me, I was able to be up on Monday and have had no difficulty from piles since. As a treatment for all kinds of sores and burns, Dr. Chase's Ointment works like magic."

Winsted, Conn.—Her mind still bright and eyesight unimpaired, Mrs. Eneline Kellogg recently celebrated her ninety-eighth birthday. Aside from being a little deaf, Mrs. Kellogg is as well as she was half a century ago. Most of her time is spent in reading and sewing.

Old age should be a happy, healthy age. We all could grow old gracefully and probably live to be a hundred, did we jealously guard our most valuable possession—our health—in youth and middle age.

At the first sign of Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Kidney, Stomach or Skin Trouble, "Fruit-a-tives" should be taken. "Fruit-a-tives", or fruit juice tablets, not only cure the specific trouble, but also so strengthen and invigorate the entire system that there is a marked improvement in the general health.

A little care and "Fruit-a-tives", taken regularly, are all that is needed to bring most of us to a ripe old age.

NEWS FROM THE RAILROAD TOWN

Examiner Special.

Havelock, Sept 21. — Mr. J. R. Craig, of London (former resident of town), was here for a few hours on business Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Wright and baby Aileen spent Friday in Peterborough.

Mr. Carman Holcombe has secured a position as brakeman on the C.P.R. line between Smiths Falls and Montreal and left on Thursday to commence duties.

Miss Eva O'Brien is the guest of friends at Toronto.

Miss Minnie McWilliams is spending a short vacation at her home, Marmora.

Miss Edith Scott is spending a few days with friends at Peterborough.

Miss Frances and Caroline Scott spent last week with friends at Niagara Falls and Toronto.

Mr. J. W. Bryans is in Peterborough attending the bedside of her brother, Mr. Wm. Jackson, who is seriously ill.

Mrs. Thos. Lloyd entertained a few friends last Friday evening at her residence, Alexander street, in honour of her sister, Miss Clara Major, who left the following day for her home, Philadelphia, after spending the past three months in town with her sister, Mrs. Lloyd.

The fire alarm rang about 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, but the fire was only a small blaze, and was soon extinguished. It was at the west end of the town at Mr. Hardy's residence. No damage was done but the citizens greatly alarmed, for the wind was blowing very strong and a fire would have made quick headway, had it not been caught in the nick of time.

Dr. H. C. Kindred has been appointed associate coroner for the County of Peterborough.

An "At Home" will be held in the town hall on Monday evening, Sept. 20th, under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary of St. John's church. Refreshments will be served first, and afterwards a first-class programme will be given when selections will be given by Miss Evelyn Davis, a talented young elocutionist and entertainer of Toronto. Miss Evelyn Davis has a very pleasing and attractive presence. Her specialty is along lighter lines. She is an excellent child impersonator, yet in tragic story telling she occupies no ordinary position, as evidenced in her rendering of "The Kissing Cup Race." Some of the other good things which she will put on on Monday night will be "The Bridge of Sighs," and "Peckin" through the window.

Mr. Frank White will assist her in a few duets.

Mr. Milton Neal has moved into the residence lately occupied by Mr. Bloss Hart on Oak St.

The officials of the local township Sabbath School Association held a meeting in the basement of the Methodist church on Wednesday of last week and decided to establish a teacher's training class in aHvelock for the coming fall and winter. They feel that there is urgent need of properly taught and qualified Sunday school teachers, and it is said that P. O. Nelson has consented to conduct the class, which will consist of whoever desires to enter. The class will be held in one of the rooms, of the public school, one night a week.

Mr. Malloy, of Smith's Falls, road-master, was in town on Friday.

The Mother Superior of the Windsor Convent, Sister Ladouversier, and Sister Monica, of the same convent were the guests of the former's sisters, Mrs. Robson and Mrs. Voyer, for a few days this week, en route to their home in Kingston.

Mr. R. McGregor and children are visiting with friends in Peterborough.

Dr. Holdcroft left on Wednesday for Quebec, where he will spend a week fishing and hunting in the vicinity of Lake Wayagamac.

Mr. Matthews of Kingston, was the guest of Dr. Gardiner, of Ottawa, for-

Mr. A. Kenewasser, of Ottwa, formerly of Havelock, was in town Saturday and called on a few friends.

After an illness of four years, Mrs. R. P. Noland, aged thirty-four years, died in the Parry Sound hospital on Thursday, the 19th inst. The late Mrs. Nolan, who lived in Havelock for some twelve years, and who was highly respected and loved by a host of friends here, leaves a loving, devoted husband, and four little children to mourn her loss and to whom the heartfelt sympathy of all goes freely out.

The last services were held at West Toronto on Saturday morning, when High Requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Gallagher at nine o'clock. The flowers received were many and beautiful, testifying the high esteem in which departed one was held.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. McGuire, Mr. S. O'Hara, Mr. Th... Bennett and Mr. Jos. O'Brien ... aded the funeral obsequies at West Toronto on Saturday last.

Mr. Jack Roche left on Saturday last on a two months' vacation to the west and the Pacific coast.

Mr. and Mrs. Pye, of Clarksburg, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Wright during the past week.

Mrs. C. A. Ghent has returned from her home at Madoc, where she spent the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Graham, Miss Maud Graham, of town, and Mr. Rollie Graham, of Peterborough, attended the funeral of their granddaughter and niece Miss Pearl Webb, at Parkdale, Toronto, on Wednesday afternoon.

WANDERED IN WOODS NEAR LASSWADE

Examiner Special.

Lasswade, Sept., 21.—The chief subject of talk in our lively little village now, is the "Pie Social," Oct. 1st, gotten up in the interests of the Sunday School, and will be held in Grace Church. We hope to see a large crowd, etc.

The steam thresher managed by Mr. Archie McColl passed through the vicinity this week making its annual calls and leaving the farmers well satisfied with the result of their labour, the grain turning out well after the damage done by the hail storms in July.

Many are anticipating a good time at the Coe Hill Exhibition on the 23rd.

A load of our young people attended the basket social in Apsley on Friday night and report it a success.

Miss Katie Bullied visited her father on Sunday.

On Saturday last four of our villagers spent the greater part of the day roaming in the woods. The chief object of their search when they first entered the wood was black-berries but it ended up by searching for a way out as they had travelled a little farther north than they were aware of and became almost completely lost, but by good judgment of the older gentlemen, they all arrived safe and sound with the exception of a few scratches and torn garments, at their home shortly after three o'clock, tired and hungry. They have come to the conclusion that the blackberry crop is over for this year, especially for them.

We are pleased to see Mr. Wm. Philips in our midst again after a short absence.

Several attended the Surprise party in Methuen on Wednesday night.

We are very pleased to learn that nothing serious came of the accident on Wednesday forenoon of which Mr John Bullied was the chief object.

THE HEART A GREAT WORKER

What a wonder is the heart! Day and night it works away pumping tons of blood through the body and never tires or wears out so long as it is supplied with rich, red blood, such as is formed by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. While sending supplies of nutrition to other parts of the body the heart renews and rebuilds its own wasted cells and so retains health and strength.

HASTINGS METHODIST CHURCH PRESENTS FINE APPEARANCE

Examiner Special.

Hastings, Sept. 20.—We regret to chronicle the demise of Mrs. Gibson, wife of Mr. B. J. Gibson, of this place, which took place about a week ago. Mrs. Gibson had only been a resident of Hastings for about two years but during that time had made a host of warm friends who regret to lose her from their midst. She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her husband, one son, George; four brothers and one sister. Interment took place in the family burying ground, Centre Church Cemetery, Seymour, where Mrs. Gibson had spent most of her life.

At the recent meeting of the Council, Mr. B. F. Doxee, as representative from the Methodist Congregation, waited on the council, asking them to build a cement walk in front of the Church, which request is to be granted. This will add very much to the appearance of the Church which is now undergoing repairs.

Mr. John Thomson, of Wheatley, is holidaying here, the guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rev. D. A. Thomson.

Mrs. Dr. Edmison and little son have been spending a week in Toronto visiting her parents.

Quite a number of our citizens took in the Toronto Exhibition, and returned well pleased with the trip.

Miss Deane of Peterborough is spending a few days in town, the guest of Miss Tate.

Rev. A. Edmison spent a few days with his brother Dr. Edmison.

Mr. W. Stinson and daughter, Miss Annie have been visiting friends in Cobourg.

Mrs. George Bucklin, of Mexico and Mrs. Wm. Porter of Otonabee, visited at the home of their niece, Mrs. G. R. Beavis, on Thursday last.

Mrs. Wanamaker and daughter of Lakefield are visiting Mrs. J. Lynn and family.

The congregation of St. George's Church are making preparations for their annual dinner, which will be held in the Town Hall on Thursday, September 30th.

The contractor's dredge has been laid up for the season having completed its due amount of work. Her assistance was called into requisition the other day to set free the tug, "Maple Leaf," which had stuck so fast on some rocks that she was compelled to remain there over night.

Mr. Michal has resumed his duties as principal of the Public School after spending his vacation at the home of his parents.

The Steamer, "Naiad," passed through here on Tuesday on her way to Healey Falls, in the interest of the Fish and Game Department.

An Ounce of PONSO Is Worth A Pound of Cure

1lb. of Cure

Because PONSO Prevents

Nine-tenths of all sickness could be prevented if proper treatment is given in time. That old saying—"an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" is even more true today than ever.

If every family only knew the real value of PONSO, particularly in preventing diseases, not a home in the land would be without a bottle.

PONSO is a tonic-germicide, and since practically all diseases start from a germ, you can readily understand why it promptly cures and prevents sickness.

PONSO KILLS THE GERMS and it cleanses the system of the poison. Its tonic influence builds up the worn-out nerves and tissues, purifies the blood and invigorates every part of the body. Taken occasionally as a preventive it will keep you in excellent health because it will keep your system free from all germs and impurity.

A Full Size Bottle FREE

We want you to know what Ponso will do in your home. We don't ask you to judge by what we say or what others say it has done for them. We know there is no proof like your own actual experience so we are willing to buy the first bottle to prove what Ponso will do for you. If you have never tried it, please fill out the coupon in the right hand corner of this advertisement. Tear it off and mail to us. We will send by return mail an order on the druggist for a 50c bottle absolutely free. If you are suffering from any of the disorders mentioned in the left corner of this advertisement, or if you want a remedy to take as a preventive, here is your opportunity to learn how millions of people are keeping well and getting well quickly from the many usual family troubles, without costing you a penny. Send in coupon today. You can't afford to miss this liberal offer.

The Imperial Drug Co.,

Gentlemen:- The results from the trial bottle of Ponso were good and I feel confident it will effect a permanent cure so have decided to continue its use. I have recommended it to my friends and neighbors for I believe it to be a most remarkable remedy. Will write you again hoping to state a permanent cure soon.

Yours truly,

M. Brown.

WEDDING BELLS

SWEENEY—MULCAHY.

A pretty wedding was solemnised in St. John's Roman Catholic church, Keene, yesterday morning at ten o' clock, when Miss Minnie Mulcahy, daugter of Mr. Timothy Mulcahy, Otonabee, was united in amrriage to Mr. John Sweeney, of Winnipeg, and son of Mr. John Sweeney, Otonabee. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Kelly in the presence of only the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties. The bride who was given away by her father, looked very pretty in a dress of blue voile over taffeta. She wore a hat to match. She was assisted by Miss Florescence Coughlin, who was becomingly attired in blue mulle and a black hat. Mr. Frank Eana, of Peterborough acted as groomsman.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the residence of the bride's parents, where a dainty wedding breakfast was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Sweeney left on the 4,38 C.P.R. train for Winnipeg, where they will in future reside.

SAID FAREWELL TO ORGANIST

On Thursday evening, Aug. 26, the young people of the Wilberforce Methodist church, met at the home of Mr. Henry Conkell. The purpose of their gathering was to show their appreciation of Miss Conkell's services in the choir, 'ere she left our community. For many years Miss Conkell has faithfully taken charge of the organ, and in every way cheerfully supported the musical interests of our church. Now she has left our midst to form a home of her own. During the course of the evening small gifts were presented to her in the name of her young friends in the community. We feel added interest in her wedding, as her husband, Mr. Stocker, has served this community both as preacher and teacher. We all wish Mr. and Mrs. Stocker a very happy life in their new home at Ottawa.

Farmers Should Know The Yield In Milk From Each Cow

Most farmers can estimate closely the number of bushels of grain raised, and tell fairly accurately the number of tons of hay grown, but when it comes to the really most important income of the farm, the product of each cow, it's all a blank, and they say, "Oh, I don't know, I get my cheque each month, that's all I care about."

While knowledge of the total weight of milk delivered at the factory is necessary, it never conveys to the farmer the information he stands in need of as to the profit made by each cow in the stable. That information is absolutely necessary to him if he desires to consider himself a credit to his profession, a first-class, business-like dairyman. Otherwise these satisfying totals or delusive averages will continue to allow the one or two poor cows in every herd to consume good feed for which no profitable return is ever given.

In many herds where no attempt at checking up individual performance has been made, there is frequently to be found a difference of $30 or $40 in the earning power of the best and poorest cow. Farmers need to consider that statement carefully. In the Dominion are to be found herds, let us say of 12 or 14 cows, with a fairly good average yield of perhaps as high as 5,500 lbs. milk, where the highest yield is close on to 8,000 lbs. milk and 330 lbs. fat; but, where the lowest yield is only about 3,700 lbs. milk and 150 lbs. fat. Such comparisons are only made possible by noting the actual performance of each individual milking period. Weigh and sample cow for her full milking period. Weigh and sample regularly, make sure that each cows brings in good profit.

The "At Home" given by the ladies of St. John's Church on Monday night in the Town Hall, proved a success and also a delightful treat to the many who were present. Refreshments were served from 4 o'clock until 8.30, after which a most pleasing programme followed. Miss Evelyn Mae Davis of Toronto (elocutionist) being the chief entertainer of the evening, and too much praise cannot be given her. Miss Davis has a very pleasing and attractive voice and will gladly be heard again. Her specialty is along lighter lines. She is an excellent child impersonator, and yet in tragic story telling she occupies no ordinary position, as evidenced in her rendering of The Horse Race. Some of the others which she gave were "The Bridge of Sighs," and "Peekin' through the Window," the latter proving a favorite. She also sang in duet (Mr. Frank White of town assisting her) "Reuben and Rachel," and "Smarty" which brought forth much applause. The ohter numbers of the programme consisted of, two vocal solos by Miss Lillian Webb of town, an instrumental duet by Misses Maud Sexsmith and Annie Smith, all of which was highly appreciated. Rev. Mr. Balfour, resident clergyman, gave a short address and Rev. Mr. Holdsworth, Rector of St. John's Church most ably filled the position as chairman, and made a most suitable opening address.

A WOMAN'S STRATEGY

(By Harold Carter.)

"Senor," said the warden, apologetically, "it is the wife of the bandit Coltello waits to see him."

The warden looked up from his breakfast with a humorous smile. On the preceding evening it had been his intention to deny her admittance, even though Coltello was about to depart to begin his sentence of 14 years at the galleys. For Coltello, though only a boy in years, was the most notorious bandit in Spain, and had, moreover, escaped on two occasions from prison by some clever ruse. But the governor was a humorist and could not forego his jest.

"Hearken, Hernandez," he said, "I have received a letter from the parish priest. He says that there is a plot. As soon as you open the door of the cell the woman will leap upon you and gag you, change clothes with the man, place on his head a flaxen wig to give the resemblance of her own hair, and remain in the cell while Coltello walks out to freedom. Remember, he was onece a clever mountebank. Shall we have a jest with them?" he continued, pinching the warden's ear.

The warden smiled. He knew his master.

"Ecco! Station men at the entrance to the outer court, let yourself be bound and gagged without resistance, and we shall catch the bandit at the moment he passes out, thus perpetrating a jest at his expense, since he has so often outwitted us."

The warden ushered the fair-haired, noisily-weeping women to the door of the cell, opened it, and, as if he had forgotten something, turned aside Instantly he was bound and gagged blindfolded and carried into the cell where he was deposited upon the flooring, apparently overcome with terror. Straining his ears, he could hear the swift sound of a razor as Coltello shaved his face; then the rustle of garments as he changed clothes with his wife. Five minutes later a figure came from the recesses of the cell, tripping clumsily over its skirts, made a low, mocking bow after removing the warden's eye-bandage, and departed. A while later the woman came forward.

"Permit me to apologize for inconveniencing the senor," she said, unfastening his bonds. Ecco! If you catch Coltello now, then he does not own the fleetest mare in Spain."

As if in answer, wardens came running in, dragging the masquerading bandit with them. His skirts were awry, and the flaxen wig had tumbled from his hair, revealing his closely cropped black poll. They flung Coltello into his cell, shouting with noisy mirth. Then the portly figure of the old governor appeared.

"I thank you for the excellent jest you have provided for me, madam," he said, bowing low to the embarrassed woman. "Before you depart my maid shall assist you to adjust your own attire." He burst into coarse laughter. "Did you think you could deceive me with such a clumsy trick?" he shouted. "Begone, woman, or you shall be whipped."

Her skirts over her arm, dabbing at her eyes with her handkerchief, the woman went slowly from the prison precincts. Then the governor turned to the bandit.

"As for you, you shall be flogged before you depart for the galleys," he cried. "Hernandes, Tomasso, trace him to the triangles."

Coltello remained doggedly silent. The triangles were erected in the prison yard, and, after a half hour's preparation, the prisoner was brought out to be tied up. Suddenly he fell at the governor's feet.

"No, no, do not whip me," he cried, in a distinctly feminine voice.

The governor started. The wardens uttered savage oaths and rushed forward. Hernandez seized the prisoner by the arm and peered into his face.

"God!" he cried. "It is the woman after all. She has tricked us."

But before anyone could speak, a messenger entered, bearing a piece of soiled paper covered with an illiterate scrawl.

"I thank you, senor, for releasing me," the message ran. "Had you but raised my wig you would have seen my own hair—which is as dark as my wife's—beneath. We did not exchange clothing, knowing that justice is blind. Permit me to recommend madam to your courteous consideration. If you release her she will say nothing of the manner of my escape, not wishing that so courtly a senor should become the laughing stock of Madrid."

The Correct Millinery Styles are Here

New Models in Clever Hat Styles Mark the Approach of Fall.

With the changing of the forest leaves from the bright green to the dull reds and browns, each whispers the message "Fall has Come", the new styles in women's headwear make their appearance. Even at this early stage our Millinery department is beginning to offer proof of its leadership.

Direct from Paris, possessing all the originality and all the smartness, which is the birthright of a Parisian Hat, come the most bewitching styles in Hats for every occasion.

Hats for Street Wear, Dress and all occasions both formal and informal, possessing every qualification which would recommend them to well dressed women.

Their Trimmings cover a wide range, for fashion gives great latitude this year. Velvet, Fancy Feathers, Breasts and Wings of novel character are much in evidence. Large hats continue to be the vogue, for large crowns are the prominent characteristics of French Millinery.

Whether you intend to buy now or not, come to this initial showing and satisfy yourself as to the superiority of our Millinery Creations. Come prepared however, for the alluring prices will most likely tempt you into early buying.

Prof. Kilpatrick's Address On Evangelism Was Appreciated

Yesterday afternoon a conference was held on evangelism by the members of the Peterborough Presbytery, in view of the simultaneous campaign in all the churches in Presbytery during the month of November. Prof. Kilpatrick of Knox College, Toronto, was invited to be present and meet with the members and explain the lines and methods to follow in the work.

The professor first dealt with the meaning of evanbelism, stating that the Word of God had fallen somewhat in disrepute because of unwise methods used. To him evangelism meant a christianity which implied a message or a declaration of the Word of God to men. In other words the simple truth of the whole matter was that God saves through Christ. The apoeltes and preachers of all ages had declared that truth. This was the central, the fundamental and the ultimate truth. In order to have a permanent work, sane methods must be pursued. This would imply using all the best talent in song, in prayer, in personal dealing and in preching.

In connection with this work the use of these methods and the declaration of the one great central truht there would b ethe splendid inevitableness of the harvest following seed growing. He declared that it was the business of the Church to undertake this evangelism just as the mother cares for her children.

A vote of thanks to Prof. Kilpatrick, moved by Rev. R. Pogue and Rev. Mr. Beatty, was unanimously carried.

RESOLUTION PASSED

At a largely attended meeting of the Law Association held at the secretary's office at noon, the following resolution accompanied by feeling reference to the late John Moloney was unanimously passed and directed to be forwarded to Mrs. Moloney.

The members of the Legal Profession of Peterborough deplore the death of Mr. John Moloney for many years the Clerk of the County and Surrogate Courts, and local registrar of the High Court of Justice.

Mr. Moloney during his tenure of office was a careful, conscientious officer, ever aiming to act in conformity with established practice, always obliging and always scrupulously careful in the discharge of his official duties. In private life Mr. Moloney was the friend of everyone, honest, upright and in his own quiet way, charitable and generously responsive to the appeal of the needy. In his death we lose one who was a good citizen and a personal friend of all who had the privilege of knowing the kindness of his heart, the genuineness of his friendship and the simplicity of his life.

We condole with his bereaved wife and direct that a copy of this resolution be sent to her, and that it be inscribed in the minutes of the Local Law Association.

THE PRUDENTIAL, ONE OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES, OPENS A BRANCH OFFICE IN THIS CITY.

Almost every one has heard of or knows something of The Prudential Insurance Company of America, Home Office, Newark, N. J., often called the Gibraltar life insurance company, because of its use of the Rock of Gibraltar as a trade-mark.

This big company has established a branch office in this city and is conducting business in both branches of insurance, Industrial and Ordinary.

About thirty-four years ago Industrial insurance was unknown in the United States. Introduced on this continent by John F. Dryden, founder and present chief executive of The Prudential, the industrial plan at once found favor with the public.

This life insurance is applicable to every member of the family, from one year of age to seventy.

The premiums are collected weekly from the homes of the insured and are from three cents per week upward, according to the amount insured for, thus bringing the benefits of life insurance protection within the means of the wage-earning population.

Much of the thrift and economy of this same wage-earning population may be traced to Industrial insurance. The habit of saving required to meet the weekly premiums unconsciously, but surely, inculcates similar habits of thrift and saving in other directions.

In the Ordinary branch all the popular forms of Life and Endowment policies are issued, in amounts from $1,000 up, and the cost is the lowest consistent with the liberal provisions of the policy and the high grade of life insurance afforded. As an investment a Prudential policy offers superior advantages.

The high standing of The Prudential makes it possible to do business satisfactorily, because there can be no doubt of a Prudential promise.

The Prudential has written three-quarter millions of policies in force, representing nearly a billion and a half of insurance.

In extending its field of operations to this city The Prudential offers a splendid opportunity for our young men to obtain profitable employment. Progress and promotion will be quick if humble and ability are shown. Any young man desirous of making money and building up a successful future should consult The Prudential's representative here.

Prudential Agents will be glad to furnish full and complete information concerning the plans of The Prudential to any one. You should take an interest in life insurance, for it may make a big difference in your family's happiness some day.

Attacked by Hogs.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 22.—An unusual tragedy occurred at Chilliwack, in which James R. Hoskin, aged 25, son of an Anglican clergyman at Mansfield, England, lost his life.

Hoskin, in company with Charles Carter, a farmer, was driving pigs to market along the highway, when the animals became uncontrollable. One of them attacked him. Hoskin lost his footing and several other animals immediately jumped on him and gored him with their tusks. Carter ran for help, and three men, armed with clubs, finally drove off the hogs. Hoskin died from shock and loss of blood. He had been but a short time in the country.

Thanked His Stars.

When the French revolution broke out a number of scientists lost their lives, but Lalande, the astronomer, only paid the more attention to the skies and its constellations. When he found, after the reign of terror, that he had escaped the fury of the mob he exclaimed gratefully, "I may thank my stars for it." Would any apparent jest possess more genuine truth?

Allison tells how during Napoleon's Egyptian campaign no sooner were the mamelukes observed at a distance than the word was given, "Form square; artillery to the angles; asses and ammans to the center." The command afforded no little merriment to the soldiers even at such an exciting moment and made them call the asses demiavans.

Located.

Diogenes, lantern in hand, entered the village drug store. "Say, have you anything that will cure a cold?" he asked.

"No, sir, I have not," answered the pill compiler.

"Give me your hand," exclaimed Diogenes, dropping his lantern. "I have at last found an honest man."

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Mr. John Moloney, Clerk of the County Court at Peterboro, died yesterday.

Remittance Men Worst Nuisance.

Quebec, Sept. 22.—The Labor Congress yesterday settled down to work. The report of W. R. Trotter, British agent, was read relative to misrepresentation to undesirable intending immigrants from the British Isles. It declared that Canada does not want, first of all, and pre-eminently, the "remittance men," who live on remittances from long-suffering relatives at home.

There was another class, in every way respectable, composed of professional men and tradesmen, for whom there was no work in Canada.

"The men wanted in Canada are those who have some knowledge of agriculture," said the report. "There are many openings for such men, but they must be careful. Canada is a new country and its people are full of hope. It is suffering from honest exaggeration.

"It is suffering, too, from a worse evil—from a superabundance of real estate agents and speculators in land. It is, however, so good a country that exaggeration can but harm it, and we, who have no land to sell, are doing it the best service we can when we tell the truth about it."

Southern States In Hurricane.

Washington, D.C., Sept. 22.—Central last night in Mississippi, and sweeping north at the rate of 200 miles a day, a hurricane which has devastated the gulf coast and left a trail of wreck and ruin through four states, continues on its course with unabated fury.

Of the ruin that it has wrought, no one can give an estimate. In New Orleans alone five are known to be dead and a million dollars will not repair the damage done to the beautiful crescent city. It is said that plate glass alone will cost $100,000 to replace.

From the little aristocratic summer colonies on the Louisiana and Mississippi gulf coast, come vague tales of devastation, and fears that many lives have been lost. The wealthy summer tourists who own pleasure craft are wont to spend much time on them, and it is possible that many have been lost.

Ex-Cashier Acquitted.

Brockville, Sept. 22.—A jury at the Assizes, after being out five minutes, acquitted Miss Grace Henderson of the charge of stealing $3,500 from the Thousand Islands Railway at Gananoque. Loose management in the office and poor bookkeeping were proven by the defence as the causes of the shortage. Miss Henderson, as cashier, using the money to cover up "L.O.U.'s" of her superiors.

Kingston, Sept. 22.—J. K. Robertson, M.A., has been appointed lecturer in physics, at Queen's. He matriculated at Toronto University in 1903.

THE COMPROMISE.

He Thought He Was Firm and Knew He Was Considerate.

The young man had entered that mysterious realm called matrimony, and as it was his first offense his father was handing him some paternal advice as to how he should treat the young wife.

"When you have any little differences of opinion, my son," he said to the boy, "if you can't persuade Margaret that you are right—and you probably can't, for they are all about alike—you must compromise. Be firm, yet be considerate and compromise."

"Yes, father," replied the son.

"I well remember a little experience," and a reminiscent expression came over the old man's face, "on the very threshold of the married life of your mother and myself, and it was the basis of all future disputes. It was this way: I wanted to spend the summer, our first vacation together, in Maine, and your mother wanted to go to Saratoga. That was thirty years ago. But I shall never forget how firm and yet how considerate I was with your mother and how we compromised, avoiding all dispute. We stayed from Saturday noon to Tuesday morning at Bar Harbor, and then we spent the rest of the summer at Saratoga. Yes, indeed," the old man added, with a sigh, "that's the only way to deal with a woman. You must be firm, but be willing to compromise a little once in awhile, as I have done with your mother."—New York Tribune.

TIGERS IN INDIA.

Strange Hindoo Beliefs Concerning the Man Eaters.

In India the traditions of folklore are numerous and strange. Among those pertaining to the tiger the following are the most peculiar: The uneducated Hindoo (and he is in the great majority) believes that the ghost of a man killed by a tiger rides on the head of the beast that slew him to warn him of danger and to guide him to new victims. It is declared that God provides for the tiger's daily wants to the amount of 1 rupee a day—that is to say, if the tiger kills a calf worth 6 rupees he will not be allowed another victim for five days.

Eating the flesh of a tiger is supposed to give one great courage and alertness, but the whiskers must first be singed off the beast or his spirit will haunt the man who fed off him, and he is likely to be turned into a tiger in the next world.

The following incident really occurred in a small Indian village in the interior: One of the villagers was unfortunately killed by a tiger. The police investigated the accidental death and rendered this verdict: "Pandu died of a tiger eating him. There was no other cause of death. Nothing was left of him save his bones and some fingers, which probably belonged to either the right or left hand."—Washington Star.

The World Went Round.

When Bloggins senior on the occasion of his annual party was obliging his guests with "'Tis Love That Makes the World Go Round," Master William Bloggins seized the opportunity to retire for a few minutes behind the Japanese screen with his sire's half smoked cigar.

The applause subsiding, Master Bloggins was observed by one of the company to be looking far from well. His face had taken on the hue of putty, and his eyes stood out like small hat pegs.

"Good gracious, Willie! What's the matter?" cried Mrs. Bloggins in alarm. "I believe you've been smoking."

Willie shook his head.

"'Tain't that," he declared untruthfully. "If it's true what father's been singing about,' I—I re-reckon I'm in love!"—London Express.

Astronomical.

Some curious and interesting astronomical phenomena are recorded in the old Chinese annals which go back to a great antiquity. In 687 B. C. a night is mentioned without clouds and without stars. This may perhaps refer to a total eclipse of the sun, but if so the eclipse is not mentioned in the Chinese list of eclipses. In the year 141 B. C. it is stated that the sun and moon appeared of a deep red color during five days, a phenomenon which caused great terror among the people. In 74 B. C. it is related that a star as large as the moon appeared and was followed in its motion by several stars of ordinary size. This probably refers to an unusually large bolide, or fire ball. In 33 B. C. a fall of meteoric stones is recorded.

Got the Hard Stuff.

Jedson.—Ha! Ha! Ha! Silas—What's the joke, Jedson? Jedson—Why, just as soon as the county went prohibition old Hiram Hardapple got bunsoed. Silas—What was the game? Jedson—Why, Hiram got a circular that stated some firm up in town would send him a keg of hard stuff for $2. Hiram sent the $2 and smacked his lips. Silas—Gosh! And what came back? Jedson—Scrap iron, and they said if that wasn't hard enough they'd send him a keg of spikes at the usual rates.—Chicago News.

GLENALDA DOINGS AND HAPPENINGS

Special to The Examiner.

Glendale, Sept. 20.—Threshing is the order of the day. The toot, toot of the steam thresher breaks the stillness of the morning air, and the hum of the machine makes sweet music in the ears of the farmers as the bushels pile up. Thanksgiving day should mean much to the people of our fair Dominion this year. Good crops of grain, good crops of roots, god crops of fruit, combine to make it a banner year.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Snelgrove, Oakliffe Lodge, spent last week in Havelock, Tweed and Tamworth.

Mr. John Troller is building an ice house. Even to think of ice in this warm weather helps to keep Johnnie cool.

A Harvest Home dinner was held on Sept. 8th, under the auspices of the Glenalda Methodist church; the proceeds to go towards the erection of a shed. Rev. Mr. Garbutt, of Apsley, attended.

Mr. Robt. Steen and Miss Lucy Steen were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Snelgrove on Sunday.

Mr. S. L. Purdy has a gang of men employed lifting sunken logs out of Outlet bay, near the bridge. A large number have been taken out of the water and piled on the shore for another year.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Pennsylvania, were guests at the Lakeview house last week.

The I. O. O. F. met at Lakeview house, Lono Lake during the week. Several new members were initiated. Mr. Brown, organiser, was in attendance. Dr. A. Bell, of Apsley, attended for the medical examination of the candidates.

Mr. Duncan Brown, of Apsley, was a guest at Lakeview house during the week.

Dr. A. Bell, Apsley, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Snelgrove, on Monday evening.

Miller's Grip Powders Cure.—Wm. Madill, Druggist.

RALLY DAY

The Charlotte Street Sabbath School observed Rally Day on Sunday afternoon, September 19th. A large crowd of scholars and friends of the school gathered to encourage the teachers and officers in their work.

Mr. Girven, who has recently come to the city, gave a very interesting and helpful address on Sunday School work. Mr. Downey followed with a few well-chosen remarks.

The music was of a high order. The orchestra played several times. Misses Howell and Pringle and Mr. James Brown sang very acceptably.

Charlotte Street Teachers and Officers Entertained

On Tuesday evening of this week, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Henderson were "At Home" to the Officers and Teachers of the Charlotte Street Sabbath School. Mr. Boxall, of Lindsay, gave a splendid address, dealing with Sabbath School work. Miss Pringle delighted all by her beautiful solo. Mr. Downey sang; "My Father Knows" very sweetly. Mr. Kidd made a good chairman. After light refreshments had been served and a vote of thanks had been given, including all who took part, the gathering broke up all realizing that a very pleasant evening had been spent.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—In regard to the several dumping places in the city, is it not about time that those officials (on salary and supposed to be on duty) get a move on and try to protect the residents in the immediate vicinity of the aforesaid dumps. It is exasperating to a housekeeper to have her house swept and garnished throughout and then have it filled with ashes or dust from windblown coal ashes or other dust.

Yours respectfully,
Housecleaner.

To the Editor of The Examiner:—

The report of Dr. Bruce Smith on his recent inspection of the local gaol has fallen into the same error as that usually made by Grand Juries in their presentments, in regard to the poor being kept in the county gaol. The people have always been very generour towards those deserving charity. Any deserving case of a man or woman wanting a ohme has always been provided with one, either in the Protestant Home or in the House of Providence. It appears to me that the ones in the county gaol are those who would not submit to the rules of these institutions. They are the criminal poor and the public must distinguish between the public and the deserving poor.—Yours. TRUTH.

Sir,—And is it not strange steel lockers are required at the Y.M.C.A.? Would it not have been better and more honest to have done away with them altogether instead of taking your money and allowing oyu to be robbed? Last night's "Star" has an article on the dealing of athletics, but does not get at the reasons, the chief being the expense and the way the so-called prizes are manipulated. There is a "holp-up" in Athletics here as in England.

World's Best Catching Record Held By These Battered Hands

JIM M'GUIRE'S BATTERED HANDS

Sometimes when somebody tries to slip one over in base ball—like claiming a record for some individual—somebody else bobs up and kicks in the skylight.

It was only a few days ago that a certain eminent base ball statistician flashed the word that Geo. Gibson, the clever Pirate backstop, had shattered the everlasting blazes out of the long distance consecutive catching record by performing in 112 straight games. Everyboy accepted his statement.

That is, almost everybody. Jim McGuire, a big league manager, came through with a chuckle and called attention to the fact that in 1905 he participated back of the wind pad in every game played by the Washington team, of which outfit he was the star receiver. As the team played 133 games and the Deacon caught every one, his performance must of necessity stand until Gibson or someone else succeeds in registering higher.

An idea of the life of a backstop may be gained by the layman by casting a glance at the illustration showing McGuire's hands as they are to-day—the result of his years back of the plate where the protection afforded catchers was not as complete as it is to-day.

BADGER CAPTAIN ALL 'ROUND STAR

Madison, Wis., Sept. 20.—John W. Wilce, captain of this year's Wisconsin Varsity eleven, is one of the trio who have re-established the university in the college athletic world. The others are "Biddy" Rogers, who captained the football and basket ball teams during his last year, and John Messmer, the track, foot ball and base ball star.

Wilce is one of the grandest athletes Wisconsin ever turned out. He won a name in athletics when attending West Division high school, Milwaukee, when he was the mainstay of his school in all the scholastic meets.

Wilce stroked the freshman eight his first year at college, when the freshies defeated Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania and Syracuse. Twice since he has been a member of the varsity eight, and will captain the 1910 crew.

He has played on two varsity elevens and in 1907 and 1908 was the All Western full back by unanimous choice. He has played on two varsity basket ball teams and will play this year.

In addition to his athletic career, Wilce is a leader in scholastic and student affairs and president of the Y.M.C.A.

TO WIND UP THE BASEBALL SEASON

Meeting of Senior City League Executive On Friday Night.

Mr. E. N. McWilliams, President of the Senior City Baseball League has called a meeting of the managers of the four teams at 7.15 o'clock in the Examiner office.

It is desired that everyone be punctually on hand as the season's business will be wound up.

RUGBY FOR THE BOY

"Rugby is too rough a game."

How often the followers of the gridiron sport hear comments like this about the game. It's too rough, and the boys get hurt, and it isn't good for them.

Of course, if fond mammas want their youthful pride and hope to grow up like a banana plant in a greenhouse there is little use in arguing the point. The game is too strenuous for mollycoddles.

On the contrary, if the boy is to be taught to fight his own way in the great battle of life there is no game that will teach him how in a better way. He'll get plenty of knocks and raise many a healthy crop of bruises, but he gains stamina, and the knocks he'll get, if he is an ordinary cuss, in after life will be equally as hard.

Get a canvas suit for the boy, well padded, and let him get out and fight the battles on the Rugby field first.

RUNNING

Willie Parker of Hiawatha is running his first big race to-night when he takes part in the ten-mile race in the C.A.A.U. championships which are being held under the auspices of the Irish Canadians at Scarboro Beach. Parker has shown great speed for a youngster in his work around here although he never attempted a ten-mile race before. He will go up against classy company as the best runners in Ontario including McCormick, who won the Foster Marathon at the Canadian National Exhibition.

The Sporting Editor of the Examiner has received a letter from Dick Baker, formerly trainer of the local Y.M.C.A. Harriers and now with the West End Y.M.C.A., Toronto, in which he says that he expects to clean up the ten-mile even with Jack Tait and Alf. Sellers. Young Parker should however, bear watching. He was accompanied to Toronto by Arthur Johnston, proprietor of the Windsor Hotel, who will look after him.

Young Man Who Said He Was Buying For Vancouver Dealers Bought Heavily From Eastern Wholesalers and Cashed Expense Checks — Carloads of Goods Now on Their Way to West.

Vancouver, B.C., Sept. 23.—A remarkable series of frauds have been uncovered here in which Vancouver firms are interested, but in which eastern Canadian and American wholesale firms have also been victimized.

Robert Kelly, head of Kelly, Douglas & Co., wholesale groceries, received a letter a week ago from an Eastern supply house thanking them for a large order, and stating that the firm was very favorably impressed with Kelly's buyer, Mr. Blank. Kelly has no employe of that name, and investigation showed that a "confidence" operator has visited wholesalers in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Battle Creek, Chicago and other cities, given large orders in the name of Kelly, Douglas & Co. and cashed a thousand dollars' worth of expense cheeks. These checks are specially forged with the photo of the Kelly C. Douglas building, and marked "accepted" with a fake stamp of the Bank of Montreal.

The names of other Vancouver firms and banks have similarly been used and it is thought that the swindler has probably clean up at least $10,000, while there is no telling how many carloads of goods are on the way west on his bogus orders.

FINES TO BE PAID BACK

Chancellor Boyd Quashes Convictions of Men Who Were Fined for Selling Cider.

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

Toronto. — Chancellor Boyd this morning gave judgment quashing the conviction of James Lepangie of Cochrane and 10 others were fined $50 and costs or imprisonment for selling cider within 20-mile limit of G.T. Pacific Chancellor Boyd holds that there is no evidence that the cider was intoxicating and orders the fines paid back.

IONS CONVICTED OF ASSAULT

At the conclusion of the service, a meeting of the congregation will be held.

IS MRS. TURNER GUILTY OF WHOLESALE INFANTICIDE?

Detectives Working on Information Which May Lead to Important Discoveries---Four Babies in House at One Time---Their Disposal is Not Clearly Explained---Police and Detectives Busy.

Toronto, Sept. 23.—Three people who heard the Authers' baby being choked to death and ran to the room where the deed was being committed, is the latest and most startling feature of the evidence which the police have gleaned in the case of Mrs. Maud Turner, charged with the murder of the child.

Inspector Duncan says that he will produce three people who were in a house with Mrs. Turner Tuesday night and heard sounds as of a child choking. They rushed to her room, where the sounds seemed to be coming from, and entered the room They found Mrs. Turner much agitated. She protested that the sound was coming from outside the window, but they insisted that it was not.

She, however, persuaded them to leave the room to go and look at the place where she said, and when they returned the sounds had ceased.

Dr. Dunlop, then believed to be "Dr. Turner," the woman's husband, said that the excitement had prostrated his wife and begged them to keep out, saying that he would give her something to quiet her, and they complied.

Information has also reached the police which may lead to the discovery of wholesale baby murders. They were informed from one source that a short time ago the woman had four babies in one house, and that all these have disappeared. Asked as to their disposal by those interested in them, she told of several places to which they had been taken, but when enquiries were prosecuted no trace of any of them could be had at the addresses indicated.

A further hint in this direction was given when application was made by a woman to adopt the child found at the Wood street house. This woman says that she knows the parents of the child and wants to adopt it, but she declares that it is not the King baby, as has been generally believed up to this time.

The question now arises, what has become of the King baby? It is also ascertained that Mrs. Turner took another child for adoption before either the King or the Authers' baby, and this, too, has disappeared. All of these clues are being followed by the police, and half a dozen of headquarters detectives are being kept busy on this case alone.

NO LIGHT YET UPON THE SPRINGVILLE MYSTERY

Detective Miller Says There are Several Very Serious Obstacles in the Way to Baffle the Authorities---Almost Impossible Task to Identify the Remains.

"How are you getting on in the Springville case?" was the question asked of Detective Miller by the Examiner this morning. The inspector was in town to-day to attend the inquest which will be opened to-night at Springville.

"Well it is a most difficult case," replied the detective. "There are several serious obstacles in the way of a successful solution of the problem. First there is the fact that there is not the slightest mark or trace around the body that would lead to the identification of the remains and without establishing the identity of the person. I am up against a blank wall as far as solving the case goes. There is nothing in the pockets or in the clothing that can help me in the matter.

"Do you think that the post mortem will discover the cause of death?" asked the reporter.

"It is not very likely that it will," was the reply. "If the man had been shot it would be possible that a mark of the bullet might be found on one of the bones. Otherwise the doctors will not be able to state whether the person died of heart disease, was poisoned or cut his throat with the razor found."

Detective Miller accompanied Coroner Dr. Gray to Springville this afternoon to be present at the inquest.

Free Methodist Church Will Be Erected In Spring Of 1910

Miss Babcock and Miss Clarke, the two young women who have been in charge of the Free Methodist church here during the past year, have been instructed by Conference to remain in Peterborough another year. They have been earnest workers and have striven assidiously for the advancement of the church in this city. It has also been decided that the new church will not be constructed this year. The proposed building will be erected on Aylmer St. opposite the G.T.R. station, but the work will not be commenced until next spring. The funds have come in very satisfactorily but it has been deemed wiser to delay actual building operations until 1910.

Old Resident Of Lang Passes Away

Mrs. Wm. Hastie Died This Morning at the Family Residence After Illness of Three Months.

Many friends of the family throughout Peterborough county will regret to learn of the death of Ann Brodie, wife of Mr. Wm. Hastie of the village of Lang. The deceased passed away at an early hour this morning in her 76th year, after an illness extending through the past three months which her advanced years were unable to withstand. The late Mrs. Brodie was born in Scotland in 1833. When she reached her 21st year she was married and not long afterwards came to Canada with her husband settling near Keene. They had spent fifty years of their lives in Canada and for more than forty years they resided on the homestead at Lang. The family is well known throughout the county, and is held in high esteem by a large circle of friends.

Surviving members of family are the following children: Mrs. Geo. Smith of Lakehurst, Mrs. John Steele of Montana, Mrs. Thos. Graham of Otonabee, Miss Katharina at home, William of New Ontario, Joseph of Villiers, James of Strathcona, Alta and David of Lang. The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the family residence Lang to the Keene cemetery. The late Mrs. Hastie was a member of the Presbyterian church at Lang.

JUMPED AND WAS KILLED

Plug Blew Out of Engine and Fireman of Ottawa-Montreal Lost His Life.

Special to The Examiner (2.45 p.m.)

Montreal, Que., Sept. 23.—While the Canadian express from Ottawa for Montreal was running between St. Augustine and St. Scholastique last night, a plug blew out in the engine, and instantly the cab was filled with scalding steam. Edward Edwards, the fireman jumped to save his life but was killed. Engineer John Wilson, with great presence of mind, shut off the steam, and crawled out on the runing board. The engine stopped after running a mile. Edwards belonged to Ottawa.

GRAPES AT HOME FOR THE CHILDREN

Mr. Wm. Henry Has Splendid Crop of Grapes.

While the care of young children is the main object of the officers at the Children's Shelter, there is another department which is very well looked after. Some time ago reference was made to the splendid crop of cherries which the trees on the property had produced. Now it's the grape vines. Recently, Mr. Henry picked 21 baskets, and he expects the total crop will be betwen six and seven hundred baskets.

NOW COMES THE TUG OF WAR

The sad death of an Ontario government official, places the gift of an office at the disposal of the Whitney Government. There will be little difficulty in finding somebody willing to assume the responsibility of the position. In advance of the funeral obsequies, crowding, clamourous claimants were besieging with all the valour of the suffragettes, the portals of Attorney-General Foy or any other Minister held to be able to advance the interests of the applicants. These include all sorts and conditions of men, competent and incompetent, but all alike competent in that, that all urge their strenuous services to the Conservative party as an indisputable ground of preference. If the matter of efficiency governed the appointment, the choice would be rapidly narrowed down to one gentleman, whom the entire legal profession regard as eminently will fitted to successfully and satisfactorily fill the office. We shall see how the Conservative Government will live up to its claim that it is influenced in making appointments, not by the demands of the spoils system but by the interests of the public service, by the principle of the best man for the place, independently of other considerations. We shall see whether, in filling the office of County Court Clerk and Registrar of the Surrogate Court, the Whitney Goovernment will be moved by considerations of the interests of the public or the interests of the party. There is little difficulty in "betting on a sure thing," in this connection.

SPEEDY TRAVEL IN GREAT BRITAIN

The old country is not so slow as some pert over-seas Britons imagine, but speedier and much safer than on this continent. Take the matter of railway trains. The Westminster Gazette has just published its annual article on express train services, and it shows that British flyers lead the world. The fastest run is, as it was last year, the North Eastern's from Darlington to York, a distance of 44¼ miles, which is covered at the speed of 61·7 miles an hour. The Caledonian does a similar short run, Forfar to Perth, 32¼ miles, at 60·9 miles an hour; but the best company for speed, taken all round is still the Great Western. Its fastest single effort is Leamington to Earling Broadway, 100¾ miles, at 59·6 miles an hour. But its superiority is more fairly shown by the fact that if you take the mileage of its runs at 56 miles an hour it amounts to 1,919 miles. The Great Western has the longest non-stop run, Paddington to Plymouth, which is 225¾ miles and is covered at a speed of 54·6 miles an hour. The London and North-Western comes second here; by abolishing the stop at Crewe on their express run from London to Rhyl they have instituted a non-stop run of 209¾ miles, performed at a speed of 58·9 miles an hour. These achievements have been occasionally beaten by flyers on this continent which set out to break speed records but they are not matched by an equal number of regular every-day trains making their speed mentioned day in and day out. If United States or Canadian railways were to imitate as an ordinary practice the speed of British railway trains there would be terrific smashups and slaughterings such as prevail now under ordinary traffic conditions and are unknown in Great Britain where the railways have the record last year of not having killed one of the millions of passengers they carried.

INDIVIDUAL AND NATIONAL GROWTH

The following report of an interview of a Globe reporter with Mr. D. D. Mann of Mackenzie & Mann, shows what has been accomplished in the way of development and growth not only by the Canadian West, but by an individual in the short space of a generation of man.

"Thirty years ago to-day," incidentally remarked Mr. D. D. Mann, Vice-President of the C. N. R., during the course of an interview with The Globe on another matter yesterday, "I arrived in Winnipeg on a flat-boat. There was at that time not a mile of railway in Canada from the Red River to the Pacific Ocean, and the people of the western plains were importing their flour from the United Staes. The entire population of Canada westward from Winnipeg to the Pacific was not more than 100,000.

"To-day," he continued smilingly, "there are one and a quarter millions of people in that territory, and one million bushels of wheat a day are being handled on railways whose total mileage is nearly 10,000 miles. It seems wonderful that such great progress should have been made in the short space of thirty years. Canada has without doubt grown faster than did the western States of the great American Union during a like period.

"At that time, 1879," pursued the railway magnate, "I was working out a construction contract for the Canadian Pacific Railway, which was being built by Government aid out into the far west. I started my railway career by taking contracts to build stretches of line. In 1879 passengers to Winnipeg journeyed thence by boat from St. Vincent. The C. P. R. had been balasted from Emerson to St. Boniface, across the river from what is now the thriving metropolis of the Canadian middle west.

"Then in 1896, or thirteen years ago, Mr. William Mackenzie and myself secured a short strip of line west of Winnipeg, and today we have 3,000 miles of steam road in the western provinces alone. Yesterday our cars handled 412,000 bushels of wheat."

THE RAPID ST. LAWRENCE ROUTE

New York is troubled about the threatened if not effected supremacy of Montreal as a shipping port of the products of the middle West, of the United States and the west of Canada. Not only in this respect but in the matter of shortness of route between Great Britain and this continent the Canadian route demonstrates its superiority. The Montreal Herald relates a concrete example of the manner in which the general manager of the New York Central Railway was given a pesonal opportunity of observation of the superiority of the Canadian route. The Herald says:

"A dashing thing in up-to-date railroading, which demonstrates the possibilities of the St. Lawrence route, has developed under Canadian Pacific enterprise as they have never been before, was most successfully accomplished in connection with the latest trip of the Empress of Ireland.

That the Empresses, in conjunction with the C.P.R. fast expresses, could beat the New York steamers and their connecting railways so far as Chicago and the West in concerned, has long been proved, but it remained until yesterday morning to show that they could beat even New York itself under special circumstances.

Among the passengers by the Empress of Ireland on this trip was Mr. A. H. Smith, vice-president and general manger of the New York Central Railway. He came up here by the first Empress special, which reached Windsor Station at 2.20 a.m. A New York Central special train was waiting in the Windsor Station to convey its chief to the United States Metropolis, which he reached after one of the fastest runs on record early in afternoon. He was thus able to get to New York within a week of leaving Liverpool, journeying by the St. Lawrence route.

The sailings of the New York steamers are so fixed that he could not by any of the ocean greyhounds of the route have gone there before Saturday. Mr. Smith saved a day and was able to keep a most important appointment in New York Friday, which would otherwise have lapsed.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is shown that a duke can be a duffer of exceedingly small soul. The Duke of Buccleuch has withdrawn his annual subscription of $5 to the Buccleuch Football Club. The Duke of Bedford will no longer give his tenants an annual tea. The Earl of Derby has cancelled his yearly donation of a guinea to the Cheshire Fair. These men are condemning themselves and not the budget which is their excuse for these ridiculous retrenchments. They wish to make it appear that the tax on land values proposed by Lloyd George's budget is so oppressive that they are compelled to economize. These dukes are but a type of thousands of others who enjoy exemption from bearing their fair share of taxation on the lands they monopolize, enjoying the benefits of the unearned increment in value due to the industry and expenditure of others.

Is it not a little inconsistent in staunch journalistic advocates of temperance to extol the merits of the Canadian Club?

The British House of Lords regard the Lloyd-George budget as a thing utterly without precedent. If they stick to precedent they will remember that the rejection of a budget by the peers has also no precedent.

The Lloyd-George budget represents the forces of progress; the opposition to it the forces of reaction.

Every reform proposed in Great Britain during the past thousand years has been denounced by the interests effected adversely in the popular interest, as revolutionary and leading to national destruction. Yet by these reforms Britain has become the mother of parliaments, the mightiest civilising and enlightning influence known to human history.

WHICH SHALL IT BE?

(Weekly Sun)

Let us not in this discussion on Canadian relations with the Empire, forget the fact that there are two Britains. One is represented by men like Lord Beresford and is calling for a navy large enough to dominate every sea; the other, represented by Lloyd-George, and those who hold like views, is endeavoring to maintain a spirit of good neighborhood with other nations, and to apply the national resources to the removal of domestic ills.

Between these two forces there is irreconcilable conflict. The ideals of both cannot be carried out. If navies and armies are to be increased to the extent demanded by those clamouring for more armaments to be used abroad, there will be no money left for better sanitation in cities, for expansion in education, and for other reforms at home. If the minds of the masses are to be centered on reduction of intemperance, on the more even distribution of taxation, and on social betterment generally, there will not be enough energy left to swell the the ranks of the army and to increase the ships of the navy.

NOT PARALLEL CASES

The Motreal Gazette prints the following:

It is alleged as an offence that the power companies of Niagara Falls are exporting more electric current than they sell in Canada. The cheese makers all over the country are also sending abroad more of their product than is used at home. Is their conduct also a crime?

The cases compared are not at all parallel. The export of cheese does not furnish a weapon to outsiders to smite ourselves in the matter of industrial production. Cheese shipped abroad is a finished product, an end. Canadian electricity shipped abroad is a means to an end and that end the crippling of Canadian industry by subvention of the rivalry of our most formidable competitors. Aside from its furnishing a scourge to lash our backs the shipping to the United States of our electric energy is unobjectionable so long as a sufficient supply remains to meet the wants of this country. When the supply of that want is threatened, the action taken in regard to the export of Canaadian natural gas can easily as in the matter of saw logs and pulp wood be applied. In the matter of power as in the matter of saw logs and pulp wood the Canadian pplicy should be to give this country the greatest possible benefit from the lavishly bestowed resources with which Divine Providence has endowed us.

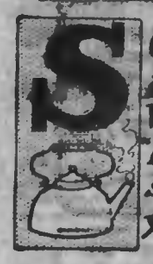
Some reasons Why "Pandora" should be in your kitchen



Pandora range would look well in your kitchen—it's so handsome.

Its perfectly-ventilated steel oven would bake the bread and roast the beef better than your ordinary oven does.

Its special flue construction would save you fuel.

Its large ash-pan would save you carrying out ashes so frequently.

Its enameled steel reservoir would be handy at preserving time.

Its emery rod attachment would enable you to sharpen all your dull knives.

But the McClary agent would like to tell you several other reasons. Just give him a chance. 21

ICE-BREAKER IN TROUBLE.

Sailors of Earl Grey Report Steamer's Bad Plight.

St. John's, Nfld., Sept. 23.—A tale of suffering and danger was related yesterday by the crew of a boat which left the new Canadian ice-breaker Earl Grey, to attempt to obtain coal and provisions on the bleak Newfoundland coast, when the vessel's supply was nearly exhausted.

A number of the crew manned a boat and rowed fifteen miles to Bay Deverde, where they obtained two and a half tons of coal in sacks and some provisions, and after telegraphing to St. John's a report of their vessel's plight, they started to return.

Meanwhile a severe storm had arisen and the seas became so high that the boat nearly swamped. Finally, it became necessary for the men to jettison the coal to escape foundering. The mast and sail of the boat next went by the board.

The men were adrift all night and at daylight were picked up by a passing schooner. In boarding the schooner one of the seamen was badly crushed, while another had his arm broken. The men were landed at Carbonear, whence they were conveyed here. Tugs were sent out from this city and brought in the disabled steamer Sunday night.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—London cables for cattle are higher, at 12c to 14c per lb. for Canadian steers, dressed weight. refrigerator beef is quoted at 11¼c to 11½c per lb.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Sept. 22.—(Special.)—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market this morning the offerings consisted of 1300 cattle, 250 sheep, 350 lambs, 650 hogs and 200 calves. Owing to the continued liberal supplies of cattle coming forward, an easy feeling prevails in the market and prices have a downward tendency, they being ¼c per pound lower than on Monday. Owing to the fine weather there was a large gathering of buyers and as they all wanted a few cattle, an active trade was done. A feature of the day's trading was the very good demand from packers and canners, and about 800 head were bought for this purpose. $2.50 to $2.90 for bulls and $1.50 to $1.65 for cows per cwt. Choice steers sold at 5c; good, at 4¾c to 4¾c; fair, at 3½c to 4c; good cows, at 4c to 4½c; common, at 2½c to 3½c, and bulls, at 2½c to 3¼c per lb.

Supplies of sheep and lambs were very large and in consequence the undertone to the market was easier, but prices showed no actual change, as compared with Monday's figures. A feature of the trade was the demand from American buyers for lambs, and several car loads were bought for shipment to New York. The impression is that if this demand continues for any length of time prices will very soon be affected. There was also a good demand from local buyers and on the whole an active trade was done. Sheep sold at 3½c and lambs at 5¼c per lb. Calves were in good demand, of which the offerings were small and prices ruled high at from $ to $15 each, as to size and quality. There was no change in the condition of the market for hogs, prices being steady under a good demand and sales of selected lots were made at $9 to $9.25 and mixed lots at $8.50 per cwt., weighed off cars.

End of Universe To-morrow.

Providence, R.I., Sept. 23.—True to their belief that a great upheaval is about to occur, whereby the top crust of the earth will peel off, carrying the wicked to destruction and leaving the "elect" in undisputed possession of the world, several Rhode Island families belonging to the sect known as the Latter Reign of the Apostolic Church, have gone to Duxbury, Mass., an appointed place, to wait for the cataclysm on Friday at 10 a.m.

Railway Officials Summoned.

Cincinnati, Sept. 23.—Subpoenaes commanding the presence of about 20 leading officials of several railroads, before the Federal grand jury here, the first week in October, have been issued. Those ordered to appear are ordered to bring with them certain papers.

Former Official Sentenced.

Buffalo, N.Y., Sept. 23.—Jared C. Wood, former cashier in the county treasurer's office, who pleaded guilty to grand larceny in the second degree, was sentenced to not less than two and a half years nor more than five years in Auburn Prison.

Burglars at Stevensville.

Stevensville, Ont., Sept. 23.—Robbers early yesterday morning broke into the postoffice, M.C.D. depot, Detenbeck's store and in Robinson's store. They secured nothing from the stores, but at the depot four dollars were taken from the till. A letter torn and a few packages missing is the extent of the loss at the postoffice.

Duel With Sabres.

Havana, Sept. 23.—A desperate duel with cavalry sabres was fought yesterday afternoon in the parlor of a private residence in Havana, between Major-General Enrique Lovnaz del Castillo, a former Congressman, and Wilfride Fernandez, editor of El Commercio. The general was seriously wounded in the sword arm.

Arrested on Nasty Charge.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Sept. 23.—Leo Fulford, alias John Dowling of Montreal and Steve Nolan of Ottawa, Ont. were arrested here yesterday charged with selling girls from Canada into white slavery. Two girls from Ottawa, Emma Kerwind and Agnes Mannion, were held as witnesses.

Asphyxiated on Honeymoon.

Albany, N.Y., Sept. 23.—En route from Farmington, Conn., to Ballstone N.Y., Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Petchar were found dead yesterday in a room of a boarding-house, having been asphyxiated, after a four days' honeymoon.

Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Summer Complaint, Stomach Cramps, Colic, Cholera Morbus, Cholera Infantum, and all Looseness of the Bowels

MAY BE RAPIDLY AND EFFECTUALLY CURED BY THE USE OF THAT OLD AND STERLING REMEDY

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry

It has a reputation of 65 years' standing and never fails to either relieve or cure.

There are many imitations of this remedy on the market that sell for less per bottle. Dr. Fowler's is 35 cents, so be sure and get the genuine. The cheaper articles may be dangerous to your health.

SUMMER COMPLAINT AND DIARRHŒA

Mrs. George Phillips, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., writes: "My baby one year old took the Summer Complaint, and was so bad as to pass blood. I got a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and only had to give a few doses before my baby was cured. My husband had diarrhœa and three doses cured him. I have used it in my family for over three years with great results and feel safe in recommending it to everyone for all kinds of Summer Complaints."

PONSO

Proves Its Worth Before You Pay One Cent

Ponso is so positive in its health-restoring powers that we can afford to prove its worth before you pay out one penny, by giving you absolutely free a full size 50c bottle if you have never tried it before.

We have given away thousands of bottles of Ponso in this way solely to let the public know exactly what it will do before we ask them to buy it. It has proven the best means of advertising the remarkable merits of Ponso we could possibly adopt because it has won the confidence of those who have tried it—has convinced them there is nothing like it and they have gladly, freely, gratefully told their friends how Ponso has restored them to health.

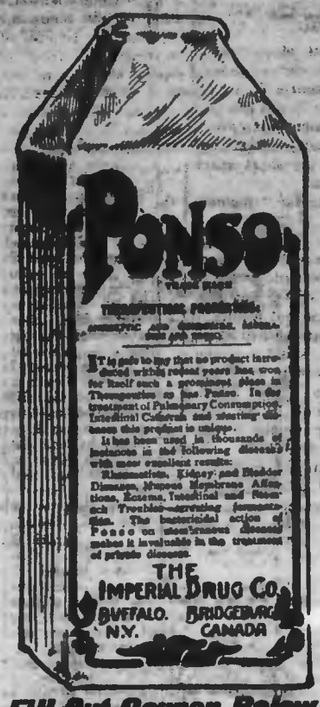
Here is a letter similar to the thousands we get. It shows what the trial bottle did—how it was the means of producing prompt relief and furnishes a remedy that can be relied upon in future illness.

Orange Hill, St. Jos., Barbadoes, W. I., March 31, '09.

The Imperial Drug Co.,
Bridgeburg, Ont., Can.

Gentlemen:—I beg to thank you very much for the trial bottle of Ponso, which was duly received and taken. Two one bottles in itself was effective. When I began taking it I was suffering from a cold which made me cough very much. I took Ponso on retiring at night and next day the cough was gone. I have recommended it to some of my friends who have promised to give it a trial. I feel very much pleased with it and will make it my medicine.

Yours truly,
OLIVER WALCOTT.



A Tonic-Germicide Tones the System —Kills the Germs—

The reason Ponso is so much more successful in curing the many complaints for which it is recommended than any other remedy is simply because it destroys the cause.

It kills the germs—and germs are the cause of nearly all diseases. It goes to the root of the trouble—removes the cause and then its tonic influence starts right in building up the waste and aiding nature to dispel the poison.

You can feel its vitalizing, no rushing influence tingle through your system almost with the first two or three doses, and in a few days a new, hopeful, encouraging condition will result. Your appetite will return, your eyes will brighten, your step quicken and you will begin to realize that Ponso is the most wonderful health-restorative you ever used or heard of.

It will rid the germ-laden blood of all impurity—increase the red corpuscles in the blood—put strength into your tissues and muscles—clear your head of that dull, heavy feeling—aid your stomach to get more power out of your food—correct the sluggish, torpid liver—regulate the bowels and put you on a firm healthy basis.

Remember, we prove Ponso will help you by giving you a 50c bottle free to try. Fill out the coupon below and mail it today. Do it now.

C.M.A. Not United.

Montreal, Sept. 23.—John Hendry, of Vancouver, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, arrived last night and says the matter of asking the Dominion Government to take the tariff completely out of politics and hand the question over to a commission, has not yet been completely threshed out.

Some, he stated, were in favor of the project, while others believed it would not be beneficial to the country; hence the necessity of going slowly.

Mr. Hendry believed, however, that if the association arrived at the conclusion that the change would be beneficial, the Government would carry out their wishes.

Three Men Guillotined.

Valence Drome, France, Sept. 23.—A triple execution by guillotine took place in this city at daylight yesterday. Three men were decapitated for a series of atrocious crimes in the department of Drome, which created a reign of terror.

No less than 12 murders and 200 robberies are laid to the doors of these men. They often tortured their victims with red-hot irons.

A great crowd witnessed the executions and applauded wildly every time the knife fell.

Canadians on International.

Ottawa, Sept. 23.—Dr. J. C. Rutherford, the chief Dominion veterinarian, has returned from Chicago, where he attended the American Veterinary Association meeting. He has been chosen a member of the international board for the eradication of bovine tuberculosis. The other Canadians on the board are: Senator Edwards, Ottawa; Dr. Hodgetts and J. W. Flavelle, Toronto, and Prof. Torrance, Winnipeg.

Poisoned by Toadstools.

St. Catharines, Sept. 23.—Mrs. Theodore F. Swayze, wife of N. S. and T. R. Conductor Swayze, died very suddenly under peculiar circumstances. Some years ago she was poisoned by eating toadstools in mistake for mushrooms. When taken ill this time the effects of the poisoning came back and terminated fatally. She was in her fifty-second year.

Major Nutt Dead.

Boston, Sept. 23.—Rodins Nutt, the last male survivor of the late P. T. Barnum's famous midget troupe, died at his home in Dorchester yesterday, at the age of 69 years. Since retiring, 9 years ago, "Major" Nutt, as he was known, conducted a successful real estate business.

PUBLIC AHEAD.

Four Favorites Romp In at Woodbine Track.

Toronto, Sept. 23.—Four favorites and three second choices all well backed, cleaned up the card yesterday at Woodbine Park, and the public must have finished a lot ahead of the layers. The weather was threatening, but the rain held off, not even sprinkling, and there was the usual attendance of members and regulars.

COUNCIL IN SESSION UNTIL AFTER MIDNIGHT CLEAN THE CIVIC SLATE

Isolation Hospital to be Built This Year—Offer Made for Burleigh Power — Citizens Will Decide Whether They Favour the Ward System of Voting or Not.

LEASE TO THE CANOE CO.

The City Council had probably the busiest session of the present term last night, when a number of questions which are considered among the most important dealt with this year, were disposed of. It was originally a special meeting to discuss for the last time the proposed franchise with the Peterboro Light & Power Co., but other matters were brought up, and at half past twelve the civic slate had been almost entirely cleared.

Over two hours were spent in threshing out the final details of the agreement with the Power Co. The various clauses were arranged satisfactorily except in regard to the day on which the by-law should be presented to the people. The company weer desirous of submitting it as soon as possible and offered to bear the expense entailed therein, besides sending a post card to each ratepayer notifying him or her where to vote. The clause dealing with the rates for small power users brought a vigorous objection from Ald. Duffus. Those using motors up to 4 horse power have the option of taking a flat rate of 7c. per kilowatt hour. The meter rate $40 a h.p. or of using the meter at was too high Ald. Duffus claimed. and Ald. Hicks supported his contention, but the Council stood by the agreement.

Aldermen Morgan and Duncan took exception to the clause stating that the company shall sell the power that is developed in the city for manufacturing purposes at $20 per h.p. They wanted all power developed within a radius of 25 miles, sold at $20 a h.p. for manufacturing purposes, but were defeated 4-6.

The clause was afterwards amended to read that the company must reserve 2,000 h.p. for manufacturing purposes other than what is used by the Quaker Oats Co.

Settling Disputes

Aldermen Morgan and Duncan moved that all matters in dispute between the city and company in future, be submitted to the Hydro-Electric Commission or the Municipal Railway Board at the city's option. The company refused to consider the Hydro-Electric Commission on the grounds that they considered that body was prejudiced against power companies. They agreed to allow disputes to be settled by the Municipal Board or by an arbitration board appointed under the Arbitration Act. This was accepted after a lengthy debate.

At the suggestion of Ald. Hicks, a clause was inserted to the effect that the company must sign the agreement before it is submitted to the people. Mr. Larmonth said the company had intended doing so.

Then followed the final struggle on the time of submitting the by-law. Those favoring January were successful, so that the matter is now practically settled, after nearly six months' labor until the people vote on it. The franchise is for 30 years.

This agreement has given the Manufacturers' Committee a great deal of work, and Ald. Gillespie, as chairman, has called meeting after meeting in an endeavour to protect the city's interests in formulating the clauses. He has been given splendid encouragement by the members of the committee.

The absentee Aldermen last night were Ald. Phelan and Bradburn.

Smith St. Bridge

Mr. Ed. Conroy, representing Messrs. E. and F. Conroy, addressed Council in connection with the Smith St. bridge contract. He maintained he should be allowed something in face of the increase in the price of cement since he put in his tender. The increase is at least 30c. a barrel. It is a matter beyond his control and he is willing to bear one-third of the loss and the city put up two-thirds. The increase will amount to $870 so that the city's share would be $520.

The Council, however, intimated that it could not see its way clear to grant an increase in Mr. Conroy's tender.

Got Lease of Land

The Peterborough Canoe Co. were granted the lease of a part of the city property behind their premises on which they can pile lumber and erect a new building, which they say they have badly needed owing to the growth of their business.

The Manufacturers' Committee reported to the Council as follows in regard to the lease:—

Your Committee begs leave to report, that in regard to the request of the Peterborough Canoe Company for a fixed assessment, and a lease of land north of King St. between their property and the C. P. R. spur line.

That it cannot recommend the granting of a fixed assessment.

That it recommends that a by-law be passed, requesting the Peterborough City Trusts Commission to grant a lease to the company, subject to determination by either party by giving one year's notice in writing, of that part of the river front lying north of King St. and extending as far north as a line drawn parallel to King St., and at a distance of one hundred feet northerly from the northern limit of the company's land, to the Canadian Pacific spur line, but reserving the right of way over the easterly forty feet thereof, adjoining the railway line, at a rental of one dollar per year and taxes. The said company to have the right to remove any buildings erected by them upon the said lands, at any time before the expiry of such lease.

That all the expenses that may be necessary to obtain a description of the property to be leased or used by the company, shall be borne by the company.

The report was adopted.

It is understod that the company will begin at once to erect the building they require.

Hospital This Year

When the Property Committee prepared their report for the Council regarding the Isolation Hospital, it is safe to say that not one of the four or five members thought that the main body would take up the work at once and expedite the erection. Yet that was one of the surprises sprung last night, and tenders will be advertised for at once for a building, the total cost of which will be $15,000.

When the Property Committee's report was read to the Council recommending that the isolation hospital question be put to a vote of the people, Ald. Morrow moved and Ald. Duncan seconded, that the report be so amended to read that the Property Committee be instructed to advertise for tenders and that the work be gone on with at once.

Ald. Hicks stated that he though the Property Committee had adopted a very wise course. He admitted that an isolation hospital was badly needed, but he thought that the patients could be well looked after by erecting one or two buildings and on a much more modest scale. He pointed out that since 1894 the city's debenture debt had increased over a hundred per cent. while the assessment had increased only fifty-nine per cent. He thought the city was issuing debentures for altogether too small sums. At this time, the Council has an opportunity to consult the people, and if they are satisfied to spend $15,000 for that purpose, all right.

Ald. Hicks also pointed out that the Council this year has done considerable work without consulting the people. For instance a new public library is being built which will cost the city at least $3,000 a year. Then the people were not consulted in connection with the Board of Education's $10,000.

Ald. Duffus said that if the people turned the by-law down the Council would simply have to build the hospital anyway next year.

Ald. Morrow agreed largely with Ald. Hicks' statement but he thought that a building such as is proposed, should be erected by debentures.

Aldermen Metherall, Gillespie and Duncan all favoured the building of the hospital this year.

Ald. Morrow's motion was then voted on and it was carried by a vote of seven to three.

An Offer for Burleigh

Ald. Hicks re-introduced the Burleigh Falls Power question, and said that he thought the city should show the Central Ontario Power Company that "we mean business." He said that the company in a letter to the Council offered to deliver power to the city at $11.60.

He favoured the city accepting the offer and to take all their power at that price developed at the minimum flow of the river.

He moved that the city clerk write the company stating that city would accept their power at their offer of $11.60, and to ask them if they were prepared to enter into such an agreement with the city and that the city have the option of purchasing the Burleigh Falls property. Ald. Duncan seconded the motion.—Carried.

Some time ago the company said power could be delivered in Peterborough at $17.60 a h.p. and Ald. Hicks advised calling their hand on that. They replied that the city could develop and transmit it at price but for certain reasons a company could not. Ald. Hicks has raised the offer $4.00.

One of the last matters brought up was the question of the ward system of voting. It was after the midnight hour when Ald. Morgan said he had a matter which he wanted to speak about. The election of Aldermen, a certain number from each ward had been considered last year but no action had been taken and he did not wish it to be again left over. It was moved by Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Buller that a by-law be submitted in January to the ratepayers authorising the re-institution of the ward system of electing the aldermen.

WHAT THE COUNCIL DID

At last night's meeting of the Council the following business was transacted.

Authorized the Property Committee to call for tenders for Isolation Hospital and to proceed with the erection.

Decided to accept offer of the Central Ontario Power Co., to supply power to the city from Burleigh Falls at $11.60 a horse power.

Decided to put by-law before the people next January, whereby they will decide whether they are in favour of adopting the ward system of voting.

Leased parcel of City property to the Peterborough Canoe Co., under certain conditions.

Did not take action re Conroy Bros.' request that provision be made in their Smith Street Bridge contract price for increased cost of Cement.

Decided to present to ratepayers next January a by-law regarding 30 year franchise for Peterborough Light and Power Co.,

DISCRIMINATING LADIES.

Enjoy Using Herpicide on Account of its Distinctiveness.

The ladies who have used Newbro's Herpicide speak of it in the highest terms, for its quick effect in cleansing the scalp of dandruff and also for its excellence as a general hair-dressing. It makes the scaly feel fresh and it allays that itching which dandruff will cause. Newbro's Herpicide effectively cures dandruff, as it destroys the germ that causes it. The same germ causes hair to fall out, and later baldness; in killing it, Herpicide stops falling hair and prevents baldness. It is also an ideal hair dressing, for it lends an aristocratic charm to the hair that is quite distinctive. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.

Sold by Jury & McDermid, Druggists; also Payne's Drug Store. One dollar bottles guaranteed.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

THE GAY MUSICIAN

John P. Slocum's well mounted production of Julian Edwards' highly successful comic opera, "The Gay Musician," was the attraction that drew a very large crowd to the Grand Opera House last evening and the humour of the lines and timeful nature of the music coupled with the splendid singing strength of the company resulted in a very satisfied audience if one could judge from the volleys of applause which swept through the house at frequent intervals. All in all it was a very pleasing production with clever principals with a chorus that could sing as well as look pretty and become a handsome set of costumes The scenic investure was good, in fact no detail that would add to the effectiveness of the presentation was neglected. "The Gay Musician," is a comic opera, therefore the plot is not distinguished by its deepness. The theory is woven around the adventures of Eugene Dubois, an mbitious young composer who becomes infatuated with the prima donna who is to appear in the leading role of his opera and a quarrel with his wife is the inevitable result and divorce follows. Eugene is about to be married to his song bird when her father arrives with the lady that is to become his bride and to the chagrin of all concerned except the lively father who has not inside information on the case, she turns out to be Marie, Eugene's divorced wife. The situation is very funny and is made more so when Eugene and Marie agree to try it all over again and the prima donna marries her manager while "papa" is left on the shelf.

Considerable comedy is derived by the introduction of two funny characters, Matilda Yager, an ex-circus rider with a strong inclination towards a German accent and, Capt. George Fish, a retired sea captain who had been her lover in the days gone by.

All the principal roles were in good hands, Harry Benham in the title role and Francis Lee as the prima donna doing especially clever work. Margaret Crawford as the German mother-in-law was responsible for a large part of the laughter that was a constant echo to the performance and Roger Gray as the theatrical manager threw life and ginger into his part. Freda Klingel demonstrated that she was a very clever dancer as well as the possessor of a sweet voice. The large chorus was prettily gowned and sang splendidly.

The opera abounds with tuneful music, the hit undoubtedly, the pretty waltz melody "Lovelight" which runs through the production. A topical song by the theatrical manager, "A bad, bad man," made a lot of funny verses and a catchy chorus that ran something like this:

He's a bad, bad man, a very bad man,
He looks like a saint, but like a sinner he'll plan.
He raises old Nick every time that he can.
He's a very, very, very bad, bad man.

Other successful numbers, were "My Dashing Soldier Boy," "A Cup of Tea," "I Want to be Your Blue Eyed Baby Boy," and "The Saucy Sparrow."

"The Gay Musician," cannot fail to please wherever it may be seen and certainly made a good impression upon Peterborough people. Messrs. Turner & Sons are to be congratulated upon their enterprise in securing such a high-class attraction.

THE DEATH OF MR. JOHN KINCAID

Prominent Citizen Passed Away at His Home This Morning.

One of the best known and most highly respected residents of Peterborough passed away at 8 o'clock this morning at his home, 558 Harvey St., in the person of Mr. John Kincard. He had been ailing for the past year having never recovered from an operation. He was seventy-four years of age. He was born in Donegal, Ireland, but came to Canada when quite young and but for an interval of six years when he lived in Omemee he had resided practically all his life in this city. For many years he was a successful contractor. Later he was appointed assessor which office he held for some time. During the two years of the construction of the Collegiate Institute he was inspector. He was a man of retiring disposition but one who won universal respect and esteem. The news of his death will be learned with deep regret. In politics he was a staunch Liberal.

His wife and two daughters and one son are left to mourn his loss. The daughters are Mrs. T. H. Hamilton, of Toronto, and Miss Clara at home, and son is Mr. W. A. Kincaird, of Butte, Montana.

The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock to the Little Lake cemetery.

Addresses Delivered At The Annual Meeting Of Bible Society

The seventy-second annual meeting of the Bible Society was held in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church last night, when a very large congregation assembled. The meeting was a very interesting one and the choir contributed much to the brightness and success of the meeting. Rev. W. G. Henderson conducted the devotional exercises, being assisted by Rev. H. J. Keith. Sheriff Hall, the president, took the chair and after an appropriate and complimentary reference to the important worth of the Society, he called upon Rev. E. A. Pearson, who gave a most interesting address on the value of the Scriptures in the development of character. There were many difficulties and problems confronting those who disseminated the Word of God, but there was triumph everywhere. In an age of doubt or rather of the testing of Scripture it had overcome all forms of opposition, and was more widely known to-day than ever before.

Rev. Canon Davidson dealt with the practical use of the Bible. The speaker deprecated the tendency of persons in many quarters to be satisfied with the possession of the Bible without the study of it.

Rev. R. Pogue spoke of the Bible under three heads, first, the estimate men have of the Bible. He spoke of Abraham Lincoln, a man whose entire reading centred round the teaching of the Bible. It was the best gift God had igven to man. Daniel Webster declared it to be the secret of the country's prosperity. He referred to Ruskin's affection for his mother as due to her devotion in making him read the Bible.

Secondly, Rev. Mr. Pogue pointed out what the Bible had done for those who have accepted its teaching. He cited as examples the Zulus and the dwellers in Greenland. Robt. Moffat in South Africa and the lives of St. Paul and St. John and their followers. Thirdly, he said that people should read the Bible more than they did. The contents of the Bible should be known more and more.

Rev. J. R. Webb, spoke of the duty of the hour. The great call was to do more than ever had been done. He had been told by an official of this city of a man whose wife had died and who in going to the West took his wife's Bible.

Because he loved his wife and loved her Bible he kept it bound up with tape and for a whole year never looked within its pages. After all that had been said by the speakers he would urge that those present look closely into the great value of the work to which they referred. Mr. Webb spoke most eloquently, referred to the high ideals of the Society and urged all present to give their best and not their worst coin to their noble enterprise.

The meeting closed with a hymn and the benediction.

Reference To Peterborough In The Barnardo Home Monthly

Mr. Wm. Hind Smith, jr., one of the members of the Council of Dr. Barnardo's Homes has written an entertaining article in the September number of "Ups and Downs," which is published particularly for Barnardo Home children, in which reference is made to Peterborough. His first trip to Canada was made last May when the Examiner gave an account of his arrival with a party of boys and girls, the latter of whom came to the Margaret Cox Home for Girls. The reference to this visit to Peterborough is as follows:

At 8.45 a.m., on Saturday, May 29th, the ninety-and-nine girls and myself—who might be described as more or less of an outside sheep—were detraining at Peterborough, where we received a cordial welcome from Miss Kennedy and her staff, including Miss Kathleen Owen. The boys with Mr. Owen proceeded to Toronto some two hours farther west.

Some rather quaint-looking waggonettes, quickly conveyed our happy little maids up to "Hazel Brae," (now officially known as "The Margaret Cox Home") for a much-needed wash-up, rest and meals. What a choice spot this delightfully situated home occupies! High up on a hill, outside one of the prettiest, cleanest towns I ever saw, especially in its residential quarters. Peterborough boasts some 16,000 inhabitants, and has a swiftly flowing river, the Otonabee, running through it, upon the banks of which are some important factories.

The Sunday following was a quiet, happy day. Most of our young "Corsicans" and the girls in residence at "Hazel Brae" bore down upon George Street Methodist Church in a long "crocodile," where they were allotted prominent seats in the gallery and the "mere man" in their midst. After the Doxology had been sung (in which we all very heartily joined), the Minister, Mr. Pearson, extended a welcome to us early in the service following a prayer of thanksgiving for travelling mercies, and he then proceeded to eulogize the work of the beloved Founder of the Homes, and spoke of the Barnardo girls as "matching any in the Dominion," and judging by the appearance of this party, he thought they were in no was behind previous ones. The Scripture portion was specially chosen—S.. Matt. xxv., verses 31 to the end—and the hymn, "Sweet is the Sunshine after Rain," found an echo in many hearts. We new-comers were a little startled by the ladies in the choir in their black gowns and hatless, and we had another shock when a lady proceeded to occupy the pulpit. She proved to be a devoted deaconess from Toronto, who gave us an inspiring account of her work in the poorer parts of the City, and must have set some of our girls longing to be equally useful some day. Her story of a little lad at a Sunday school treat showed us that Canadian and English boys are much alike, at any rate internally. When pressed to have a bit more after an ample tea, he said, "No more thanks, but say, that was swell!"—a very apt term, no doubt. At the close of the service Mr. Pearson shook hands with every girl as we filed out. Under the firs we gathered in the afternoon for a happy little service, all the newly arrived party as well as the house girls and a dozen old girls out in service in Peterborough. Some of these girls come up every Sunday to the Bible class and remain to tea. I joined them, and many and varied were the experiences related and reminiscences recalled of happy days spent at the Barkingside Village or when boarded-out in England. All seemed very happy with their lot, and well they might be, whilst it was astonishing to an onlooker to notice how very soon these girls tumble to the ways and customs of the country, even to the peculiar accent assumed by Canadians. The snap-shot of the good-bye scene in the meadows, as I came away from "Hazel-Brae" on Monday afternoon, conveys an idea of the pleasant surroundings with the familiar maple tree in the centre.

LAID TO REST

Funeral of Late Mr. John Moloney Was Held This Morning.

The funeral of the late Mr. John Moloney left the family residence, Brock St., this morning at nine o'clock and proceeded to St. Peter's Cathedral, where a requiem mass was sung by Rev. Father McColl. At its conclusion the funeral continued to St. Peter's cemetery, where the remains were interred in the family plot. The esteem in which the late Mr. Moloney was held was manifested by the large number of friends who were present. The Knights of Columbus, of which society he was a member, were represented and the members of the Legal Association walked from the house to the church. The pall bearers were Mr. L. M. Hayes, K.C., Dr. E. McGrath, Hon. J. R. Stratton, M.P., Mr. J. C. Sullivan, Mr. B. Morrow and Mr. W. Jonston. The floral tokens were numerous and beautiful, among them being a cross on a pedestal and a handsome wreath from the Legal Association.

THE BEST HERITAGE

Good health is one of the first requisites to success. Prolonged application to any subject cannot be sustained without well fed nerves.

If nervous energy could be secured by a large cash payment, every person would make a big effort to find the money.

By reason of well directed study, assisted by practical experience, a way has been found to supply energy to jaded and overwrought nerves, without its costing a fortune.

Pure fresh air, exercise, and eating the simplest foods will produce this desired result.

Among foods for human consumption none contain the necessary elements to sustain life in greater quantities than milk and wheat.

Orange Meat which is made from the whole wheat, thoroughly steam cooked, malted, flaked and toasted, contains the necessary elements to sustain life in greater proportions than any other cereal.

ORANGE MEAT and milk is a perfect food.

SAID FAREWELL TO MR. HADDOW
